Earnest Lenz has the contract to put up the ice for the creamery.

Miss Mattie Hubbard spent her vacation in Garner with her sister, returning Saturday.

G. L. Barthelomew complied with the law, and is now a Justice of the Peace. Take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

Mrs. Henry was taken very ill Friday, and for two and one-half hours, she lay between life and death. Afterwards she recovered rapidly.

Notice.—All parties owing me on account, please call and settle up, we must have money.

Geo. Kluckhohn.

Emma Terhufen started for school Monday morning and had gone but a short distance when she missed her gold watch. She turned back, a hunt was instituted and with a broom to sweep the snow, it was found in front of Henry Lau's.

Miss Louise Becker and Mr. Peter Josten were united in marriage Tuesday at 11 o'clock, in the German Reform church. Rev. Gaterman officiating. The conrtacting parties are both well known and highly respected. The TIMES extends congratulations and wishes them much joy and happyness.

Will Eiserman left for his home in Galena, Ill. Tuesday. Will has been very steady in the bank, in consequence of which his health has been impaired, and of course, he thought of home and mother. We are sorry to loose such an all around, good, young man from our midst. Fred Arnold takes his place in the bank.

The shooting match here New Years was well patronized by all our local sports. About 50 ducks were won, which were fairly well distributed among the participants. Shot guns were used for clay pigeons, and rifles for the target. The shooting afforded considerable amusement for a large number of spectators, beside being a Gala day for sports. Chris Lau could not be convinced by argument, but after shooting a Match for a V with Wm. Lau he had nothing more to say.

The Klemme Creamery Co., held their annual election of officers Saturday. Tnere is no change except in two directors, Wm. Lau and Ed Haskell retire, and Wm. Becker and Fred Haupt were elected in their place. The company has had a profitable year; they have shipped over $11.000, of butter and have a net surplusin the treasury of over $250. The business of the creamery this year has been more than double what it ever was before. Nels Palmer their efficient butter maker has been engaged for another year. Nels is a good man for the company, a good sociable fellow, and we are pleased to learn of his engagement for another year.

MARVELOUS RESULTS.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junct. she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing which would last for hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr, King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at J. L. Harr's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

Curiosity is the main motive power that keeps the world moving.

There are plenty of individuals on earth who imagine that rudeness is funny.

The man who nurses grievances is generally of but little use for other purposes.

It's a poor stick of a man who cannot furnish an excuse for doing what pleases him.

One difference of opinion between a man and a gun is that you can generally tell when the former is loaded.

There is a certain look of crudeness attached to the appearance of the bachelor that seems to increase with years.

When a man is particular to impress on the world that he is satisfied, you can rest assured that he has several secret sore spots.

The world is always ready to hold that you ought to have known better, and add at the same time that you always were foolish.

The wheat area of the Argentine Republic had come up from 600,000 acres in 1883 to 5,000,000 in 1893, and to something like 6,000,000 acres a year later, while its exports of surplus wheat had risen from an average of 2,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels a year. Since 1880 the capacity of Russia to export wheat has grown at least 40 per cent, and it is still growing. The quantity exported in 1893 was 90,000,000, in 1894 116,000,000, and in 1895 130,000,000 bushels. But, in spite of this, there is a shortage in the world's crops of this year, variously estimated at from 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 bushels.

At the Hotel Alcazar, St. Augustine, Fla., a letter was received the other day which has been constantly on the go since the middle of last July, when it arrived under a foreign postmark at the Grand hotel in New York, addressed to Catherine Wynn. The proprietor of the Grand was requested to forward it if Catherine wasn't at his hotel. He did so, and each hotel man who has received it since has also forwarded it. The Alcazar manager did likewise, and if the addressee's name is known at any of the big hotels in America she is likely to get her letter some day. It has been down the Atlantic coast and as far west as St. Louis. It has now been sent to Asheville, and will travel through the south.

The late Archbishop of Canterbury practiced in a marked degree the spirit of toleration toward those who were doing religious work in other ways than by the methods he followed. In one of his sermons he spoke of traveling with a literary man who had just returned from India. Speaking of religious dissensions, the observer of Oriental men and things remarked, "When a man has passed some years in a country where people worship cows, he comes to think comparatively little of the controversies which separate Christians." The archbishop said he had never forgotten the moral of that random saying. One important lesson from the useful life of this eminent man is that fidelity to one's principles may consort perfectly with the highest courtesy and kindness to those who bear another denominational name, but are serving the same God and Father of us all.

In the case of the Fall Brook Irrigation Company vs. Bradley, Supreme court of the United States upheld the right of a state to divide its territory into irrigation districts, and tax the property in the districts for the construction of irrigation works. The action was begun by the appellee to procure an injunction restraining the collector of the irrigation district from giving a deed to it of the premises belonging to her, based on a sale of her land made by the collector for nonpayment of a certain assessment upon the irrigation district, and to set aside such assessment, and for other relief, on the ground that the act incorporating the irrigation district was in violation of the constitution of the United States and also of the California state constitution. The Supreme court held the Wright irrigation law of California valid, overruling the decision of the Federal Circuit court for the California district. The decision does not cover the "inclusion" and "exclusion" acts, which were adopted as amendments to the main law. The decision is of importance beyond the limits of the state of California, because of the fact that other states in the semi-arid region have adopted the law in substance.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

A K. & W. WRECK.

A Bad Wreck, But Fortunately No Fatalities.

DES MOINES, Jan. 2.—A south-bound train on the Keokuk & Western road, with forty-eight passengers on board, was derailed and badly wrecked near Norwalk. The accident was caused by the track, or rather the roadbed, sliding from beneath the train, as it was speeding along at about thirty miles an hour. The mild weather of the past week had affected the roadbed to a degree that rendered it soft. The engine, baggage car, smoker and one day coach left the track and were thrown violently on their sides. It seems almost miraculous that no one was killed and but two or three were injured.

FOLEY'S FUNNY TRICK.

The Manson Merchant Who Disappeared Was a Victim of Morphine.

FORT DODGE, Jan. 3.—M. J. Foley, the Manson merchant who caused so much anxiety by his mysterious disappearance the 1st of December, has returned home. He left Sioux City for New York while under the influence of morphine. He sailed for Queenstown December 5 on the Campania, and did not regain consciousness until at sea. He returned immediately from the other side on the Teutonic, and arrived home, finding his business in a receiver's hands and his friends agonized with suspense.

SHOT PROVED FATAL.

New Sharon Man Dies From Lockjaw. Induced by Gun Wound.

NEW SHARON, Jan. 3.—W. W. Brimm, assistant cashier of the State Bank, who accidentally shot his left index finger off two weeks ago, died of a complication of blood poison and tetanus (lockjaw). A second amputation of a part of the hand had been made, but the patient became speedily worse. He was 31 years of age and was married one year ago last November. Mr. Brimm was a very popular young business man and his death has shocked the community.

C. J. FIELDS IS IN LUCK.

Six Indictments Against Him for Fraudulent Banking Dismissed.

WATERLOO, Jan. 2.—Judge Blair has dismissed, at the request of fifty leading business men of Cedar Falls, six indictments against Charles J. Fields for fraudulent banking. Seven indictments still stand, but it is believed they will also be quashed. Many of the men who asked for dismissal of the indictments were depositors in the bank when it failed. Fields is broken down in health.

MONEY WAS TOO TIGHT.

Farmers' Trust Company, of Sioux City, in Receiver's Hands.

SIOUX CITY, Dec. 31.—On application of W. T. Honsinger, vice-president and a large shareholder in the Farmers' Trust Company, of Sioux City, G. H. Hollister has been appointed receiver for the institution. Tightness of the money market made it impossible for the company to meet its debentures. Receiver Hollister estimates assets of $238,000 and liabilities $135,000.

Stockman Killed by a Train.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Dec. 31.—A man named Wychoff, a stock buyer, whose home is supposed to be at Livingston, S. D., was killed on the Chicago & Northwestern near Mechanicsville. A fast freight had stopped for water about a mile east of Mechanicsville. Wychoff, who was accompanying a car of stock east, got out to punch them up and in some manner fell between the cars just as the train was pulling out. Both legs were cut off. The train was stopped and the injured man taken back to Mechanicsville, where he died.

Two Men Held for Murder.

OTTUMWA, Dec. 31.—The preliminary trial of W. M. Franklin, Butler Hazlet and Burt Hazlet, charged with the murder of Joe Wright, at Hickory, resulted in the binding over of Franklin and Butler Hazlet and the acquittal of Burt Hazlet. There was a row in front of Hickory church and Wright was killed with a stone.

Defalcation in Greene County.

JEFFERSON, Dec. 31.—The board of supervisors of Greene county find the county clerk to be $700 short in his accounts. It seems the board knew of this a year ago, when he was short some $1,200, but they gave him to the end of his term to make it up. The clerk's bondsmen have deposited the amount of the shortage.

Against Insurance Companies.

DUBUQUE, Dec. 31.—In the federal court Judge Shiras decided in favor of J. K. Deling, assignee of the insurance policy carried by the Ryan Packing Company, of Dubuque, whose plant was destroyed by fire last summer. The insurance was $35,000. The enjoining suit was entered by Thomas J. Ryan, of Chicago

TREACHEROUS FIRE.

A Pioneer Woman Very Badly Burned —Dress Catches Fire.

IOWA CITY, Jan. 1.—Mrs. William Tierney lies bed-ridden, as a result of being badly burned. She was getting breakfast ready, and in some way the flames darting from the kitchen stove ignited her dress, and she was speedily enveloped in flames. The utmost exertion was necessary to extinguish the fire, and only after herculean efforts was the flaming attire removed and the blaze extinguished. After this step toward saving her life had been accomplished, it was found that her hands, arms, legs and hips were badly burned. She was made to feel as easy as possible, but in view of her age and the extent of her burns, her condition is serious.

SIX POISONED WITH BREAD.

Used Flour Which Had Been Prepared for Rats.

CLINTON, Jan. 4.—Coal Dealer M. I. Mead, of Lyons, together with his wife, three children and the hired girl, were poisoned by eating bread containing phosphorus which was mixed with some flour for killing rats and accidently was mixed with other flour into bread which the family ate. They were taken sick shortly after dinner, a doctor was called who found that the flour with phosphorus had been used. The family is getting along nicely however.

Captain Merrell Dead.

CLINTON, Jan. 1.—Captain N. A. Merrell died at his home in DeWitt, this county, at 9 o'clock. He had been ill some time of stomach trouble. He was long identified with the history of the state, and was a member of an early legislature, as well as of the present one. He was prominent in civic and military affairs, and leaves a wife and two children.

Belated Justice.

DES MOINES, Jan. 1.—Pike Lynch, ex-fire chief, was sentenced to five months in the Polk county jail by Judge Holmes. Bonds on appeal were fixed at $300. Lynch was convicted a year ago of receiving stolen goods. The crime was committed in 1895.

Alleged to Be Bank Robbers.

NEWTON, Jan. 4.—Four men suspected of being implicated in the Sully bank robbery have just been lodged in jail here by Sheriff Tripp. They were found near Sully.

Bullard Gets a New Trial.

CLARION, Jan. 4.—Judge Birdsall granted a new trial to W. E. Bullard, late secretary of the senate, recently convicted of forgery.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Mason City dispatch: J. S. Hutchins, an extensive land owner, implement and hay dealer, operating at Rockwell and Hutchins, Iowa, has failed. His liabilities reach about $33,000, with assets set at $25,000.

The bank at Sully, on the Iowa Central, fifteen miles southeast of Newton, was entered at 3 o'clock a. m., the vault blown open and a small amount taken. They did not get into the safe. Only $15 is missing.

B. Fay Mills, the well known evangelist, will deliver a course of lectures at Calvary Tabernacle, Des Moines, on the nights of January 6, 7 and 8. The subjects of his lectures are: "The Social Crisis," "What Must Society Do to Be Saved?" and "The Christianization of Christianity." Tickets for the course, 60 cents.

At Madrid recently Mrs. Robert Howard was thrown from a buggy and her skull was crushed. She died in a short time. She and John Slick, a liveryman, started out for a drive, the team ran away and this was the result. Mrs. Howard was a woman about 30 years old and leaves a husband and two children, one by a former marriage. She bore a good reputation. Some sensational stories are afloat about the possibility of murder, but they are not generally credited.

Des Moines dispatch: The controversy over the estate left by E. W. Curry, the late chairman of the democratic state central committee, is now certain of going into the courts. It can be positively stated that Mr. Curry did make a will in favor of Miss Bright about a year ago, and who was at that time his stenographer at Leon, and after he had secured a divorce from his wife. Miss Bright, who is now stenographer in the dry goods establishment of J. V. Farwell & Co., Chicago, alleges that the will in her favor was made in good faith, properly signed and witnessed, and is now in the possession of Mr. McGinniss, Mr. Curry's law partner. Miss Bright has secured the services of G. Taylor Wright & Son, of Lineville, to bring suit for $3,000 and the valuable private library left by Mr. Curry. It is understood that Mrs. Curry has a will which was made at the Savery house a few days before Mr. Curry died, in which he leaves everything to her.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

A SPANISH CRISIS.

Editors Make Charges and Their Prosecution May Cause Trouble.

MADRID, Jan. 2—The instant recall of Weyler and of the chiefs of the hospital and commissary in Cuba were demanded in sensational articles yesterday in the Imparcial and Heraldo. Iniquities are exposed and immediate justice is called for. Both papers were seized, the editions destroyed and proceedings against them were instituted in both the civil and military courts. The papers charge that the money sent to Cuba from Madrid does not find its way to the army, which is suffering from lack of food, etc. The general public is highly indignant over the exposures and the prosecution of the editors and a crisis is threatened.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Spanish minister at Washington is informed by a cablegram from Madrid that the queen regent has signed the decree inaugurating governmental reforms in Porto Rico. These reforms are especially significant at this time, because of the avowal of Spain that they will be extended to Cuba when the island is pacified.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—General Ruis Rivera, who succeeded Maceo in command of the insurgents in Pinar del Rio, is wounded, according to advices from Artemisa.

M'CULLAGH FOUND DEAD.

The Famous Globe Democrat Man Commits Suicide.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 1.—Joseph B. McCullagh, editor of the Globe Democrat, was found dead on the pavement in the rear of his residence, No. 3837 West Pine Boulevard, at 6:30 o'clock a. m. He had evidently jumped from the window of his bedroom on the third floor of the house, some time between midnight and daybreak, and dashed his brains out on the stone flagging of the yard. Mr. McCullagh was attired in his night clothing. He had been confined to his room since November 10th with acute asthma, complicated with nervous depression, as a result of his arduous labors in the recent election. It is said that he had become tired of life.

A SOUTHERN TORNADO.

Death-Dealing Wind Visits Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 4.—Telegraphic advices disclose the fact that southern Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana have been visited by a death-dealing tornado. The force of the wind was not great in Missouri, but the country is storm swept. In Arkansas it is reported that twenty-five houses were blown down at Benton and great destruction is reported from Cameron, with one fatality. At Mooringsport, La., the greater portion of the town was destroyed and several lives were lost, with many persons injured. The wires are prostrated and authentic details cannot be obtained.

LAST RETURNS IN.

McKinley Now Knows How Many Votes He Got.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 1.—The official canvass of the vote of Maryland for president, Nov. 3, has been completed, this being the last state. The total vote in all the states was 13,888,672. McKinley received 7,101,401; Bryan 6,470,656; Palmer, 135,956; Levering, 130,560; Bentley, national, 14,392; Matchett, socialist, 33,538. McKinley's pluarality was 630,745; his majority 316,399.

MRS. BEECHER HURT.

Dizziness Caused Her to Fall and Break Her Hip.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, aged 84, of Brooklyn, N. Y., sustained a serious accident, which may result in making her a cripple. Mrs. Beecher is visiting her son-in-law, Rev. Samuel Scoville, in Stamford. She was attacked with dizziness, and in falling broke her hip in such a manner that she probably will never walk again without the use of crutches. Her condition is admittedly serious.

CUBANS MADE HAPPY.

Claim to Have Won a Point With Uncle Sam.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The secretary of the treasury has decided that vessels may clear for Cuba loaded with munitions of war presumably for the insurgents. The master of the vessel must, however, comply with the statutes in taking oath as to the port at which it is expected to land. The officials of the Cuban junta are jubilant over the decision, claiming it is a great concession to their cause.

Wiping Out Philippine Insurgents.

MADRID, Jan. 4.—A special dispatch from Manilla to Premier Canovas del Castillo giving additional details of the battle of Bulacan, announces that 3,000 of the insurgents were killed instead of 1,000, as at first reported.

THREE FRIENDS' PLEA.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 30.—The case of libel for forfeiture against the steamer Three Friends for violation of the federal laws prohibiting the fitting out in the United States of a vessel to go in the service of a foreign prince or state or of any colony, district or people to cruise or make war upon another foreign prince, state, colony or people, was argued in the United States court. The owners of the Three Friends contend in their exceptions to the libel that section 5283 does not apply to the Cuban rebellion because the United States has not recognized either the independence or the belligerency of the Cubans, and the courts cannot take cognizance of the war until either the president or congress recognizes the existence of war. If the defendants win the case they hold that it will be of very great importance to the Cubans, as the president will then have to recognize the belligerency of the Cubans, or at least stop prosecutions for confiscation of vessels under this section.

KEY WEST, Fla., Dec. 30.—Advices from Cuba state that attacks upon the suburbs in and around Havana have become a common affair now. Some nights the firing can be heard in the city proper, while the fires from burning buildings can easily be seen. The officials are sending out extra troops for guard duty.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 2.—The steamer Three Friends has been released from the custody of the United States officials.

WOLCOTT'S DECISION.

Will Tell Europe Major McKinley's Views.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—United States Senator Wolcott of Colorado, who recently visited President-elect McKinley and conferred with him relative to an international bimetallic conference, has sailed for London. His mission abroad is for the purpose of sounding English bimetallists as to the expediency of an international conference, and it is understood that the Colorado senator has the sanction of the president-elect for his negotiations. He would not discuss that feature of his trip. "It is a fact," said he, "that I am going abroad for a month or two, and it is equally true that I expect to confer with a number of European bimetallists. I am not prepared to say what the result may be, though I am hopeful that good may be accomplished."

STEAMER COMMODORE SINKS.

Cuban Filibuster Goes Down With Many on Board.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 4.—The steamer Commodore, which had sailed for Cuba with a cargo of guns and ammunition, is reported to have foundered on account of her leaky condition, off New Smyrna. Twenty-eight men were on board, but a dozen of them managed to escape by boat. Novelist Stephen Crane was on board and is among those believed to have been lost.

BREVITIES.

Frank S. Black and Hazen S. Pingree were inaugurated as governors of New York and Michigan, respectively, on the 1st.

A Jamaica dispatch states that disastrous floods have occurred in Manserrat. It is reported that no less than seventy-five lives were lost in the storm and floods. Many houses and bridges were destroyed.

Cubans in New York are officially informed that General Maximo Gomez has passed the eastern trocha at Moron, going west. Other advices from Gomez state that the Spaniards acknowledge the concentration of insurgent forces in the province of Santa Clara, near Mantanzas.

Madrid dispatch: The Imparcial publishes a report of an interview with Senor Canovas, prime minister, in which he declares that the government will not accept any intervention on the part of the United States in Cuba. The premier also says that the home government will not institute any reforms in Cuba until the revolt in that island is limited to the eastern provinces, but reforms will be undertaken in the island of Porto Rico very shortly.

Birmingham, Ala., dispatch: Plunging down 110 feet through an iron trestle an accommodation train on the Birmingham Mineral road landed its passengers and train crew in a death trap on the rocky bottom of the Cahawba river. Of those on board only nine escaped alive, and of these few only will recover. The number of the dead is estimated at between thirty and thirty-five. So far twenty-eight bodies have been recovered. Cremation alive was the horrible fate of a number of victims. The wreck caught fire, and long before relief could be summoned those unable to extricate themselves from the wreckage were beyond all human aid. Sickening cries wrenched the hearts of the survivors, but their injuries prevented them from giving any aid to the doomed unfortunates.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER V.—(CONTINUED.)

"Summon up your fortitude, my love, I beseech you, for I am deeply interested in the accomplishment of our purpose. I have an uneasy consciousness of a brewing tempest, and if it be possible I wish to ascertain in what quarter to mistrust treachery."

"If you remain undaunted I shall be sure to keep my courage."

"Go then, my love, to prepare a warm mantle, and we will take our dinner upstairs, and the moment the tray is removed we will slip away unperceived into the garden, from which it will be easy to steal across the lawn, since none of the servants venture out after sunset."

"Mamma," whispered Lady Felicie, as soon as she found breath, "M. Pierre may have seen us as we crossed the terrace."

"No, my love," answered the countess triumphantly. "From my retreat in the rear I saw him emerge from that long unused door under the portico; he locked it carefully behind him, and stole along through the shrubbery like a guilty creature. He had something under his arm, too; he has half an hour at least the advantage over us, but I hope to discover something concerning his movements before we return."

"Ah, my child, does not love for her young make the tigress fight desperately against fearful odds? Will not the gentlest and most timid of the brute creation dare anything to protect their offspring from menacing danger? I have an instinctive fear that peril is at hand; for myself I should be little alarmed; for your sake, my Felicie, I am ready to brave anything."

"I am not sure that I am more afraid of M. Pierre if he discovers us than of the ghostliest ghost that was ever seen."

"He is the more dangerous person, certainly; but we will not be seen. You said Jeannot put you into a place completely screened with vines. Can you find it again?"

"Oh, yes; keep hold of my hand, mamma, and I will lead you thither."

They passed on the rest of the way in silence, walked very swiftly till they reached the low underbrush, and keeping as much as possible in the shade of the trees.

Felicie drew her breath more quiveringly as they gained the woods, but went on steadily to the same retreat into which Jeannot had introduced her.

They were scarcely settled there before the crackling boughs announced an approach.

The two watchers held their breath, and peered forward.

The same dark figure with the shovel, the slow pace and weird accompanying light—this time it was passing into the wood.

The countess, holding her daughter's hand firmly, stepped out from her hiding place as soon as it had passed a short distance beyond them.

Lady Felicie hung back a moment, obeying the somewhat impatient command of the countess, who whispered cautiously:

"Do not spoil all, Felicie; come with me, or I shall follow alone."

"Oh, mamma, suppose it turns around and sees us?" returned Felicie, in the same suppressed voice.

"I cannot help it; I will know who and what it is; but the shade on this side will prevent our detection if we step cautiously."

And the heroic countess trod lightly on the mossy bank, taking care to avoid the drier and more rustling pathway, and left her daughter to follow behind her.

The luminous circle in which the dark figure walked was their guide, for as they advanced the gloomy darkness deepened. It paused at length and was stationary for a few seconds.

The countess, holding her pistol with desperate firmness, passed on to the utter horror of Lady Felicie, who dared not, however, remain behind.

Nearer and nearer to the mysterious figure advanced the two ladies. Lady Felicie's heart beat suffocatingly, but the countess compelled herself to be sternly calm, when just as they seemed to reach it—lo! light, figure and all had vanished.

The countess stood motionless, petrified with astonished dismay. Her daughter scarcely knew whether to feel relieved, or more deeply terrified.

"What can it mean?" whispered the countess; "this seems incredible. I saw him so plainly just here by this huge tree, and as if by magic he has vanished entirely. He certainly could not have passed on—that is impossible; and he is not here—that is equally certain."

"Oh, mamma, if it were really a ghost!"

"I do not believe in ghosts, Felicie," was the dry response.

Suddenly Felicie, half dead with fear, seized her arm. She turned hastily, and behold! some distance down the path was the same figure retracing his steps; it seemed like some spectre watchman on his rounds.

Even the stout heart of the countess was appalled. But another involuntary exclamation from Felicie gave her renewed courage.

Behold! from the opposite direction came another figure, dark cloaked, spade equipped, likewise attended by the floating circle of light.

"What!" thought the countess, "two ghosts, possibly three, and at this early hour? Now am I certain that this has a deeper significance than ever."

"Mamma, mamma!" implored Felicie, "what will become of us?"

"We must secrete ourselves somewhere. Don't tremble so, my precious one, there is time for us to retreat."

The words died off from her lips as a strange voice suddenly exclaimed:

"Trust yourselves with me—there is not a moment to lose."

From whence did it come, the ground or the skies? Poor Felicie was beyond shrieking; her heart stood still, and she felt a cold chill creeping over her whole frame.

But the countess, struggling for calmness, though her voice shook, answered:

"Who are you—and where?"

"A friend; one whom you need never fear to trust. Come!"

As if by magic, the great tree trunk against which the countess leaned, yawned, and there stood the dark figure who had so strangely disappeared.

"Come in hither quickly and you are safe."

Still, though the other apparitions were rapidly nearing, the countess hesitated.

"Who are you?" repeated she again.

He reached forward, and whispered a name in her ear.

"Come, Felicie!" exclaimed the lady, and the daughter was strangely thrilled by the blended relief and sadness of her voice.

They stepped, both of them, into what seemed a circular closet, and the weird, brownie doorway closed after them.

Their unseen companion pointed out several holes in the gnarled trunk, whispering:

"There are convenient windows; you may still watch your friends, if it is for that you ventured here."

CHAPTER VI.

"Mamma," whispered she, "you are ill?" and gaining courage herself at the seeming prostration of her mother, she added cheerfully, "I am certain we may trust this gentleman, whoever he is, and the moment they are gone we can return to the chateau."

"No, my child, I am not ill, nor in the least frightened. I rest secure and confident."

"Is that quite true?" whispered the stranger.

"Entirely," was the low response.

"Thank you. I hope the darkness does not trouble you, nor the closeness of the air. I might give you light, but it would betray our retreat. But, hush! they are approaching. The rendezvous is at the other tree."

The countess bent her eye to the little aperture, and plainly discerned three figures, all alike, so that one might be readily taken for the other.

They sat down, not two yards from the tree which sheltered their unsuspected watchers.

"Well, Jaques, what news tonight?" said M. Pierre's dry, rasping voice; "how goes on the cause?"

"Gloriously, comrade! Paris is all in a ferment, and the fever is spreading through the country. What think you—a great company of them went out to that tyrant Louis' palace, and compelled him to consent to some of the Assembly's requirements. A few more such riots, and the whole thing is done, so say a host of the leaders. Then hurrah for a republic! We will make our proud masters drink of the cup they would have given to us."

"You are quite sure it is true?" questioned M. Pierre, cautiously. "There will be no mistake about it?"

"Not a bit of it. Jaques came direct from Paris to Frejus. Why, they have killed half a dozen of the aristocratic upholders already; they are expecting a general rise every night; the king himself suspects it, for he attempted to escape, but they brought him back in triumph."

"Then our plans may safely go on?"

"To be sure. Make certain of all the treasure you can; it won't be long before the whole peasantry will come forward to take their share. What harm in looking out for ours ahead?"

The three laughed coarsely.

"We haven't got a very mean fortune stowed away already," observed Jaques. "I tell you what, comrade Pierre, you have managed the thing famously. You ought to go to Paris, and take a hand there."

"Perhaps I shall, when the outbreak comes; to tell the truth, the peasants of the Languedoc lands owe me a little grudge, and I shouldn't care to remain here when they obtain control. They don't consider that the count compels me to be harsh with them."

"I shouldn't like to stand in his shoes in that day," laughed the other man. I don't doubt but they will tear him limb from limb."

"You will look out for the girl, if I shouldn't be around? she's my prize, you know," said M. Pierre.

"What, the daughter? she's a comely wench, they say."

"Yes, and as haughty as a queen to me. It's out of revenge that I mean to take possession of her, after her parents are killed," replied M. Pierre, in a fierce tone.

M. Pierre went on:

"I've brought some more of the plate tonight. The count's keeping away is a store of luck for us. They don't think of using the richest service at all, and no one looks after it. It was a bright idea, playing the ghost. They are all afraid of their own shadow, and don't think of attending to half their duty. The moment the sun sets not a soul of them ventures out of the chateau, and I doubt if the peasants leave their cottages. The field is left clear to us."

"It is cleverly managed, comrade, I grant you that. I have brought some more pikes. We must bury these, too. But I reckon they won't lie long in the ground. If the signs don't fail, it won't be a month before we are masters here."

"Do you know what the signal will be?"

"All whom we dared to trust. But we must wait for the tide to set in from Paris. There are hundreds ready to spread the spirit through the country when the scheme is ripe."

"I have spoken for a fishing smack to wait for me off St. Thomas," said M. Pierre, at length.

"What is that for?"

"To take the treasure to safety, and maybe I shall go too."

"That is queer. I should think you would stay to see the fun out."

"Maybe; but I shall want to take Lady Felicie away."

"She'll have to leave off the 'lady' precious soon, I'm thinking. But come, if we are to bury the pikes and the silver, it's time to attend to the digging. Jolly ghosts are we! It was rare sport for me to throw my brimstone around when that old demented Jeannot was coming toward me."

"We must thank him for the idea; I should never have thought of it but for him. I believe you won't be able to turn the old dotard; he'll stand up for that proud woman and her daughter to the last minute; I can swear to that."

"Then he will get knocked over himself, that's all," was the brutal rejoiner.

When the coast was once more clear the countess exclaimed fervently:

"Thank Heaven that I was prompted to come. I shall at least know where to look for my enemy. Oh, why does the count linger in Paris?"

"Because he could not leave. An edict has gone forth from the Assembly prohibiting any one from leaving Paris. It will not hinder him long, however. I left means for their escape, and you may expect them any moment now."

"You are so kind," faltered the countess.

"It is all I live for, except to see poor France cleared from a weight of tyranny," was the sad-toned reply. "I learned of this conspiracy through a comrade of Jaques, in Paris, and have cautiously watched their movements. A blessed accident revealed to me the hollow trunk of this huge tree. I went to work cautiously and sawed out the door, fitting it with secret hinges. I have excavated a lateral passage below. See, this board can be lifted. There will be a comfortable and safe retreat under ground just below that huge rock, in two days more. I shall store food there. It is for you and your daughter, if the terrible days come I dread—come before you are able to escape from these shores. Innocent and noble hearted as you are, you will be sacrificed because of your connection with Count Languedoc, unless I save you."

"Heaven bless you!" ejaculated Lady Felicie.

The countess struggled a moment with herself, and then said, firmly:

"You must save the count, likewise, or I shall not stir a step from the chateau!"

"If it be possible. I will do my best," was the grave reply.

"Now I can exclaim also—Heaven bless you, Emile!" sobbed the countess

"Emile!" exclaimed Lady Felicie "oh, mamma, is it Emile? How I wish it were not dark!"

HAVE FAITH IN RIVERA.

Senor Palma Ridicules Reports That Cubans Will Lay Down Arms.

New York dispatch: At the headquarters of the Cuban junta Senor Estrada Palma and his secretaries are kept busy answering questions as to the disposition of the patriot forces in Cuba and denying reports that General Maceo's death was but the beginning of the end of the war. In talking of the condition of affairs, Senor Palma stated that the Cuban army was now as strong in point of numbers and enthusiasm as it ever had been, and that the Cubans have full faith in General Rivera, who has succeeded Maceo in command. The Cuban forces in the province of Pinar del Rio, he said, are encamped on the mountain tops, and could afford to laugh at General Weyler's declaration that he would soon dislodge and scatter them and wind up the war. He continued: "General Rivera has 6,000 armed men under him at present, with provisions enough to last for six months in his mountain stronghold. It is simply idle for General Weyler to make such sweeping declarations. There has been and there will be no general laying down of arms on the part of the Cubans, such as has been reported. As for Dr. Zertucha's charges that Maceo was driven to death by despair by reason of non-support accorded to him by the Cuban allies in this country, it is simply infamous and unworthy of contradiction."

DISASTER IN A MINE.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 31.—Another disaster has overtaken the Spring Hill coal mines. Five years ago the mines were wrecked by an explosion and 130 lives lost. The colliery employed 1,000 men. Fire which started a few days ago in the 800 foot level has complete possession of two or three slopes. It has eaten its way to the 1,300 foot level and developed into a raging furnace. When the government inspector arrived the fire was issuing from every opening of the mine. Two cupolas were destroyed and the bankhead had to be torn away. The miners tried to exclude the air by stopping up every airway, but the inspector ordered them away, fearing an explosion. The flames shot 100 feet into the air. The extent of the fire is not known, but the most disastrous consequences are feared. The loss in the east slope is believed to be complete. The machinery will be ruined. It will take hard work to save the west slope. Likely the most serious damage will be confined to the east slope. The fire seems to be burning itself out. The loss will be enormous and will cause great destitution among the miners, as it is doubtful if work can be resumed during the winter.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Bill Agreed Upon to be Presented to the Republican Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The republican caucus committee appointed to draft a measure providing for an international conference to secure the re-establishment of bimetallism has agreed upon a bill to be presented to the republican caucus, which will be held soon after the reassembling of congress. The bill agreed upon is brief and merely confers upon the president the right to appoint delegates "to any conference which may be called which has for its object the re-establishment of bimetallism." It does not distribute the selection of delegates, as did the legislation of the Fifty-third congress, between the president and the two houses of congress, and moreover leaves the number to be selected entirely to the discretion of the president.

MRS. CASTLE WELL AGAIN.

San Francisco Millionaire's Wife Suddenly Recovers from Insanity.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Ella Castle, the wife of the San Francisco millionaire, who was admitted to the Polyclinic hospital shortly after her return from London, has left that institution perfectly well. Mrs. Castle was suffering from an internal malady and was successfully operated upon, in order to restore her normal condition. The physicians at the hospital state that Mrs. Castle is now in excellent health and does not exhibit the least trace of her former malady. It is not known yet what are the future plans of the Castles, but it is thought the husband and wife will take a short trip somewhere before returning to their home in San Francisco.

SIGNS OF THE PLANETS

INDICATIONS THAT AFFECT EVERY HUMAN LIFE.

Prof. Cunningham's Free Readings for Our Readers Have Become Very Popular—Some Instructions for the Guidance of Applicants for Horoscopes.

THE astrologer is receiving many requests for free readings through these columns. Each request is numbered when received and every one will be answered in its turn.

The astrologer again calls attention to the fact that each request must state the date, place and hour of birth, also sex and color, with full name and address of sender. The initials only and place of residence will be used in the reading.

Be exact about the hour of birth. If applicants do not know the date or hour they should send two two-cent stamps for special instructions. Persons wishing their horoscopes made immediately and forwarded by mail must send twelve two-cent stamp to cover expenses. Name and address must be plainly written. Address all communications to Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194, So. Clinton street, Chicago.

This weeks readings are as follows:

Betsey: Monroe, Mich.

According to data, you are a mixture of the signs of Taurus and Gemini, and therefore Venus and Mercury are your ruling planets or significators. You are medium height or above, and medium to dark hair, complexion and eyes; the eyes have a peculiar sparkle and sharp light; you are energetic and ambitious and will make a great effort to rise in the world, yet you will find many obstacles to overcome and will not be appreciated or paid in accordance with what your ability should command, yet you will succeed far better than the average of people. You are a natural born orator and if you take ordinary care of the money you get into your possession you will become wealthy.

C. A. J., Webster City, Iowa.

According to data, the sign Leo, which the Sun rules, was rising at your birth, with Mercury and Venus on the ascendant, and therefore the Sun, Venus and Mercury are your ruling planets or significators.

You are medium height or above; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; you will be disposed to baldness early in life; you will be active, ambitious, energetic, and will hold a good position in any locality; you will always be regarded as a leading man not so much from your wealth as from your ability. You will also be noted as having a great gift of language and as an orator you would make a great success. You are very popular with the ladies.

W. A. W., Dubuque, Iowa.

You have the zodiacal sign Virgo rising and therefore Mercury is your ruling planet. You are medium height or slightly above with a well proportioned figure; the complexion, hair and eyes from medium to dark; you are rather reserved in your manner until you get well acquainted. When young you were quite bashful, modest and avoided strangers. You are active, energetic, ambitious and industrious; you are very humane in your nature, kind to all, make many friends, and will be very popular with the ladies; you are gifted in one of the fine arts and very fond of any kind of art work; you have good command of language. You will rise to a high position in life, and if you avoid hazardous speculation and take good care of the money that comes into your possession you will become quite wealthy. It will be hard for you to keep money after you make it.

Gertrude, St. Joseph, Mo.

You have the zodiacal sign Cancer rising, therefore the moon is your ruling planet; you are medium height or above, with rather well proportioned figure; the shoulders good width, the complexion fair; eyes light; hair medium; you are fond of making changes in certain ways, and will be rather of an emotional nature, and will sometimes change your mind very quickly and apparently without any good reasons for it. Your constitution is not of a robust kind, and you are subject to feverish ailments and especially severe headaches when these attacks come on. You are fond of having your own way and are liable to rebel if opposed strongly. You are endowed by nature with strong intuitions, and might easily develop some mediumistic powers if you would make some effort in that direction.

Remarkable Confidence.

She: "It is remarkable what confidence that Mrs. Storms has in her husband! Believes everything he says." He: "Well, why shouldn't she?" "Why, man! he's a clerk in the weather bureau."—Yonkers Statesman.

THE HORSELESS CARRIAGE.

The Perfect Vehicle Will Come Into Use Slowly but Surely.

A little reflection will convince any one that the use of motocycles, or, in other words, horseless carriages, will improve the roads. General Morin of France is authority for the statement that the deterioration of common roads, except that which is caused by the weather, is two-thirds due to the wear of horses' feet and one-third due to the wheels of vehicles. This being the case, if the same amount as usual continue to be laid out upon the roads, and the continual damage decrease two-thirds, then the amount spent will go to increased and permanent improvement, and the roads will be "as smooth as a barn floor."

There are many questions to be solved, many difficulties to be surmounted, before the unexceptionable vehicle appears. It was a long time before the difficulties of making sewing machines, revolvers, repeating rifles, typewriters and typesetters were overcome. Yet, examine them! It is all plain and simple, and not at all marvelous now, and we can hardly imagine how any mechanic could spend years of time studying over such easy problems. So it will be with the motocycles. The mountains of difficulty will sink into molehills, and the ingenuity displayed will be found to take the form of judicious application of ordinary mechanical appliances, approved by the final umpire, the common sense of mankind.

Those who build automobiles must not permit themselves to think that they were born with all the carriage makers' lore inherent in them. A man may be a first class theoretical and practical mechanic and not be able to make a good vehicle to run on wheels. The perfect carriage, as we know it today, is the aggregate of the years of exhaustive trial and experiment and the improvements on that experience made by 1,000 men of genius.

If the carriage builders bestow upon the new carriage all the art acquired in building the old, and the motocycle men learn the reasons of the conventionalities of the trade and adapt their improvements to them with reference to the opinions of those who are not prejudiced against innovation, they will both work together in harmony and with one purpose, and, so united, they will make rapid progress in the development of the inevitable vehicle of the future.—Cassier's Magazine.

Gast--Sampson Wedding.

On Wednesday, Dec. 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Sampson, occurred the marriage of their daughter. Miss Clara C. Sampson, to Willian C. A. Gast, of Klemme, Iowa. The day was perfect, the winds were whist, and not a cloud could be discovered in the blue vault of heaven. Owing to the day, about two hundred guests were present, a large number of whom were from a distance. In the afternoon, just as the clock struck two, the bride, dressed in a beautiful cream moreen dress, trimmed with cream lace and ribbon and adorned with two beautiful orange blossom bouquets, was led forth by the bridegroom, keeping step to "The Sylvan March" reproduced by Miss Emma Sampson. Mr. Gast is a handsome young man. He wore a beautiful black suit, adorned with an orange blossom bouquet. He is deserving of an accomplished helpmeet, which we know Miss Clara will prove to be. The bride's second dress was black silk and her traveling suit was made of novelty goods. After congratulations were extended and presents given, the guests were conducted to the dinning room and partook of a bountiful repast, thus satisfying the inner man. At about six o'clock the many guests went their several ways' feeling more closely bound together by the ties of friendship. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gast join in extending congratulations and hope that their bark may have smooth sailing on the sea of "wedlock's peaceful repose."—Earlville Phœnix.

"CROWNS OF THORNS AND CROWNS OF ROSES."

From the Text: "Ye Know the Grace of Our Lord Jesus Christ, That Though He Was Rich Yet For Your Sake He Became Poor"—II. Cor. 8: 9.

HAT all the worlds which on a cold winter's night make the heavens one great glitter are without inhabitants is an absurdity. Scientists tell us that many of these worlds are too hot or too cold or too rarified of atmosphere for residence. But, if not fit for human abode, they may be fit for beings different from and superior to ourselves. We are told that the world of Jupiter is changing and becoming fit for creatures like the human race, and that Mars would do for the human family with a little change in the structure of our respiratory organs. But that there is a great world swung somewhere, vast beyond imagination, and that it is the headquarters of the universe, and the metropolis of immensity, and has a population in numbers vast beyond all statistics, and appointments of splendor beyond the capacity of canvas, or poem, or angel to describe, is as certain as the Bible is authentic. Perhaps some of the astronomers with their big telescopes have already caught a glimpse of it, not knowing what it is. We spell it with six letters and pronounce it heaven.

That is where Prince Jesus lived nineteen centuries ago. He was the King's Son. It was the old homestead of eternity, and all its castles were as old as God. Not a frost had ever chilled the air. Not a tear had ever rolled down the cheek of one of its inhabitants. There had never been a headache, or a sideache, or a heartache. There had not been a funeral in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. There had never in all the land been woven a black veil, for there had never been anything to mourn over. The passage of millions of years had not wrinkled or crippled or bedimmed any of its citizens. All the people there were in a state of eternal adolescence. What floral and pomonic richness! Gardens of perpetual bloom and orchards in unending fruitage. Had some spirit from another world entered and asked, What is sin? What is bereavement? What is sorrow? What is death? the brightest of the intelligences would have failed to give definition, though to study the question there was silence in heaven for half an hour.

The Prince of whom I speak had honors, emoluments, acclamations, such as no other prince, celestial or terrestrial, ever enjoyed. As he passed the street, the inhabitants took off from their brows garlands of white lilies and threw them in the way. He never entered any of the temples without all the worshipers rising up and bowing in obeisance. In all the processions of the high days he was the one who evoked the loudest welcome. Sometimes on foot, walking in loving talk with the humblest of the land, but at other times he took chariot, and among the twenty thousand that the Psalmist spoke of, his was the swiftest and most flaming; or, as when St. John described him, he took white palfrey with what prance of foot, and arch of neck, and roll of mane, and gleam of eye is only dimly suggested in the Apocalypse. He was not like other princes, waiting for the Father to die and then take the throne. When years ago an artist in Germany made a picture for the Royal Gallery representing the Emperor William on the throne, and the Crown Prince as having one foot on the step of the throne, the Emperor William ordered the picture changed, and said: "Let the prince keep his foot off the throne till I leave it."

Already enthroned was the Heavenly Prince side by side with the Father. What a circle of dominion! What multitudes of admirers! What unending round of glories! All the towers chimed the prince's praises. Of all the inhabitants, from the centre of the city, on over the hills and clear down to the beach against which the ocean of immensity rolls its billows, the prince was the acknowledged favorite. No wonder my text says that "he was rich." Set all the diamonds of the earth in one sceptre, build all the palaces of the earth in one Alhambra, gather all the pearls of the sea in one diadem, put all the values of the earth in one coin, the aggregate could not express his affluence. Yes, St. Paul was right. Solomon had in gold six hundred and eighty million pounds, and in silver one billion twenty-nine million three hundred and seventy-seven pounds sterling. But a greater than Solomon is here. Not the millionaire, but the owner of all things. To describe his celestial surroundings, the Bible uses all colors, gathering them in rainbow over the throne and setting them as agate in the temple window, and hoisting twelve of them into a wall, from striped jasper at the base to transparent amethyst in the capstone, while between are green of emerald, and snow of pearl, and blue of sapphire, and yellow of topaz, grey of chrysoprase, and flame of jacinth. All the loveliness of landscape in foliage, and river, and rill, and all enchantment aqua-marine, the sea of glass mingled with fire as when the sun sinks in the Mediterranean. All the thrill of music, instrumental and vocal, harps, trumpets, doxologies. There stood the prince, surrounded by those who had under their wings the velocity of millions of miles in a second, himself rich in love, rich in adoration, rich in power, rich in worship, rich in holiness, rich in "all the fulness of the Godhead bodily."

But one day there was a big disaster in a department of God's universe. A race fallen! A world in ruins! Our planet the scene of catastrophe! A globe swinging out into darkness, with mountains, and seas, and islands, an awful centrifuga! of sin seeming to overpower the beautiful centripetal of righteousness, and from it a groan reached heaven. Such a sound had never been heard there. Plenty of sweet sounds, but never an outcry of distress or an echo of agony. At that one groan the Prince rose from all the blissful circumjacence, and started for the outer gate and descended into the night of this world. Out of what a bright harbor into what a rough sea! "Stay with us," cried angel after angel, and potentate after potentate. "No," said the Prince, "I cannot stay; I must be off for that wreck of a world. I must stop that groan. I must hush that distress. I must fathom that abyss. I must redeem those nations. Farewell, thrones and temples, hosts cherubic, seraphic, archangelic! I will come back again, carrying on my shoulder a ransomed world. Till this is done I choose earthly scoff to heavenly acclamation, and a cattle pen to a king's palace, frigid zone of earth to atmosphere of celestial radiance. I have no time to lose, for hark ye to the groan that grows mightier while I wait! Farewell! Farewell! 'Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor.'"

Was there ever a contrast so overpowering as that between the noonday of Christ's celestial departure and the midnight of his earthly arrival? Sure enough, the angels were out that night in the sky, and an especial meteor acted as escort, but all that was from other worlds, and not from this world. The earth made no demonstration of welcome. If one of the great princes of this world steps out at a depot, cheers resound, and the bands play, and the flags wave. But for the arrival of this missionary Prince of the skies not a torch flared, not a trumpet blew, not a plume fluttered. All the music and the pomp were overhead. Our world opened for him nothing better than a barn-door. The Rajah of Cashmere sent to Queen Victoria a bedstead of carved gold and a canopy that cost seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, but the world had for the Prince of Heaven and Earth only a litter of straw. The crown jewels in the Tower of London amount to fifteen million dollars, but this member of eternal Royalty had nowhere to lay his head. To know how poor he was, ask the camel drivers, ask the shepherds, ask Mary, ask the three wise men of the East, who afterward came to Bethlehem. To know how poor he was examine all the records of real estate in all that Oriental country, and see what vineyard or what field he owned. Not one. Of what mortgage was he the mortgagee? Of what tenement was he the landlord? Of what lease was he the lessee? Who ever paid him rent? Not owning the boat on which he sailed, or the beast on which he rode, or the pillow on which he slept. He had so little estate that in order to pay his tax he had to perform a miracle, putting the amount of the assessment in a fish's mouth and having it hauled ashore. And after his death the world rushed in to take an inventory of his goods, and the entire aggregate was the garments he had worn, sleeping in them by night and traveling in them by day, bearing on them the dust of the highway and the saturation of the sea. St. Paul in my text hit the mark when he said of the missionary Prince, "For your sakes he became poor."

The world could have treated him better if it had chosen. It had all the means for making his earthly condition comfortable. Only a few years before when Pompey, the general, arrived in Brindisi he was greeted with arches and a costly column which celebrated the twelve million people whom he had killed or conquered, and he was allowed to wear his triumphal robe in the senate. The world had applause for imperial butchers, but buffeting for the Prince of Peace. Plenty of golden chalices for the favored to drink out of, but our Prince must put his lips to the bucket of the well by the roadside after he had begged for a drink. Poor? Born in another man's barn, and eating at another man's table, and cruising the lake in another man's fishing-smack, and buried in another man's tomb. Four inspired authors wrote his biography, and innumerable lives of Christ have been published, but he composed his autobiography in a most compressed way. He said, "I have trodden the wine-press alone."

But the Crown Prince of all heavenly dominion has less than the raven, less than the chamois, for he was homeless. Aye, in the history of the universe there is no other instance of such coming down. Who can count the miles from the top of the Throne to the bottom of the Cross? Cleopatra, giving a banquet to Antony, took a pearl worth a hundred thousand dollars and dissolved it in vinegar and swallowed it. But when our Prince, according to the Evangelist, in his last hours, took the vinegar, in it had been dissolved all the pearls of his heavenly royalty. Down until there was no other harrassment to suffer, poor until there was no other pauperism to torture. Billions of dollars spent in wars to destroy men, who will furnish the statistics of the value of that precious blood that was shed to save us? "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor."

Only those who study this text in two places can fully realize its power, the Holy Land of Asia Minor and the holy land of heaven. I wish that some day you might go to the Holy Land and take a drink out of Jacob's well, and take a sail on Galilee, and read the Sermon on the Mount while standing on Olivet, and see the wilderness where Christ was tempted, and be some afternoon on Calvary about three o'clock—the hour at which closed the crucifixion—and sit under the sycamores and by the side of brooks, and think and dream and pray about the poverty of him who came our souls to save. But you may be denied that, and so here, in another continent and in another hemisphere, and in scenes as different as possible, we recount as well we may how poor was our Heavenly Prince. But in the other holy land above we may all study the riches that he left behind when he started for earthly expedition. Come, let us bargain to meet each other at the door of the Father's mansion, or on the bank of the river just where it rolls from under the throne, or at the outside gate. Jesus got the contrast by exchanging that world for this; we will get it by exchanging this world for that. There and then you will understand more of the wonders of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, "though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor."

Yes, grace, free grace, sovereign grace, omnipotent grace! Among the thousands of words in the language there is no more queenly word. It means free and unmerited kindness. My text has no monopoly of the word. One hundred and twenty-nine times does the Bible eulogize grace. It is a door swung wide open to let into the pardon of God all the millions who choose to enter it.

John Newton sang of it when he wrote:

"Amazing grace, how sweet the sound,
That saved a wretch like me."

Philip Doddridge put it into all hymnology when he wrote:

"Grace, 'tis a charming sound,
Harmonious to the ear;
Heaven with the echo shall resound,
And all the earth shall hear."

When Artaxerxes was hunting, Tirebazus, who was attending him, showed the king a rent in his garments; the king said: "How shall I mend it?" "By giving it to me," said Tirebazus. Then the king gave him the robe, but commanded him never to wear it, as it would be inappropriate. But seeing the startling and comforting fact, while our Prince throws off the robe, He not only allows us to wear it, but commands us to wear it, and it will become us well, and for the poverties of our spiritual state we may put on the splendors of heavenly regalement. For our sakes! Oh, the personality of this religion! Not an abstraction, not an arch under which we walk to behold elaborate masonry, not an ice castle like that which the Empress Elizabeth of Russia, over a hundred years ago, ordered to be constructed. Winter with its trowel of crystals cementing the huge blocks that had been quarried from the frozen rivers of the North, but our Father's house with the wide hearth crackling a hearty welcome. A religion of warmth and inspiration, and light, and cheer; something we can take into our hearts, and homes, and business, recreations, and joys, and sorrows. Not an unmanageable gift, like the galley presented to Ptolemy, which required four thousand men to row, and its draught of water was so great that it could not come near the shore, but something you can run up any stream of annoyance, however shallow. Enrichment now, enrichment forever.

Ever Near.

Of what an easy, quick access,
My blessed Lord, art Thou. How suddenly
May our requests thine ear invade
To show that state dislikes not easiness.
If I but lift mine eyes my suit is made
Thou canst no more not hear than thou canst die!

—George Herbert.

WORDS OF WARNING.

Powers Give the Sultan of Turkey Verbal Notice to Act Quickly.

Constantinople dispatch: The Russian ambassador, acting in concert with the representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Austria, had an interview with the sultan on the subject of the better administration of the affairs of the empire. The ambassador warned the sultan if the revenue ceded for the payment of the Turkish debt were touched European control of the finances of the empire would become inevitable; that the czar would guarantee the sultan's personal safety and would engage to maintain the sultan's supremacy in the event of severe measures by the powers. The sultan, however, refused to consent to measures for control, financial or otherwise, by the powers. The ambassador replied that the condition of the empire placed the throne and caliphate in imminent peril. The sultan replied impressively: "I may be the last of the caliphates, but I never will become a second khedive." In addition, the ambassador sent a note to the Turkish government pointing out in precise terms the necessity of the sultan following the advice of the powers, saying a refusal to do so would involve the most disagreeable consequences.

GOOD NEWS IF TRUE.

The Story That Maceo is Alive Is Revived.

HAVANA, Jan. 1.—"Maceo is alive," is the Cubans' joyful cry. The first rumors, accepted with incredulity, are now gaining ground. Information is coming into the city daily, giving precise details. It is said that when he fell from his horse his followers thought him dead, but found that he was still living, and spread the news that he was dead, in order to carry him to a place of safety. Under a strong escort they carried him to the Sigolanea hospital, where, under the skillful treatment of doctors, the chief is being slowly recuperated. The acute period has now passed. It seems that only one wound is dangerous, that being in the stomach.

SULTAN YIELDS.

France and Italy to Be Represented at Bazhav Bey's Trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Des. 21.—The porte has granted the demand of the envoys of France and Italy that their dragomans be present at the trial of Mazhav Bey. Mazhav is charged with being responsible for the murder of Father Salvatore, an Italian priest who was killed in the convent of Jenidjekele at Marash in 1895 by Turkish troops commanded by Mazhav. Italy demands the punishment of Mazhav, and the Turkish government has promised to put him on trial, but the representatives of the powers suspect that this will be nothing more than a farce.

SUICIDED.

Life's Burdens Too Heavy for Banker W. A. Hammond.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—W. A. Hammond, second vice-president of the National Bank of Illinois, which failed two weeks ago, has followed the example of Banker Wasmandorff and committed suicide. Hammond mysteriously disappeared from his elegant home in Evanston, a suburb of Chicago, and threw himself into the lake from the Dempster street pier. Hammond had been charged with deceiving the directors of the bank, the depositors, and deliberately violating the national bank laws.

LEPROSY NOT CONTAGIOUS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—The Academy of Medicine has adopted a resolution that leprosy, while possibly infectious, is not necessarily contagious in this climate. A committee, of which Dr. Fowler, of the board of health, was chairman, declared New York city to be exempt from danger of leprous contagion, and protested against the segregation of lepers. The committee suggested, however, that steps be taken to prevent the landing of lepers on our shores.

Twenty Spaniards Drowned.

SANTANDER, Dec. 31.—The Spanish steamer Carranza, Captain Martinez, has foundered in the bay of Biscay, off this port. She carried a crew of twenty-two men, twenty of whom were drowned and two succeeded in saving themselves. The Carranza was an iron screw steamer of 1,458 gross and net tonnage, 255 feet long, 36 feet, five inches beam and 18 feet deep. She was built in Sunderland in 1885 and was owned by the Sociedad Maritima De Vizcaya, of Bilboa.

Failures of the Year.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: "There have been more commercial failures in 1896 than in any previous year except 1893, 14,890 against 13,197 last year, with liabilities of about $225,000,000 against $173,196,050 last last year, an increase in number of about 12 per cent and in liabilities of 29 per cent."

HER HAPPY DAY.

A CHARMING STORY OF MEDICINE AND MARRIAGE.

Two Open Letters From a Chicago Girl —How Happiness Came to Her.

Among the tens of thousands of women who apply to Mrs. Pinkham for advice and are cured, are many who wish the facts in their cases made public, but do not give permission to publish their names for reasons as obvious as in the following, and no name is ever published without the writer's authority; this is a bond of faith which Mrs. Pinkham has never broken.

Chicago, Jan. 5th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham:—A friend of mine, Mrs. ——, wants me to write you, because she says: "you did her so much good." I am desperate. Am nineteen years of age, tall, and weighed 138 pounds a year ago. I am now a mere skeleton. From your little book I think my trouble is profuse menstruation. My symptoms are * * * * etc.

Our doctor (my uncle) tells father that I am in consumption, and wants to take me to Florida. Please help me! Tell me what to do, and tell me quickly. I am engaged to be married in September. Shall I live to see the day? * * * * LUCY E. W.

Chicago, June 16th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

This is a happy day. I am well and gaining weight daily, but shall continue the treatment and Vegetable Compound during the summer, as you suggest. Uncle knows nothing about what you have done for me, because it would make things very unpleasant in the family. I would like to give you a testimonial to publish, but father would not allow it. * * * * I shall be married in September, and as we go to Boston, will call upon you. How can I prove my gratitude? * * * *

Why are not physicians more candid with women when suffering from such ailments?

Women want the truth, and if they cannot get it from their doctor, will seek it elsewhere.

Tired of It.

She—Would you love me just the same dearest, if I were poor instead of worth a million?

He—I have registered a solemn vow never to discuss the financial question again.

Their preparations are known the world over and have received the highest indorsements from the practicioner, the nurse and the intelligent housekeeper and caterer. There is hardly any food product which may be so extensively used in the household in combination with other foods as cocoa and chocolate; but here again we urge the importance of purity and nutrient value, and these important points, we feel sure, may be relied upon in Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate."—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

On His Honeymoon.

The colored female cook of a family living at the South end came upstairs the other afternoon, and, twisting up the corners of her apron with considerable embarrassment, said to her mistress:

"You see, misses, I thought it mought be bes' to be tellin' you dat I —dat I done got married las' week."

"Ah, indeed! And what is your name now, Hannah?"

"Mis' Williams, ma'am. You see, my husband he am a cook, too. He am what dey calls a sheft in a hotel."

"A chef, eh? That's very nice. And do you expect to leave us directly, Hannah?"

"Not 'rectly, mum. I'll stay wid ye for de present. You see, my husban' he's done gone to New York an' Washington on his honeymoon, an' it will be nigh onto six weeks befo' he comes back!"—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Using His Talents.

"Oh, yes, he did."

"Well, then, what's the matter?"

"Why, of course, I wanted pressing and refused him—and he didn't ask me the second time."—Boston Globe.

A Trying Moment.

Wife (filling up census paper)—John, dear, do you remember what age I said I was last census?—Sketch.

In Poker Terms.

"If I could but call this little hand mine," he said, caressingly.

"What would you do with it, Jack?" she said, playfully.

Same Thing.

"Your daughter says that if she cannot marry me she will marry no one."

"That's just what she would do should she marry you," roared the old gentleman.—Detroit Free Press.

Far Worse.

He (at parting)—Oh, Edith! You have broken my——

She (interrupting)—Not your heart, surely!

He (sadly)—No; my whole pocketful of cigars.—Somerville Journal.

Not So Bad.

"Doesn't your husband procrastinate, Mrs. Newly?"

"Oh, I don't think he's as bad as that, but he does have such an aggravating way of putting everything off."—Detroit Free Press.

Why?

Willie—Mamma, they say that history repeats itself, don't they?

Mother—Yes, dear.

Ups and Downs.

"Life is full of ups and downs." "Yes, and I know a young fellow who was in business and went under." "Well?" "And immediately his friends threw him over."—Indianapolis Journal.

No Time to Waste.

He—My views on bringing up a family——

She—Never mind your views. I'll bring up the family. You go and bring up the coal.—Chips.

No Alternative.

"Dosby, you're paying dear for that rich wife of yours by having to stay at home every night."

"It was either that or go to work, old boy."—Detroit Free Press.

SOME LATE NEW THINGS.

Folding beds which are hung from the center and drop down at both sides have just been devised.

A chin rest for a dental chair has a plate adapted to fit the lower jaw and connected to the back of the chair by a rod.

Nursing bottles are now made with a porous filtering body located in the neck, which strains the milk as it passes through it.

Candlesticks, with chimneys and having perforations in the bottom of the tray for the admission of air, are made by an Englishman.

A newly patented lawn-mower has knives, worked on the same principle as mowing machine knives, hung between the wheels of the mower.

A newly patented cover for mucilage bottles screws onto the end of the brush handle, as well as the neck of the bottle, thus making it perfectly air-tight.

The inventions of automatic car couplings are very numerous, owing, no doubt, to the recent law compelling railroad companies to place them on their cars.

A folding baby carriage has collapsible handles, sides and ends, each wheel having a separate axle just long enough for its hub, which can be detached from the frame by a thumbscrew.

The Other Kind.

Justine—Is it true that Ethel's French marquis touched her father for money within a week after their marriage?

Conny—Yes, so I hear.

Justine—Did he get a check?

YOU WANT A FARM and we have, 50 miles west of Houston, at Chesterville, the best tract in Texas. Land high prairie and well drained, abundant rainfall, good soil, low prices and easy terms. Don't fail to post yourself. Write and receive "Fertile Farm Lands" free and information as to the cheap excursions and Free Fare. Address Southern Texas Colinization Co., JOHN LINDERHOLM, Mgr., 110 Rialto Bldg., Chicago.

His Satanic Majesty—What is that terrible odor? Attendant—It's that last man from New York. He had a Sunday paper in his pocket.

The Success of G. A. Hotze.

"When I left Mason county, Ky., in April, 1873," says Mr. G. A. Hotze, of Indianola, Red Willow county, Neb., "I had one yoke of oxen, a wagon, a plow and money enough to last me a year. I have followed farming, stock-raising and gardening. Have made at gardening from $700 to $1,000 a year. I own 360 acres, valued at $10,000. My improvements are worth $4,000. I have all kinds of fruit trees. I raised about 50 bushels of cherries this year, which I sold for $2.50 a bushel. If anyone wishes to write and ask questions, I will cheerfully answer, as I am glad to help any man with small means to get a home as I have done."

In our "Nebraska Book" (40 pages with maps and illustrations), are dozens of statements like that of Mr. Hotze. They are made by farmers who have made a success of farming. They show that Nebraska is as good a state as any in the Union.

The book in which they appear is as different from the ordinary agricultural pamphlet as day is from night. It is interesting, practical, truthful. In a staightforward, simple fashion, it tells you everything you need to know about Nebraska—its climate, people, schools, churches, railroads, markets, soil and crops. It explains why the Nebraska farmer makes money in spite of low prices and hard times. Why land is cheap. And how it is as easy for an intelligent and industrious man to BUY a Nebraska farm as it is to rent one in any state east of the Missouri river.

Every farm renter who wants to become a farm-owner; every farm-owner who is tired of trying to make money off high-priced land; every father who wants to give his sons a start on the high road to independence, should write for a copy. Free.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? .. .. ..

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

Warner's Safe Cure

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

There is no doubt about this. Thousands have so testified. The theory is right, the cure is right and health follows as a natural sequence. Be self-convinced through personal proof.

Papa's Story.

Younger Son—Papa, did you throw stones at apples when you were a boy?

Father—No; I knocked a peach off a tree once, and what do you think?

Son—You broke a window.

Father—No; I knocked off a peach and on opening it found a stone.

REASONS FOR USING

Walter Baker & Co.'s

Breakfast Cocoa.

1. Because it is absolutely pure.
2. Because it is not made by the so-called Dutch Process in which chemicals are used.
3. Because beans of the finest quality are used.
4. Because it is made by a method which preserves unimpaired the exquisite natural flavor and odor of the beans.
5. Because it is the most economical, costing less than one cent a cup.

Royalty at the Pawnbroker's.

Kings and queens are far more frequent customers of the pawnshop than most people would be willing to believe. Thus, Queen Isabella of Spain has repeatedly had her jewels in pawn, while the silver plate of the late ex-king of Naples and of his heroic queen, a sister of the empress of Austria, has been for years at a time reposing in the vaults of the great London pawnbroker Attenborough. Even the Prince of Wales has known what it is to have his time kept by his uncle, for when visiting the battlefields shortly after the Franco-German war he found himself stranded at Sedan without money enough to pay his hotel bill or to continue his journey. He had no time to telegraph for funds, and even if he had there was the danger of disclosing his identity, which, with respect to French susceptibilities, he was anxious at all costs to keep secret. So he handed his watch and chain to his equerry, General Teesdale, who, adding thereto his own and that of the prince's valet, who accompanied them, proceeded to the local mont de piete, or pawnshop, where he raised enough money to enable the prince to continue his journey.—Philadelphia Press.

We are in a position to state that so far as Hancock county is concerned the post office matters has been decided upon by Mr. Dolliver. The 4th. class offices will be presided over as follows: W. H. Cowdy, P. M. at Corwith; John Gruetzmacher, at Klemme; C. S. Farmen, at Goodell; W. M. Mertz, at Hayfield. Mr. Dolliver has also decided upon the recomendations for the presidential offices at Britt and Garner but believes that the policy of the incoming administration will be the same as that pursued by the Harrison administration which was not to disturb the present incumbents during their terms, except for cause.—Hancock Signal.

The Westeren Electric Telephone company have extended their line to Hayfield and Crystal Lake and will soon reach Forest City.—Corwith Hustler.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yields to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at J. L. Harr's Drug Store.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, . . . IOWA

Scarcity of time is often pleaded as an excuse for want of inclination.

Large quantities of self-control are necessary to keep jokes free from malice.

Many preachers are good tailors spoiled and capital shoemakers turned out of their proper calling.

A trifle of human kindness on the part of each individual adds wonderfully to the carrying capacity of a street car.

Don't get too thoroughly imbued with the idea that you are a signboard to direct other people on the road to duty.

The Kansas City Star is of opinion that Russell Sage has probably more ready money and less fun than any man of his class in America.

The 14-year-old daughter of John Mansfield, a wealthy resident of Rutherford, N. J., made two attempts at suicide. First she drank carbolic acid which she found in the kitchen closet, and afterward shot herself through the head with her father's revolver. She told what she had done, and said she wanted to die. A physician says her chances of recovery are slight. Mr. Mansfield arrived home about an hour after his daughter shot herself, and was almost crazed by grief.

At the annual dinner of the English electrical engineers the president said "that the commercial supremacy of the British empire was initiated by our being the first to employ, on a large scale, the coal at our disposal. If coal ceased to be necessary for our industries he doubted whether the empire would maintain its commercial supremacy. In the falls of Niagara there was a waste of more power than could be derived from all the coal that could be raised throughout the world, and there were many other falls than Niagara. It would be the work of the engineer to utilize those falls, and then we should either have to live on our accumulations or we would have to fight. The commercial supremacy of Great Britain would have gone."

The people of Illinois will be glad to know that the Univerity of Illinois has taken advanced ground in favor of clean athletics. The Illinois representative at a recent conference of the chief universities of the Northwest took the lead in securing the adoption of a stringent set of rules intending to close all loop-holes for professionalism. These rules have since been seriously modified and weakened by the action of other college authorities. The State University will hold to these rules, because they seem, on the whole, the best means of checking the great evil of professionalism in college athletics. In one or two recent cases adherence to this high standard has meant a real sacrifice by the athletic team concerned. The faculty and students of the University of Illinois believe in intercollegiate athletics as an aid to sound physical development, as a means of recreation for genuine students, not as the business of those who are professionally athletes and incidentally students.

The energy of English patriotism shows itself in all classes of English people, from the peer to the criminal. An incident of the Crimean war, mentioned by Mr. Hawthorne in a letter to his family, illustrates this fact. We quote from "Some Memories of Hawthorne," published in the Atlantic Monthly: "No act of the British people in behalf of the soldiers has struck me as so noble and touching as that of the reformed criminals at an institution in London. They wished to contribute something to the Patriotic Fund The only way they could do it was by fasting. So from Sunday night till Tuesday morning they ate nothing, and the money saved—three pounds and over—was sent to the Fund. Precious money is this!" American patriotism is not so strong as the English brand, and some say it is dying. Everything should be done to inculcate the spirit of American patriotism into young and old. This "hands across the sea" business should stop. England's hands will never stretch across the sea until John Bull sees a chance to grab Uncle Sam by the neck and choke the life out of him.

REMEDY FOR HOG CHOLERA.

Farmers Convinced of the Fact by an Illinois Man.

MASON CITY, Jan. 9.—There is no longer any question but that a remedy has been found for hog cholera. The farmers' institute of Rockwell was visited by Frank Baumgartner, of Peotone, Ill., Division Freight Agent Cleamons of Dubuque, and District Agent Calkins, the two latter representatives of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Road. Mr. Baumgartner addressed the convention and said that the disease was neither infective nor contagious, and was produced by injudicious feeding. He does not call the disease cholera, but malaria, typhoid fever or apendicitis. He is backed by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Company, and a commission from the agricultural department will visit him in a few days. He has made public exhibitions at Dubuque, West Union and McGregor. He went into sick herds and absolutely cured them. He has gone into healthy herds and produced the cholera, allowing one hog to die and curing the others. Under the direction of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Road he will make exhibitions at Mason City, Emmetsburg and Algona. The farmers attending the institute were so thoroughly convinced of his ability to cure that had he had his medicine on sale hundreds of dollars would have been expended for the drug, as hogs are dying in this locality by the hundreds. The state lost $15,000,000 in hogs during the past year. The Milwaukee Road alone lost in this freight over $1,000,000.

YOUNG BOYS HELD.

They Break Into a Postoffice and Then Confess Their Crime.

ATLANTIC, Jan. 10.—The two Taylor boys of Wiota, aged 12 and 14, broke into the postoffice at that place and took some money found in the drawer, They broke open several letters and appropriated the contents. Their consciences smote them and they returned everything to the postmaster, who intended letting the matter drop, until he looked up the law and found he would be held liable for not informing the postal authorities of the burglary. W. W. Eller, deputy United States marshal, took them to Council Bluffs, where they appeared before Commissioner Steadman and were bound over.

KILLED BY TIMBER HOGS.

Frightful Fate of a Hunter Near Atlantic.

ATLANTIC, Jan. 8.—A man named Fred Faulk was attacked and killed by hogs in the heavy timber about fifteen miles northeast of Atlantic. Faulk was hunting rabbits and accidently wounded one of the hogs, whose cries attracted several other hogs and they all attacked him and literally chewed him to death. The hogs have escaped from farmers living in that vicinity and were virtually wild. The surroundings betokened a hard fight, as Faulk's gun was broken and the underbrush was beaten down for rods in his vain struggle for life.

LINDLEY DEFAULTS.

Treasurer of Humboldt County Uses the County Funds.

HUMBOLDT, Jan. 9.—Scott Lindley, county treasurer, has defaulted for from $10,000 to $15,000. The amount is uncertain. Mr. Lindley was elected two years ago last fall and was re-elected last year. He was without means and had difficulty in getting bonds, but his bond is believed to be good. Extravagant living is supposed to have been the cause of his downfall. His defalcation was not unexpected.

A HERO DROWNED.

Brave Young Man at Creston Died After Saving a Life.

CRESTON, Jan. 8.—Howard Wilson, son of Al Wilson, and Miss Fay Rawls, daughter of Dr. Rawls, broke through the ice while skating at Summit Lake. Wilson held Miss Rawls until friends rescued her. She was in an unconscious condition. Wilson sank before he could be rescued.

Alleged Bank Robbers Caught.

NEWTON, Jan. 9.—Frank Hickman and Cy Miller were arrested at Oskaloosa on suspicion of complicity in the Sully bank robbery. The parties were offering goods for sale in Oskaloosa that were taken from the store of Boat Bros., of Sully, the night of the bank robbery.

Cherubusco Griffith Dead.

DES MOINES, Jan. 7.—Col. Isaac W. Griffith, one of the early settlers of Polk county, a veteran of the Mexican war, in which he lost an arm, and prominent in the affairs of Iowa for many years, died yesterday from general debility and old age.

Rama Killed Himself.

MARSHALLTOWN, Jan. 9.—William Rama, who attempted suicide by drinking concentrated lye, is dead. He leaves a brother, John, at Bloomfield.

DID WHIPPING CAUSE DEATH?

Sudden Death of Harry Oliver in a Des Moines School.

DES MOINES, Jan. 8.—Harry Oliver, the 11-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Oliver, died in the school room at Grant Park, near the state fair grounds. Miss Florence Mills, the teacher, had just chastised the boy for some offense, and when he dropped dead by her side it caused a sensation among teachers and pupils. In the past the boy has fainted when angry and excited and at first it was thought he was in a faint at the time but when Dr. Curry arrived he made an examination and found that life was extinct. It is said that Miss Millls only whipped the child about the legs and that no marks of violence were found on the body. Mr. Oliver says he attaches no blame to the teacher. He says the boy was head-strong and hard to manage; that he was affected with heart disease and that he ran away to school in the morning without his breakfast because he was angry at his mother.

PRIME WINS THE CASE.

Judge Spurrier Decides the Famous National Guard Election Case.

DES MOINES, Jan. 10.—Judge Spurrier decided the Prime-Guest case in favor of John R. Prime. He has ordered I. M. Earle, attorney for Prime, to prepare the order in mandamus, commanding the governor to issue a commission to Prime, as brigadier general of the First brigade, I. N. G. The decision means a clash between the courts and the executive department of the state. There may be lively times, if the governor deems it prudent to take issue with the courts, and carries out the threat made by Attorney General Remley, that the governor would refuse to obey the order of court, in case the decision was against him. It is possible trouble will be averted by an immediate appeal to the supreme court.

A REMARKABLE SPECTACLE.

SIOUX CITY, Jan. 9.—A remarkable scene was witnessed in the court house when a large delegation of heavy tax payers called upon the board of supervisors, in session, and personally thanked the members for the splendid management of the finances of the county the past year. The board of supervisors a year ago adopted a series of reforms in finances by which the county saved some $47,000 over the expenditures of the year before. The board has shown a disposition to continue retrenchment in every department, and instead of the county going deeper in debt it will soon be reduced to the old debt contracted under previous administrations.

Sustained by a Jury.

CHEROKEE, Jan. 11.—The grand jury failed to indict Rev. E. L. Benedict for the shooting of Harry Mewhirter, which occurred at Larrabee on the night of November 9. The jury held that Benedict was justified in shooting Mewhirter.

W. I. Hayes for Representative.

CLINTON, Jan. 11.—The democratic county central committee selected ex-Congressman Walter I. Hayes as a candidate for representative to the state legislature as a successor to N. A. Merrell, recently deceased.

Mrs. G. F. Magoun Dead.

GRINNELL, Jan. 8.—The widow of the late Dr. G. F. Magoun died yesterday after a long and painful illness.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Sheriff Bradfield arrested a stranger at Clarion who could give no satisfactory account of himself and who bears a close resemblance to the published description of Joe Wolverton, the man who is wanted for the murder of Mrs. Gilfillan at Osceola. He is now in jail awaiting identification.

Council Bluffs dispatch: A farmer named Ludwig Studebaker has filed a charge of assault with intent to commit murder against Hugo Gutah. The affray took place at Treynor, in Silver Creek township. The victim is Fred Studebaker and his recovery is hopeless. He was assaulted with a beer glass, the skull being fractured.

The north-bound passenger on the Carson branch of the C., R. I. & P. was wrecked near Carson. The rear coach left the track while crossing a trestle bridge and dropped to the bottom of a deep ravine. The car was set on fire from the stove and only prompt exertion on the part of the trainmen saved injured passengers from death flames. John Surles, conductor, was injured about the head and shoulders, seriously, but not fatally; Robert Aikens, of Henderson, a stockman, received internal injuries, probably fatal; Billy Lamb, expressman, was badly cut about the head, may recover; Miss May Paul, of Henderson, was bruised, but not seriously injured; Curt Curran, brakeman, had a shoulder dislocated and was bruised about the body. He worked with one arm and dragged passengers from the burning car. The fire spread from the car to the bridge, which was also destroyed.

PINGREE AND HIS REFORMS.

Many Sweeping Changes Advocated by Michigan's Governor.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 9.—The legislature in joint session listened to the address of the incoming governor, Hazen Pingree. At the outset he recommended the abolishment of party conventions, which, he said have become the medium of tricksters, bribery and fraud. He advocated a direct vote and the Australian ballot system in nominating a candidate. The legislature was asked to consider the question of uniform 2-cent fares on the railroads of the state. He favored a referendum in granting quasi public franchises. He warned the legislature against permitting the state to become the field of operations through which great corporations might acquire possession of the state's mineral resourses and lake shipping interests. He advised the supervision of corporations by a corporation commissioner, who should ascertain the exact assets of every corporation before permitting it to enjoy corporation privileges Governor Pingree asserted taxation of mortgages is double taxation against the borrower, and objected strongly to lobbyists. He elaborated a scheme for regulating the granting of public franchises, all of which should be submitted to the vote of the people.

ALLISON DECLINES.

Cannot Accept a Position in McKinley's Cabinet.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 8.—Senator William B. Allison has for the third time declined the proffer of an Ohio born president to accept a position in his cabinet. This is the position that President-elect McKinley finds himself in as the result of his visit to Canton and his conference with Senator Allison. Senator Allison is said to have told Major McKinley that he believed it was his duty to himself and to his state to remain in the senate.

BAYARD ENTERTAINED.

Interests Amounting to $7,500,000,000 Banquet Him.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Article Club, an association made up of the leading commercial clubs of the country, representing an aggregate capital of $7,500,000,000, the agents general in London of colonies, the heads of the government departments and many others interested in the commerce of the empire, gave a banquet at the Hotel Cecil, the United States ambassador, Mr. Bayard, being the guest of the evening.

Minister Willis Dying.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11.—Late Honolulu advices dated January 1 say United States Minister Willis is very low, and his death is expected at any moment. The attack of pneumonia has led to other complications. The doctors have given up hope.

Henley Not Guilty.

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—The jury in the case of John A. Henley, ex-traffic manager of the Santa Fe railroad, charged with having violated the inter-state commerce law, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Bad Australian Cyclone.

MELBOURNE, Victoria, Jan. 11.—The recent hurricane which swept over Port Darwin did immense damage. Many luggers are missing and numbers of colored people are killed.

Jackson Day at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Jackson day was celebrated by the local democracy with a banquet at the Tremont house. W. J. Bryan made the principal speech.

Literary Notes.

The first number of Harper's Bazar for 1897 will contain the initial chapter of a very noteworthy series on "Infancy and Childhood," written from the standpoint of advanced modern ideas by Mrs. Frances Fisher Wood.

It is said that the smallest issue of the Cosmopolitan for 1896 was 300,000 copies. The growth of its circulation in eight years from 20,000 copies to the present circulation is something phenomenal, but it has been accomplished by publishing a first-class magazine at a price which makes it obtainable by all. It is now selling at $1.00 per year.

Herbert D. Ward, the novelist and husband of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, has written a new novel, which will be the fiction feature of the Ladies' Home Journal during 1897. It is a humorous story and has the unique title of "The Burglar Who Moved Paradise." It is a sequel to Mrs. Ward's "An Old Maid's Paradise," the husband taking up the pen where Miss Phelps had naturally to put it down when she became Mrs. Ward.

Prof. Angelo Heilprin will contribute to the January Popular Science Monthly a summary of "Our Present Knowledge of the Antarctic Region," with a sketch map giving the more important points that have been named by navigators.

CUBAN RESOLUTION.

Practically Assured It Will Not Pass Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The influence of the administration against Cuban recognition seems paramount. The bold declaration of the executive prerogative by Secretary Olney has challenged statesmanlike consideration. The majority in both houses of congress seem to hesitate to engage in a struggle over this important constitutional question, just as one administration's sun is setting and that of another dawning. Consequently, it may be said with a great degree of positiveness that the Cameron resolutions will not be passed. If they should by any parliamentary possibility be adopted by the senate, it would be practically impossible for them to run the gauntlet of the house of representatives. It is conceded on all hands now that the resolutions could not be passed over the veto of the president. Hence the apparent conclusion to do nothing.

ENTER PLEAS OF GUILTY.

Lady Scott and Other Defendants Create a Sensation.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The spectators who crowded the old Bailey court room to watch the proceedings of the action for criminal libel brought by Lord Russell against Lady Scott, his mother-in-law, John Cockerton and Wm. Aylott, were treated to a genuine surprise. Immediately after court was called to order, Solicitor Walton arose and announced to the court that under the advice of counsel the defendants withdrew their plea of justification in uttering the libels complained of by Earl Russell and pleaded guilty as charged. The announcement created a profound sensation. The judge sentenced each of the prisoners to eight months in prison, without hard labor.

BREVITIES.

A dispatch from Madrid says it is expected that Maximo Gomez and other insurgent leaders will soon make overtures to the Spanish military authorities in Cuba with a view of securing favorable terms of surrender.

London dispatch: The Westminster Gazette gives prominence to the report that Queen Victoria has decided to commemorate the fact that she has enjoyed the longest reign in English history by abdicating in favor of the Prince of Wales.

A train on the Missouri Pacific went into the river near New Haven, Mo., a few days ago. It was a freight and consisted of eighteen cars, two of which were loaded with mules. The engineer, fireman and one brakeman were drowned.

Official dispatches recently received from Manilla chronicle a battle on the Pasig river, where the Philippine rebels were trying to obstruct navigation. The Spanish loss was ten men killed and twenty wounded, while the insurgents had thirty-two killed and many wounded. Thirteen conspirators were shot at Maniila.

Four of the five train wreckers in jail at Birmingham, Ala., have confessed to the formation of the fiendish plot to wreck and rob the Southern Railway's fast express from Washington, D. C., at McComb's trestle, twelve miles east of Birmingham, on the night of December 19, and this confession leads to the belief that the same gang removed the rail which wrecked the Birmingham Mineral train at Cahaba river bridge, causing the death of twenty-six people and injuring eleven others, on December 27, although the men under arrest are silent as to this wreck.

Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, recently pardoned twenty convicts, twelve of whom were charged with murder. The sentences of the latter ranged from short terms for manslausher to imprisonment for life for murder in the first degree. Their names are: Henry Jones, John F. Burke, Charles Dixon, Goin Harris, William Landers, John Crowley, Frank Webber, John Walker, Charles Robinson, Lawrence Farley, Kathryn Ketchner and William B. Sibert. The reason given by the governor for the issuance of the pardons was that they were recommended by the state's attorneys of the counties represented.

The republican caucus of the Pennsylvania legislature nominated A. Boise Penrose for United States senator, to succeed Cameron, on the first ballot. The vote was: Penrose, 133; Wanamaker, 75; Cameron, 1; Congressman J. B. Robinson, 1; Judge Charles E. Rice, 1; absent or not voting, 4. Even while the death knell of his senatorial aspirations were being sounded, Mr. Wanamaker was planning to continue the fight against Senator Quay in the state. At a big meeting of his supporters Mr. Wanamaker made a speech in which he declared his intention of carrying the fight into every county and to contest with him the right to name the party candidates for state treasurer and auditor general.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER VII.

T the words their companion lighted the little lantern hanging at his belt, whose round reflector threw the ghostly circle upon the ground. He held it up so that the pale light revealed to him her eager, earnest face in all its girlish loveliness, and gave to her his pale, noble countenance, with those deep, luminous eyes, that broad, intellectual sweep of the forehead, and those sadly wistful eyes.

"Sweet image of the past! what can you know of Emile!" exclaimed he.

"My mother has told me; and, ah, I admire, I respect you so much; and I wish—"

"What do you wish, innocent one?"

"That I could comfort you!" was Felicie's fervent answer.

He seized her hand and kissed it passionately. She was almost sure that a shower of hot tears accompanied the caress.

"Be satisfied; you have comforted me! Countess, this is the sweetest moment I have known for years."

"Heaven will reward you, sometime, Emile. I can never for a moment doubt it. As for me, I am powerless to express my gratitude for your disinterested devotion."

He turned the light slowly upon her face, and was evidently shocked at the traces of care and time.

"So changed!" murmured he; "ah, my lady, heart-griefs wear deepest. You had scarcely have been more worn had you become a peasant's wife."

The countess made a deprecating gesture.

"Hush, Emile, do not allude to the past. I am a faded, careworn woman, and I am the Countess Languedoc. Both should prevent you from recalling any other knowledge of me. I am thankful to see you still in the very pride of manly strength; and I am deeply grateful for your kindness."

His eye had again turned upon Felicie.

"The past years seem but a day when I look upon her. It seems that I once more behold the Lady Violante of my youthful dreams," murmured he, in a dreamy tone.

The countess watched him uneasily.

"My daughter is betrothed to the young Marquis De Berri. The marriage is to take place at once."

"I know," answered Emile, with a grave smile; "he is a noble youth, and is worthy of her. Though these be scarcely the times for marrying or giving in marriage, may prosperity and peace attend them! It should be so, if my poor will were law. And now to return to the danger which surrounds you. It is imperative that I return to Paris immediately, but I shall make no tarrying there. I only go to perfect arrangements for your future safety. I do not believe there will be any disturbance during my absence. At all events, you have this retreat in case of imperative need. I shall work on the subterranean chamber the rest of the night, and leave it habitable, though not as comfortable as I intend to leave it. I think you will see the count in two days at the longest. Of course, you will not need my caution to keep all that you have witnessed to-night entirely to yourselves. By all means try to appear before this wretched overseer as if you had still faith in his honesty."

"We shall fortunately be spared the need of dissembling. He is aware how little respect we bear him."

"That is well. Now we must arrange some signal, whereby I may acquaint you with my presence here. What shall it be?"

"A bunch of wild flowers thrown on the rocky bridge of the meadow. I will look for them myself, every morning," cried Felicie, eagerly.

"Some one might pick them up," observed the countess.

"Oh, no; for I shall be before them all," answered Felicie.

"So be it then. And now I will accompany you through the woods into sight of the chateau."

"Pray extinguish your lantern," cried Felicie, archly. "I shall have no fancy for the uncanny company of a ghost."

"Where are your fears, Felicie? In view of all we have heard and seen, I expected you would need all my persuasion to keep calm."

"Ah! but I did not know in the beginning that Emile was to be our protector!"

"Sweet, ingenuous child!" cried Emile; "Heaven give me the power to deserve your charming confidence. I cannot resist the influence. Countess Violante, I must thank you for teaching your daughter to have such kindly sentiments for me."

"I told her the story, Emile, to explain why I had kept her in such strict retirement, and because of her girlish repugnance to her marriage with the marquis."

"You do not approve, then, of these unions which consult only fortune and title, Lady Felicie?" observed Emile, as they slowly left the wood.

"I abhor them!" returned she, with fervor.

"And what says the countess?"

"That it is cruel to excite repugnance to a destiny you know is inevitable. But the system is as detestable to me as to any one."

"It is to last but a frail moment longer!" ejaculated Emile. "O, France! at what a terrible carnival of frightful passions is your purification to come!"

They had now reached the open meadow from which the roof and chimneys of the chateau could be plainly seen.

"Do not accompany us farther; there is no occasion for it, and your time is valuable," said the countess.

He turned at once.

"Then I wish you good-night."

The ladies waited till the woods hid his figure from them, then went slowly toward the chateau, from whose boudoir windows, as they approached near, they saw the cheerful lights streaming forth like a beckoning star.

"Oh, mamma," said Lady Felicie, "I wonder so much at you! Title nor fortune, nor forty fathers should have separated me from Emile, so grand and heroic as he is!"

The countess paused suddenly, and leaning heavily against her daughter, burst into a perfect passion of tears. The stern pent emotion once finding vent, it seemed that she would never grow calm again. Felicie was deeply alarmed. She passed both arms around the reeling figure, kissed her frantically, called her by every endearing name, and besought her to recover composure. Nothing seemed to avail, until suddenly the idea occurred to the daughter to feign alarm.

"Hark!" exclaimed she. "Oh, mamma, is not that M. Pierre, yonder?"

One great shudder shook the countess, and seizing Felicie by the hand, she dragged her into the shelter of a cluster of mulberry trees. She listened anxiously for several moments, then cautiously resumed their approach to the chateau. The little ruse had been successful. They reached the balcony in safety; stealthily followed the unused corridor and gained the boudoir. Hastily removing their wraps, and putting them out of sight, the pair sat down, and assumed an attitude of careless indolence, as though they had remained there through the whole evening.

"We must show them that we are here. Open a book, Felicie, as though you were reading, and then ring the bell and order a flask of wine. I am deathly faint. Give the order yourself, for I fancy I could not steady my tones yet." She leaned back in the chair, her face as pale as marble. Lady Felicie hastily obeyed her wish. The maid hastily obeyed the command, then said, timidly:

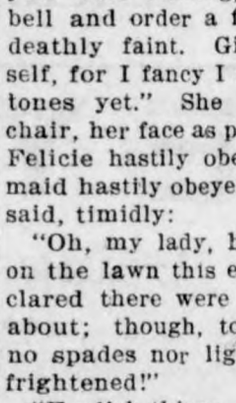
"Oh, my lady, have you looked out on the lawn this evening? Jaques declared there were dark shapes flitting about; though, to be sure, they had no spades nor lights. We are all so frightened!"

"Foolish things—go say your prayers and you will be safe," answered Lady Felicie, to save her mother the occasion to speak.

The girl went off wondering at the courage of the noble ladies, and quite innocently told a very broad falsehood to her mates in the servants' hall.

"Only think, there's my lady and Lady Felicie as quiet and still as two mice; they've been reading all the evening as if no such things as ghosts ever walked."

CHAPTER VIII.



OTHER and daughter sat in the luxurious boudoir in profound silence. The minds of both were teeming with earnest thought, but neither dared give language to them. The wine had evidently revived the countess; the color had returned to her lips, although her face was still pale. But she remained with her head supported by one arm, her eyes drooping to the floor. Felicie crept to her side, and nestled her hand into the chilly, listless fingers that hung over the arm of the easy chair. They closed fondly over hers. Still the girl dared not speak.

At length the countess turned and fixed her mournful eyes upon the wistful, girlish face.

"My child," said she, "circumstances so peculiar and delicate make it very embarrassing to speak plainly with you, yet I cannot endure that you should judge wrongfully of your mother's motives. I may have erred; I may have lacked the courage to brave everything for the truth and the right; but it is certain I have acted as I believed was my duty—then—now—always! Heaven knows I have struggled fiercely and suffered bitterly; that I have meant it should only be myself to be immolated. Circumstances have cruelly hemmed me in. I have only had the power given me to make the best of them. My conscience sustains me. Too well I know how little account I give to wealth or title. I count them both more empty and valueless than the froth of the sea. I am assured it is a prouder thing to be the beloved and loving wife of a peasant than the neglected, cold-hearted partner of a throne. And yet, there are some duties higher than those of love. So, at least, it seems to me. But, Felicie, I no longer urge upon you this marriage with the marquis. You shall judge for yourself; whatever your decision, you may rely upon my support and countenance, even against your father's anger."

"But his anger will be terrible," sighed Felicie.

"I fear so; but it will be no worse than I have endured, even before disobedience. It really seems to me that you could not help yourself if you tried; but this strange state of affairs in France is in your favor. Ah, my child, you have sat in judgment upon your mother; see if you can avail yourself of far more propitious circumstances."

"Dear, dear mamma," cried Felicie, through a flood of tears, "I spoke thoughtlessly; I never meant to hint that I believed you anything but the angel you are!"

She flung herself upon her mother's breast, and they mingled their tears together. After this they were both comforted. They shared the same couch that night, and long after Lady Felicie had fallen into the sweet slumbers of innocence and youth, the pale mother bent above her, whispering softly:

"Oh, my beloved one, may Heaven spare you the bitter trials of your hopeless mother. At least, though your warm, womanly devotion be not aroused, may you find a husband you can respect and honor, and not a narrow-minded, tyrannical master, who crushes your most strenuous efforts to fulfil your duties loyally."

In two days longer, as Emile had prophesied, the count arrived with his noble friend. If the servants marveled at his quiet entrance, his freedom from the accustomed retinue of attendants, they stood too much in awe of him to comment upon it. He greeted the countess with his usual stately courtesy, but he clasped his daughter to his heart ere he presented her to the marquis. It was true, that she was the dearest thing in the world to him, except his pride and his selfishness. He loved her as deeply as his narrow nature would allow.

"This, De Berri, is Lady Felicie. You see she has quite outgrown the little girl you remember," said the father, proudly.

The old marquis bowed gallantly over the trembling little hand extended to him.

"I greet the Lady Felicie with a great deal of pleasure, and no little admiration. But I shall allow a younger voice to describe the effect of such fresh loveliness upon our dull, Parisian eyes."

"Your son has not accompanied you?" observed the countess, to spare her agitated daughter the necessity of reply.

"Not yet, my dear madam. He took a more circuitous route. You are doubtless aware of the revolutionary state of the whole country. He was imprudent enough to express his indignation at the brutal insolence of the mob toward her gracious majesty, the queen, and very nearly paid the penalty of his boldness. I shall not feel quite easy till he reaches us."

"I have heard very little from Paris. You know our extreme isolation, and the count prohibited intercourse with Fejus. I hope you do not apprehend serious results?"

"One cannot say what will happen It had grown a little quieter, but the leaders are subtile now; they have but to touch a spring, and the mine is fired. Heaven help all who come in the way of the explosion."

The countess looked anxiously over to her husband.

"Have you any fears of this insubordinate spirit reaching Fejus?" asked she.

"Pshaw!" said the count, testily, "what do women know of such things. I must go and talk with M. Pierre, and see how affairs have gone on."

"Stay," interposed the countess, "had you not better listen to my account first? I assure you it will be wiser."

With his accustomed perversity, from the paltry desire to show that he was lord and master over this woman of twice his intellect and force of character, the count replied, contemptuously:

"Your account, indeed! I would as soon question one of the servant girls. I should have to allow one-half for your antipathy to my worthy Pierre, and the other half to your ignorance of all business matters, and then where would my result be?"

The countess colored deeply, while Felicie's eyes flashed indignantly.

FELL INTO THE TRAP.

Spanish Columns Moving Toward the Coast Led into an Ambuscade.

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 10.—A report from Matanzas confirms news of a defeat suffered by the Spanish at the hands of one of Gomez' captains. The Spaniards had an idea that another expedition was to be landed at some point west of Matanzas on the coast. Two detachments were set off to ambuscade the escort they thought the Cubans would send. This the Cubans heard of and organiz ed a counter ambuscade. Four hundred Cubans were concealed on the road that the Spaniards were to take. After the Spaniards had passed a certain point, strong barbed wire was stretched across the road at two points to impede their retreat. The Cubans then began a rapid fire, while men stationed above a cut, through which the Spanish had to pass, hurled hand grenades among them. In a short time over thirty Spanish soldiers and officers were disabled. They rallied and returned the fire but could do little, as the Cubans were almost invisible and their own columns were badly demoralized. The Spanish columns finally retreated, orderly at first, the Cubans pursuing them and firing all the while. When the second wires in their rear were struck a panic ensued, the soldiers forgetting all discipline and running for their lives, throwing away guns and equipments. Over forty-five Spaniards were buried by the Cubans and 100 taken prisoners. The latter, excepting five native born Cubans acting as guides, were liberated. The renegades, as the guides were called, had a short trial and a speedier death, being cut down with machetes.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 8.—The steamer Dauntless arrived in port from its alleged filibustering trip to Cuba, the expedition having been safely landed. The officers of the vessel profess that they have merely been on a wrecking expedition, and say that they have not seen the coast of Cuba. A very rough trip was experienced.

MASON OR MADDEN, WHICH?

Chicago Times-Herald Says the Former Must Be Senator.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The Times-Herald, whose editor, H. H. Kohlsaat, is believed to have the confidence of President-elect McKinley, publishes an editorial urging the election of Wm. E. Mason as United States senator. It says "the election of Martin B. Madden would be a menace to the McKinley administration," and concludes with: "Those who are not for us are against us. No friend of President McKinley can vote for Martin B. Madden."

DEFEAT FOR PINGREE.

Failed to Beat the Opposing Candidate for Speaker.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 7.—The Pingree men met their first serious defeat when they undertook to form a combination against William D. Gordon for speaker. They started in too late and found the task a hopeless one. It was abandoned later, all candidates withdrawing in favor of Gordon, who had no opposition in the caucus, being nominated by acclamation.

Dutchmen Want Indemnity For the Jameson Raid.

JOHANNESBURG, Jan. 8.—The Johannesburg Standard announces that the government has completed its bill against the British government demanding indemnity for the Jameson raid and is about to forward it to London. The amount of the Boer claims, the paper says, is under 2,000,000 pounds.

Turkish Troubles.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 10.—Owing to the refusal of the Turkish authorities to admit the dragomans of embassies at the trial of Mashar Bey, the French and Italian ambassadors recalled their dragomans and protested strongly to the porte, demanding a change of venue. Mashar Bey is accused of complicity in the murder of the Italian priest who was killed in a convent at Marash in 1895 by the Turkish troops commanded by Mashar Bey. The ambassadors insist the latter shall be tried by a competent and impartial tribunal here instead of at Marash.

Murderer Cooper Killed.

SUMTER, S. C., Jan. 8.—Simon Cooper, the negro outlaw who murdered three members of the Wilson family and a colored servant, was lynched near here. Cooper was captured by the sheriff's posse and was being taken to Sumter, when the mob decided to hang him. The deputy sheriff, aided by two men, resisted the lynchers, but were overpowered.

Assaulted His Own Mother.

PORT HURON, Mich., Jan. 9.—Archie McCullum pleaded guilty to having made a criminal assault upon his own mother. He was sentenced to state's prison for life, notwithstanding he had anticipated that his punishment would be lighter if he confessed his crime.

SOME HOROSCOPES.

FEATURES OF LIFE INDICATED BY THE PLANETS.

Some Instructions to Applicants for Free Readings—Full Name and Address Must Accompany Every Letter—Private Readings.

HE Astrologer insists that every applicant for a free reading in these columns must give full name and address. The answer will be by initial unless some other means of identification is adopted by applicant. If you do not know the exact date or hour of birth send TWO two-cent stamps for special instructions. Every request for a horoscope will be answered in its turn. Several hundred have already been filed. Persons wishing private readings by mail, at once, must inclose TWELVE two-cent stamps. Address all letters to Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 South Clinton street, Chicago, Ill. This week's horoscopes are as follows:

X. Y. Z., Crete, Neb.

You are a mixture of the signs Aries, which Mars rules, and Taurus, which Venus rules, and therefore Mars and Venus are your ruling planets. You are medium height or above; medium to light complexion; the eyes have a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight and are of a medium to light color. You are very active and energetic and quite ambitious to push business; yet, if this time is correct, you have no constitution that will allow you to carry out your ambitions, and your worst ailments will be in some way connected with your head. You have a great love for the beautiful in art and nature; you are possessed with a great ability to talk, write and work fine embroidery and paint; you have natural ability in some of the fine arts. However, only those that know you well will fully appreciate you, and the first half of life will be uphill work, the last half will be some better. Marriage is unfortunate for you.

"Flax," Smithboro, Ill.

Data proclaim you a mixture of the signs Libra, which Venus rules, and Scopio, which Mars rules, and, therefore, Venus and Mars are your ruling planets. You are medium height; well-set figure; medium complexion; hazel eyes; hair was flaxen when young, but has been getting some darker as you have grown older. If you had been born a few minutes earlier there would be indications of a dimple in your chin. You are endowed with the indications of both the gentle, confiding, modest Venus; also the bold, aggressive, refractory, warlike Mars, and you will act in accordance with whichever one of these happens to be called forth. You are fond of anything that relates to chemistry and mystery; also the beautiful in art, such as music, painting, drawing, sketching, etc. You need some special instructions or you will get rid of all the money you can make and have nothing left to show for it. Marriage fortunate.

"Mrs. Helena," Cairo.

According to data, the sign Sagittarius, which Jupiter rules, was rising at your birth, and, therefore, Jupiter is your ruling planet or significator. You are medium height or above, with a well-set figure. The complexion very clear and healthy; the hair medium to light; eyes light; you are noted for being of a cheerful, happy disposition; you do not allow anything like the blues to come near you; you are also noted for being fully appreciated by all, and you can secure and hold a good position at any time you wish; you have had a very eventful life and have been a great traveler, and the last half of life has been the most fortunate; you can always command a good salary if you wish, and will make and handle large sums of money during your life, yet will meet with many losses. You are a great lover of horses. You have great ambition for a large business. You have a remarkably strong constitution.

Helen, Dubuque, Iowa.

You have the zodiacal sign Libra rising, and therefore Venus is your ruling planet. You are medium height or above; slender figure; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes. If born four minutes earlier you have Uranus also for ruling planet, and that would denote a little darker shade to the eyes. You are cheerful and happy most of the time, yet will be subject to short spells of the blues, and if anyone does you an injury you are not apt to forget it very soon; yet you will forgive them and be very just to them if you had any dealings with them, for you are a lover of justice, and have also a great admiration for the fine arts. You will have very strong intuitions at times, yet this will only be spasmodic in its actions. Marriage will be more than average fortunate for you.

Just as the Greeks reckoned their time by Olymphiads, so did the early Scandinavians by their New Year feasts.

An Unlucky Bungle.

On the 21st of December, 1885, Admiral Dundas gave up the command of the fleet and returned to England. He was succeeded by Admiral Lyons, between whom and Dundas a signal parting took place which will long be remembered as a standing joke in the navy.

As Admiral Dundas left the fleet at Kamiesch the crews of both English and French ships manned the yards and gave him a parting cheer. At the same moment, by the desire of Dundas, a signal was run up to Sir E. Loyns on board the Agamemnon, "May success attend you," to which Sir E. Lyons ordered to be hoisted in reply, "May happiness await you."

But though in real life hanging and happiness are generally considered to have no very close connection, yet in the signal code they are very much alike. Unfortunately, in the hurry to reply to Admiral Dundas, the flag for the former instead of the latter word was hoisted, and what was worse the stupid blunder was not discovered and hauled down till the whole fleet had seen and read it.—Pearson's Weekly.

SOMETHING TO KNOW.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE BETTER ONE IS THE MORE HE IS HATED

By the Vile Creatures Who Haunt the Abodes of Men—Text: "I Was the Song of the Drunkards" — Psalms 69:12.

Who said that? Was it David or was it Christ? It was both. These Messianic Psalms are like a telescope. Pull the instrument to a certain range, and it shows you an object near by. Pull it to another range, and it will show you objects far away. David and Christ were both, each in his own time, the song of the drunkards. Holiness of doctrine and life always did excite wicked merriment. Although David had fully reformed and written a psalmody in which all subsequent ages have sobbed out their penitence, his enemies preferred to fetch up his old career, and put into metric measures sins long before forgiven. Christ, who committed no sin, was still more the subject of unholy song, because the better one is, the more iniquity hates him. Of the best Being whose voice ever moved the air or whose foot ever touched the earth it might be said:

The byword of the passing throng,
The ruler's scoff, the drunkard's song.

The earth fitted up for the human race, in congratulation the morning stars sang a song. The Israelitish army safe on the bank of the Red Sea and the Egyptians clear under the returned water, Moses sang a song. One of the most important parts of this great old Book is Solomon's song. At the birth of our Lord the Virgin Mary and old Simeon and angelic prima donnas in hovering clouds sang a song. What enrichment has been given to the world's literature and enjoyment by the ballads, the canticles, the discants, the ditties, the roundelays, the epics, the lyrics, the dithyrambs. But my text calls attention to a style of song that I think has never been discoursed upon. You sometimes hear this style of music when passing a saloon, or a residence in which dissipation is ascendant, or after you have retired at night you hear it coming out of the street from those who, having tarried long at their cups, are on their way home—the ballad of the inebriate, the serenade of the alcoholized, or what my text calls the Song of the Drunkards.

For practical and saving and warning and Christian purposes I will announce to you the characteristics of that well-known cadence mentioned in my text. First I remark that the Song of the Drunkards is an old song. Much of the music of the world and of the church is old music. First came the music of percussion, the clapping cymbal, which was suggested by a hammer on an anvil, and then the sighing of the wind across the reeds suggested the flute, and then the strained sinews of the tortoise across its shell suggested the harp. But far back of that, and nearly back as far as the moral collapse of our first parentage is the Song of the Drunkards. That tune was sung at least four thousand two hundred and forty-three years ago, when, the deluge past, Noah came out of the ark, and as if disgusted with too much prevalence of water, he took to strong drink and staggered forth, for all ages the first known drunkard. He sounded the first note of the old music of inebriacy. An Arab author of A. D. 1310, wrote: "Noah, being come out of the ark, ordered each of his sons to build a house. Afterwards they were occupied in sowing and in planting trees, the pippins and fruits of which they found in the ark. The vine alone was wanting, and they could not discover it. Gabriel then informed them that the devil had desired it, and indeed had some right to it. Hereupon Noah summoned him to appear in the field, and said to him, 'O accursed! Why hast thou carried away the vine from me?' 'Because,' replied the devil, 'it belonged to me.' 'Shall I part it for you?' said Gabriel. 'I consent,' said Noah, 'and will leave him a fourth.' 'That is not sufficient for him,' said Gabriel. 'Well, I will take half,' replied Noah, 'and he shall take the other.' 'That is not sufficient yet,' responded Gabriel. 'He must have two-thirds and thou one, and when thy wine shall have boiled on the fire until two-thirds are gone, the remainder shall be assigned for thy use.'" A fable that illustrates how the vine has been misappropriated.

Benhadad and thirty-two allied kings, rioting in a pavilion, took up the same bacchanal. Nabal was rendering that drunkard's song when his wife, beautiful Abigail, came back from her expedition to save her husband. Herod was singing that song when the daughter of Herodias wheeled in the dance before him. Belshazzar and a thousand lords renewed that song the night the handwriting came out on the plastering of the wall and the tramp of the besieging host was heard on the palace stairs. Ahasuerus sang that song when, after seven days of carousal, he ordered Vashti to come into the presence of the roaring guests without her veil on—a January storm trying to command a June morning. Oh, yes! The song of the drunkards is an old song. Kink Cyrus boasted that he could drink more wine than his brother. Drunkenness was so rife among the Lacedaemonians that Lycurgus had all the vines of the vineyards destroyed. Paul excoriates the Corinthians for turning the communion of the Lord's supper at church into a carousal. Isaiah mentions the drunkards of Ephraim. So much were the Athenians given to wassail that a law was passed giving a man double punishment for crime while intoxicated, the first punishment for the crime, and the other for the intoxication. It was a staccato passage in that song when Alexander the Great arose from a banquet and struck a spear through the heart of Clitus while putting up the curtains, and horrified at what was done, withdrew the sword from the dead body and attempted to take his own life. In the time of Oliver Cromwell the evil was so great that offenders were compelled to wear what was called "the drunkard's cloak," namely, a barrel with one end of it knocked out and a hole in the opposite end, the arms thrust through holes at the sides of the barrel. Samuel Johnson made merry of his own inebriacy. Oh, this old song! All the centuries have joined in. Among the first songs ever sung was the Song of the Drunkards.

Again, this Song of the Drunkards is an expensive song. The Sonntags and the Parepa Rosas and Nilssons and the other renderers of elevated and divine solos received their thousands of dollars per night in coliseums and academies of music. Some of the people of small means almost pauperized themselves that they might sit a few evenings under the enchantment of these angels of sweet sounds. I paid seven dollars to hear Jenny Lind sing when it was not easy to afford the seven dollars. Very expensive is such music, but the costliest song on earth is the drunkard's song. It costs ruin of body. It costs ruin of mind. It costs ruin of soul. Go right down among the residential streets of any city and you can find once beautiful and luxurious homesteads that were expended in this destructive music. The lights have gone out in the drawing-room, the pianos have ceased the pulsation of their keys, the wardrobe has lost the last article of appropriate attire. The Belshazzarean feast has left nothing but the broken pieces of the crushed chalices. There it stands, the ghastliest thing on earth, the remnant of a drunkard's home. The costliest thing on earth is sin. The most expensive of all music is the Song of the Drunkards. It is the highest tariff of nations—not a protective tariff, but a tariff of doom, a tariff of woe, a tariff of death. This evil whets the knives of the assassins, cuts the most of the wounds of the hospital, makes necessary most of the almshouses, causes the most of the ravings of the insane asylum and puts up most of the iron bars of the penitentiaries. It has its hand to-day on the throat of the American republic. It is the taskmaster of nations, and the human race crouches under its anathema. The Song of the Drunkards has for its accompaniment the clank of chains, the chattering teeth of poverty, the rattle of executioner's scaffold, the crash of shipwrecks, and the groan of empires. The two billion twenty million dollars which rum costs the country in a year in the destruction of grain and sugar and the supporting of the paupers and the criminals which strong drink causes is only a small part of what is paid for this expensive Song of the Drunkards.

Again, this Song of the Drunkards is a multitudinous song—not a solo, not a duet, not a quartette, not a sextette; but millions on millions are this hour singing it. Do not think that alcoholism has this field all to itself. It has powerful rivals in the intoxicants of other nations; hasheesh, and arrack, and pulque, and opium, and quavo, and mastic, and wedro. Every nation, barbaric as well as civilized, has its pet intoxicant. This Song of the Drunkards is rendered in Chinese, Hindoo, Arabian, Persian, Mexican—yea, all the languages. All zones join it. No continent would be large enough for the choir gallery if all those who have this libretto in their hands should stand side by side to chant the international chorus. Other throngs are just learning the eight notes of this dreadful music which is already mastered by the orchestras in full voice under the batons in full swing. All the musicians assembled at Dusseldorf, or Berlin, or Boston Peace Jubilee, rendering symphonies, requiems, or grand marches of Mendelssohn or Wagner or Chopin or Handel, were insignificant in numbers as compared with the innumerable throngs, host beside host, gallery above gallery, who are now pouring forth the Song of the Drunkards.

Again, the Song of the Drunkards is a suggestive song. You hear a nursery refrain, and right away you think of your childhood home, and brothers and sisters with whom you played, and mother, long since gone to rest. You hear a national air, and you think of the encampment of 1863, and the still night on the river bank, and the campfires that shook their reflections up and down the faces of the regiment. You hear an old church tune, and you are reminded of the revival scenes amid which you were brought to God. Nothing so brings up associations as a song sung or played upon instrument, and the Drunkards' Song is full of suggestion. As you hear it on the street quite late some night, you begin to say to yourself, "I wonder if he has a mother? Is his wife waiting for him? Will his children be frightened when he enters the front door and staggers, whooping, up the stairs? What chance is there for that young man, started so early on the down grade? In what business will he succeed? How long before that man will run through his property? I wonder how he got so far astray? Can any influence be wielded to fetch him back? He must have got into bad company who led him off." So you soliloquize and guess about this man whose voice you hear on the street under the starlight. * * *

Furthermore, the last characteristic of the Drunkards' Song is so tremendous that I can hardly bring myself to mention it. The Drunkards' Song is a continuous song. Once start that tune and you keep it up. You have known a hundred men destroyed of strong drink. You cannot mention five who got fully started on that road and stopped. The grace of God can do anything, but it does not do everything. Religion saves some. Temperance societies save some. The Bowery Mission saves some. The Central Mission saves some. But one hundred thousand who are annually slain by strong drink are not saved at all. I have been at a concert which went on for two hours and a half, and many people got up and left because it was too long; but 95 per cent of those who are singing the Drunkards' Song will to the last breath of their lungs and the last beat of their hearts keep on rendering it, and the galleries of earth and heaven and hell will stay filled with the astounded spectators. It is such a continuous and prolonged song that one feels like making the prayer which a reformed inebriate once made: "Almighty God! If it be thy will that man should suffer, whatever seemeth good in thy sight impose upon me. Let the bread of affliction be given me to eat. Take from me the friends of my confidence. Let the cold hut of poverty be my dwelling-place and the wasting hand of disease inflict its painful torments. Let me sow in the whirlwind and reap in the storm. Let those have me in derision who are younger than I. Let the passing away of my welfare be like the fleeting of a cloud and the shouts of my enemies like the rushing of waters. When I anticipate good, let evil annoy me. When I look for light, let darkness come upon me. Let the terrors of death be ever before me. Do all this, but save me, merciful God! Save me from the fate of a drunkard. Amen."

You see this sermon is not so much for cure as for prevention. Stop before you start, if you will forgive the solecism. The clock of St. Paul's cathedral struck thirteen one midnight, and so saved the life of a sentinel. The soldier was arrested and tried for falling asleep at his post one midnight; but he declared that he was awake at midnight, and in proof that he was awake he said that he had heard the unusual occurrence of the clock striking thirteen instead of twelve. He was laughed to scorn and sentenced to death; but three or four persons, hearing of the case, came up in time to swear that they, too, heard the clock strike thirteen that same midnight, and so the man's life was spared. My hearer, if you go on and thoroughly learn the Drunkards' Song, perhaps in the deep midnight of your soul there may sound something that will yet effect your moral and eternal rescue. But it is a risky "perhaps." It is exceptional. Go ahead on that wrong road and the clock will more probably strike the twelve that closes your day of opportunity, than that it will strike thirteen, the sound of your deliverance.

A few Sabbaths ago, on the steps of this church, a man whom I had known in other years confronted me. At the first glance, I saw that he was in the fifth and last act of the tragedy of intemperance. Splendid even in his ruin. The same brilliant eye, and the same courtly manners, and the remains of the same intellectual endowments but a wreck. I had seen that craft when it ploughed the waters, all sails set and running by true compass; wife, and children, and friends on board, himself commanding in a voyage that he expected would be glorious, putting into prosperous harbors of earth and at last putting into the harbor of heaven. But now a wreck, towed along by low appetites, that ever and anon run him into the breakers—a wreck of body, a wreck of mind, a wreck of soul. "Where is your wife?" "I do not know." "Where are your children?" "I do not know." "Where is your God?" "I do not know." That man is coming to the last verse of that long cantata, that protracted threnody, that terrific Song of the Drunkards.

A better and brighter day for humanity approaches with ever quickening footsteps, and promises a career to man leading ever on to infinite attainment.—R. C. Adams.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The senate passed the bill abolishing the death penalty in many cases, reducing the offenses to five: rape, treason, murder and two offenses applicable to army and navy. Call offered a resolution directing the secretary of state to demand the immediate release of Julio Sanguilly, convicted at Havana. Peffer argued for a national monetary commission. He also introduced a bill to improve the banking business.

HOUSE.

The house spent the entire day debating the Loud bill to amend the laws relating to second-class mail matter.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Call delivered an address on his Cuban resolution concerning the condemnation of Julio Sanguilly. He read from a letter which said that Charles Govin, a United States citizen had been tied to a tree and hacked to pieces by Spaniards. He cited other instances of cruelty to Americans. A resolution asking the secretary of state for all correspondence relating to the Sanguilly case was adopted. Bill exempting settlers from paying original government prices fixed on lands was debated, but a vote was not reached.

HOUSE.

The Loud bill to amend the law relating to second class mail matter was passed by the house after two days of debate by a vote of 144 to 105.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Mills offered the following joint resolution:

Resolved, That the expediency of recognizing the independence of a foreign government belongs to congress, and when congress shall so determine, the executive shall act in harmony with the legislative department of the government.

Second, That the independence of the republic of Cuba ought to be and hereby is recognized and $10,000 is hereby appropriated for the salary and expenses of a minister to that government whenever such minister shall be appointed by the president.

Mills gave notice he would speak on the resolution on Monday. Sherman sought to secure the passage of a bill directing the secretary of agriculture to establish a uniform standard for grains and all cereals, but Hale, Allen and Bate objected and it went over. Morgan secured the adoption of a resolution for an investigation of the disappearance of certain papers relating to the Pacific railroad from the file of the treasury department. House bill to amend navigation laws passed.

HOUSE.

The house spent the day in debate of the Pacific railroad funding bill, which provides, practically, an extension for eighty years of their big debt of $112,000,000 owed to the government. This bill is regarded as the most important piece of legislation to come before congress at this session.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The day was spent in debate on the Pacific railroad funding bill. More than a dozen speeches were made, but Johnson, of California, made the sensational speech of the day. He favored the bill and attacked Editor Hearst, of the New York Journal and San Francisco Examiner, and Mayor Sutro, of San Francisco, for their attitude toward the California members. Cooper defended Hearst and called attention to the fact that Johnson was in a republican district; that he boldly championed the funding bill and was buried under a majority of 5,000. He said it was the people who did it, not Hearst.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 9.—The house finished the debate on the Pacific funding bill and it is now ready for a vote.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Jan. 6.—The largest number of patents ever issued in any one week was 516, on December 29, 1896. Iowa is represented in that number by 13, Nebraska by 4, Kansas by 6, Minnesota by 8, New York by 91 and Pennsylvania by 67. Patents have been allowed but not yet issued, as follows: To G. R. Back, of Gothenburg, Neb., for a design for a brush for killing flies. To G. B. Nelson, of Redfield, Ia., for a tool for opening boxes, etc. A multiple fulcrum combined therewith adapts it to be used advantageously as a lever for many purposes. To J. A. Norton, of Odebolt, for an improvement of his table attachment for beds, for which a patent was issued on the 29th ult. To J. K. Uhr, of Eagle Grove, for a transformable door adapted for use in winter as a storm door and in summer as a screen door. To G. P. Bump, of Lynnville, for a rotary engine that he has in practical use. To A. Roesch, of Downs, Kansas, for a weed cutter and pulverizer for cultivating corn, etc. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

Danger Environs Us

If we live in a region where malaria is prevalent. It is useless to hope to escape it if unprovided with a medicinal safeguard. Wherever the endemic is most prevalent and malignant—in South and Central America, the West Indies and certain portions of Mexico and the Isthmus of Panama, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has proved a remedy for and preventive of the disease in every form. Not less effective is it in curing rheumatism, liver and kidney complaints, dyspepsia, biliousness and nervousness.

NO-TO-BAC FOR FIFTY CENTS.

Millions of men who are daily "Tobacco Spitting and Smoking Their Lives Away" will be glad to learn that the makers of No-To-Bac, the famous guaranteed tobacco habit cure, that has freed over 400,000 tobacco users in the last few years, have put on the market a fifty cent package of their great remedy. This will give every tobacco user a chance to test No-To-Bac's power to control the desire for tobacco in every form and at the same time be benefitted by No-To-Bac's nerve strengthening qualities. Every tobacco user should procure a fifty cent box at once from his druggist or order it by mail. You will be surprised to see how easily and quickly the desire for tobacco disappears. Any reader can obtain a sample and booklet free by addressing the Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or New York, and mentioning this paper.

Jottings From Jasper County.

CULLED AT COLFAX.

An Old Soldier Tells His Tale.

(From the American, Newark, Ohio.)

"Mr. William Winpigler was one of the early settlers of Jasper County, Iowa, and no man from all accounts, is better known than he in the vicinity of Colfax, or more respected. When the civil war was raging he took the field with his comrades of the Forty-eighth Iowa, and while serving his country contracted rheumatism, which assumed the chronic form and seemed to affect his entire body. The following is his own account of his sufferings and cure:

COLFAX, Iowa, July 31st, 1896.

'I contracted rheumatism during my army service, which I could not get rid of and it became worse and worse until I was able to do no labor whatever, and eventually I thought I had not long to live, as my heart was so affected. I was in a very desponding condition, as my worldly affairs were going from bad to worse, when in one of our papers I read of a man who described himself as having been even worse than I was, and who had been cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I procured some, after much trouble, for at that time they were very little known in this part of the state, and none of the druggists in Colfax kept them. I had not taken the contents of one box when my heart trouble disappeared, but I continued to take the pills, and soon found my rheumatism was being rapidly cured. I no longer suffer any rheumatic pain, and I think my cure was a wonderful one after all those years of suffering. I have recommended them to everyone afflicted as I was, and the result is that all the drug stores in Colfax now keep them and sell a great many, and others have been benefited as I was. For a man of my age, (I am 70) I am as active as I can be; more so perhaps than many younger persons who never were crippled with rheumatism. The above is a true statement of fact.

"WILLIAM WINPIGLER."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

A CURE FOR NERVES.

Women Need Excitement and Frivolity More Than Rest.

That disease to which most women succumb sooner or later in their careers has, according to the physicians, two causes—over-excitement or under-excitement—says the New York Journal. Of the two, the former is believed to be the less frequent and the less dangerous. It is the "placid" women leading dull lives in the country and their home-staying city sisters who succumb most frequently to melancholy or some other form of "nerves." Many a mother of a family who is worn out ordering the meals and sending the children to school and with the same things at the same hours of the day for years and years, until she feels like the hapless servant maid, that she could commit suicide because she is tired and has no pretty dresses, needs only a break in the monotony of her life. A little trip among new faces and scenes would send her back with new youth. A night at a gay play with a bunch of violets to tuck in her frock and a bit of a supper afterward might save a spell of nervous prostration, yet her family never think of any such little treat, and she goes on from day to day being killed by the dull monotony of her life. There is a story told of a clever physician who cured a patient fast sinking into a state of melancholia and invalidism with a prescription of an evening gown trimmed with chiffon. In the interest of getting the gown and wearing it to the opera the woman forgot to be sick. It is as essential that the woman whose routine is dull should have occasional outbursts of frivolity as that the woman whose life is a round of excitement should take the rest cure periodically.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S WILL.

A Curious Story About an Architect-Antiquary.

That is a curious story about the will of Sir John Soane, architect-antiquary, who, in 1836, left his house and his collections in Lincoln's Inn Fields to the nation for a museum, says the London Spectator. The will contained a clause that certain receptacles were to be opened at certain dates, and, in 1866, the first of these dates arrived. A cupboard, or rather box, was opened, but nothing was found in it except a quantity of old letters, accounts and stationery of no value to any one. In 1886 a similar ceremony was gone through with the same result and, in 1896, recently, a third receptacle was opened, but nothing was discovered which could account for the testator's careful arrangements. It is suggested that Sir John Soane was playing a practical joke, but apart from the fact that jokers of that sort enjoy nothing so much as the sight of their victims' distress, where in this case is the joke hidden? Who, even among the malicious idiots who indulge in practical joking will laugh? It is much more probable that the receptacles have been quietly rifled, but, then, what was hidden in them? A will cancelling the bequest to the nation is the most probable guess, or an autobiographical memoir, but neither could have been hidden in three boxes, to be opened at three different times. The only object we can even think of is that Sir John wished the interest on certain bonds to accumulate, and took this odd but direct method of insuring that the interest should not be spent. If so, his purpose has been frustrated. Have the receptacles, by the way, been searched for secret drawers?

NEW SCHOOL FOR MONKEYS.

They Will Be Trained for Domestic Servants.

There has just been founded at Calcutta an institution for the education of monkeys, says an exchange. A young monkey is taken and before him is placed a set of blocks on which are painted in capitals the letters of the alphabet. These blocks are, in fact, exactly similar to those which children play with in every civilized country in the world and they are used in precisely the same way as if the monkey were a young specimen of the human race. There is one professor for each monkey and the monkey is taught by means of the blocks to spell certain words. If the word is "fruit," for example, the monkey, after having been taught to arrange the blocks so as to spell the word quickly and without error, receives a bit of fruit as his reward. The same exercise is repeated with other words; and it is hoped that in time the simians will learn how to read and spell and understand English, if they cannot speak it. An effort will also be made, it is said, to educate these beasts so that they may become fairly efficient domestic servants. The school is so young as yet, however, that what it will accomplish is entirely a matter of speculation. Its "professors" are enthusiastic about their novel work and seem to think that a new field of usefulness will be opened up for these chattering little beasts.

The Success of Frank C. Putnam.

The experience of Frank C. Putnam, of Aurora, Hamilton county, Neb., is another proof of the statement that "Nebraska farms pay." Mr. Putnam came to Nebraska in 1872. He had $100 in cash, two beds, a chest for a dinner table and nail kegs for chairs. To-day he owns 560 acres, all improved, fenced and under cultivation. He also owns a good house in Aurora, where he lives. He says: "Every dollar I possess has been made from my farm."

In our "Nebraska Book" (40 pages with maps and illustrations), are dozens of statements like that of Mr. Hotze. They are made by farmers who have made a success of farming. They show that Nebraska is as good a state as any in the Union.

The book in which they appear is as different from the ordinary agricultural pamphlet as day is from night. It is interesting, practical, truthful. In a staightforward, simple fashion, it tells you everything you need to know about Nebraska—its climate, people, schools, churches, railroads, markets, soil and crops. It explains why the Nebraska farmer makes money in spite of low prices and hard times. Why land is cheap. And how it is as easy for an intelligent and industrious man to BUY a Nebraska farm as it is to rent one in any state east of the Missouri river.

Every farm renter who wants to become a farm-owner; every farm-owner who is tired of trying to make money off high-priced land; every father who wants to give his sons a start on the high road to independence, should write for a copy. Free.

The Omaha Weekly Bee AND The Orange Judd Farmer. Both weekly papers for one year, $1.00

The Omaha Weekly Bee AND The Orange Judd Farmer AND The New York Weekly Tribune For one year for $1.25

The Omaha Weekly Bee AND The New York Weekly Tribune Both one year for 90c

The Omaha Weekly Bee Alone—one year for 65c

The BEE contains 12 pages each week, publishing more western news than any other newspaper.

In each issue of THE BEE is also published a number of bright, crisp stories, specially selected for this paper.

The news of the world is given weekly as well as an exhaustive and accurate market report, local and from all the principal markets of the country.

WORD BUILDING CONTEST.

First Prize	$100.00 in Cash
Second Prize	50.00 in Cash
Third Prize	25.00 in Cash
Fourth Prize	15.00 in Cash
Fifth Prize	10.00 in Cash

The above prizes are offered to those who construct or form the largest number of words out of the letters found in the prize word,

under the following regulations and conditions:

The first prize will be won by the largest list, the second prize by the next largest list, and so on to the fifth. The list of words must be written plainly in ink, alphabetically arranged, numbered, signed by the contestant, and sent in not later than February 20, 1897. The list must be composed of English words authorized by at least one of the leading dictionaries—Webster's, Worcester's, the Century or the Standard. If two words are spelled alike only one can be used.

Abbreviations, contractions, obsolete words and proper nouns are not allowed. The same letter must not occur twice in one word, but may be used in other words. In case two or more winning lists contain the same number of words the neatest and best list will take first place, the others ranking next below in the order of quality. Residents of Omaha and winners of former prizes in WORLD-HERALD contests are not permitted to compete directly or indirectly.

No contestant can enter more than one list of words, and each contestant is required to send, in the same letter with his list, one dollar to pay a year's subscription to the OMAHA WEEKLY WORLD-HERALD.

Every competitor whose list contains as many as twenty-five words whether he wins a prize or not, will receive in one paper covered volume of 192 large quarto pages, among the authors being Marion Harland, Rudyard Kipling, H. Rider Haggard, Wilkie Collins and Miss Mulock. Lists cannot be corrected or substituted after they are received.

The list of words winning first prize will be published in the WEEKLY WORLD-HERALD, together with the name and address of each of the prize winners, as soon after the contest closes as the matter can be decided.

The WEEKLY WORLD-HERALD is issued in semi-weekly sections, giving the news twice a week, and hence is nearly as good as a daily. This is the paper of which W. J. Bryan was editor for about two years prior to his nomination for the presidency, and is the leading advocate of free silver coinage. This ad will not appear again. ADDRESS Bad Error.

"That was a rather serious mistake the types made in speaking of Young Golightly."

"In what way?"

"Changed a 'u' into an 'a' and said he was a ragged specimen of athletic manhood."—Detroit Free Press.

Agreed With the Landlady.

Mrs. Feder (reading paper at breakfast table)—More Indian outrages. My, my! How they do fill me with indignation!

Mr. Boarder (with vivid remembrances of corn muffins)—So they do to me, madam. If I were you, I wouldn't attempt to make any more of them.—Richmond Dispatch.

The Copper.

Hargreaves—Do you mean a cent or a policeman?

"A cent, of course."

"Well, I wanted to know, because I was under the impression that policemen did not have to buy anything."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Too Emotional.

"Julia, I never see you at funerals."

"No; when I go, I always cry harder than the widow, and that makes people think I was in love with the man."—Chicago Record.

His Musical Choice.

"Eothen" Kinglake was a great friend of Mme. Olga de Novikoff during her sojourn in England, where one feature of her entertainments was afternoon musicals to which none but dilettanti were invited. On one occasion Kinglake presented himself, and as an intimate of the house was admitted. He retired to a corner and listened attentively. Madame was surprised, but pleased, and approaching him said: "Which order of music do you prefer, my friend—classic, Italian or the Wagnerian school? I fancy you do not know our great Glinka?" "I assuredly am fond of music," he answered, "but my taste is perhaps peculiar. As an instrument I prefer the drum." Madame took measures to prevent his being admitted to these assemblies again.

English Ship Names.

The naming of ships is one of the difficulties that the admiralty overcome by using the old names over and over again. To adopt a new name into the navy seriously interferes with the service signal books.

The old names are in the code, and are as convenient for the ships of today as for those of Nelson's time. But the introduction of a new name necessitates an alteration in all the books. That is why the old names survive generation after generation.—London World.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

If a girl is not pretty she can easily make up for it.

Some preachers forget that sheep do not stand on their hind legs to eat.

There is no use being absurdly practical if you really want to enjoy life.

Many people would be more truthful but for their uncontrollable desire to talk.

There would be more harmony in families if brothers did not know each other so well.

People who treat themselves with due respect are seldom worried by impertinences from others.

No business that seeks to accumulate money without creating something of value can be called legitimate.

A vast amount of curiosity comes from the vanity of desiring to know something that somebody else does not.

Women are apt to consider themselves neglected when they do not feel that they are putting some man to inconvenience.

Leisure will always be found by persons who know how to employ their time; those who want time are the people who do nothing.

It is human nature to forget to look back and see what became of the person who gave you a friendly boost over the fence when the bull was coming.

A real Trilby made her debut in New York a few days ago at the Spiritual temple. Her name is Mrs. Ada Gage, and though it is declared that she has never had any education and that she speaks only English, she sang with much feeling a solo in the Genoese dialect while under the control of a medium. She sang several selections in the same way and also played on the piano, selecting the music at the suggestion of the medium.

G. F. Adams of Derry, N. H., belongs to a large family. There were twelve persons present last Thanksgiving who bore the following relation to one another: Great-grandfather, great-grandmother, two grandfathers, two grandmothers, five daughters, two sons, five sisters, five grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, two brothers, three aunts, one uncle, one great-uncle, one niece, two great-aunts, three husbands, two fathers, three mothers, four wives, and grandniece, one grandnephew, two sisters-in-law and two brothers-in-law.

The most remarkable election bet yet recorded has been paid by John Raymond, a farmer living at Winthrop, Conn. The bet was that the loser should drink fifty dippers of hard cider a day for ten consecutive days. His adversary supplied the dipper and got the largest to be found. Winthrop got along fairly well for the first three days. After that he showed evidences of a large-sized jag, which constantly accumulated in size and strength. Later on his friends had to keep him at home by force to keep him from being arrested. But he persevered with a determination worthy of a better cause and completed the wager by drinking sixty gallons of hard cider. Uncle John says that after getting thirty or forty gallons down he saw green faces and many very strange things. The Good Templars of Winthrop now have him on their list.

City farming is likely to become quite a feature in the future, a New York paper says. The fact that at the recent American institute fair a woman who has been farming on vacant lots in this city carried off eight first prizes, three second prizes and two special prizes, amounting to $55, and that several men who have farms similar to hers took prizes amounting to $45, is looked upon by those interested in the vacant lot movement as proof of its success. When the vacant lot plan was suggested several years ago, it was said to be a visionary scheme, and it was urged that poor city people without previous farming experience could not cultivate land with any profit to themselves. The men who were interested in it, however, decided that it should have a fair trial, and they now believe that its success has been demonstrated. The expense of the farms for the last year amounted to $4,500, and the receipts of the planters were $9,500. The Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, under whose management the farms were conducted, received several hundred bushels of potatoes, beets and cabbages for distribution. This association says that an excellent showing was made this summer, despite the fact that it was a bad season for city farming, owing to the early wet weather and the extreme heat that came later.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

IOWA'S FINANCES.

State Auditor McCarthy Issues a Statement in Regard to Them.

DES MOINES, Jan. 16.—State Auditor McCarthy has issued the long-expected statement in regard to the financial condition of the state. The report shows that on January 2 the state had out $593,459.10 in warrants, and that the estimated expenditures for the coming year are $2,243,072.41, thus making the total of estimated warrants for 1897 as $2,836,531.51. The report shows that the cash in the treasury on January 2 was $196,383.40, which, added to the estimated receipts of $2,137,445.68 for the coming year, will make the total resources $2,333,829.08. Add to this the estimated deficit of January 1, 1898, which is $502,702.43, and the total is brought to $2,836,531.51, which makes the balance. The deficit on January 2, 1897, was $397,075.70. Add the additional deficit estimated for the coming year of $105,626.73, and the statement shows that on January 1 next year the state will be $502,702.43 behind. If the appropriation of $101,202 for the institution for feeble minded children is made, as is contemplated, and if the special session of the Twenty-sixth general assembly costs $100,000, as it is estimated it will, the deficit January 1, 1898, will probably be $703,904.43

LIFE OF A HUSBAND SAVED.

Murderous Mystery Unraveling at Burlington.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 17.—On the complaint of a negro, Chief of Police Greiner arrested a traveling fortune teller named James Moody on suspicion of having intended to effect the death of George Jones, a colored plasterer of Burlington, in order to benefit from the $2,000 life insurance which Jones carries. The colored man who makes the allegation said that he had been asked to take a hand in the affair, and charges Moody with being the prime instigator. The informer's story was to the effect that Moody and Mrs. Jones would profit by the death of the latter's husband, the insurance the latter carried being in favor of the former. The informer says that the murder was to have been committed within a few days. If there was any such intention it has been effectually balked by the arrest of Moody, who asserts his innocence.

KILLED HIS FATHER.

Horrible Hunting Accident Takes Place at Clare.

FORT DODGE, Jan. 15.—A horrible affair is reported from Clare, by which Daniel O'Hearne, Sr., lost his life at the hands of his youngest son, purely by accident, but none the less horrible. It seems that the son was preparing or had prepared to go rabbit hunting. He finished loading his gun and started out to the fields. As he passed through the door the gun caught and was discharged. The entire load struck his father in the breast, tearing its way through his breast and killing him almost instantly. Medical aid, being summoned at once, proved unavailing. The son and family are prostrated over the terrible accident.

JAMES WILSON IS IT.

Believed in Washington He Will Be Secretary of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—It is generally accepted as true here that James Wilson, of Iowa, has been decided upon for secretary of agriculture. Senator Allison says he recommended Mr. Wilson when asked to suggest a good western farmer for the place. Mr. Wilson and Major McKinley served together in congress and the fact that both are of Scotch descent is nothing against the Iowa man.

Boys in Trouble.

FORT MADISON, Jan. 16.—Two boys placed a "push" car on the track of the Chicago, Fort Madison & Des Moines railroad just outside of town, intending to coast down hill. A freight came in sight and realizing what they had done they ran away. They are in jail, and while the offense is punishable by imprisonment for five years, it is believed they will not be prosecuted.

Brother Killed at Alice.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 18.—Word comes from Alice that Aaron and Clint Elliot quarreled over some matter as yet unknown. Clint called at Aaron's home with a gun. Aaron tried to take it from him but was unable, and thereupon started to run. Clint fired, the charge hitting him in the side, inflicting a wound from which he cannot recover. Clint is at large.

Killed in a Runaway.

CORNING, Jan. 16.—Ed Jennings, of Prescott, was killed. He was hauling a load of hay, when it upset and the team started to run away. He became entangled in the lines, and his neck was broken. Mr. Jennings leaves a small family to mourn his loss.

SENSATION AT BEDFORD.

BEDFORD, Jan. 16.—William Friend has been incarcerated here on the charge of murdering his wife, who died at the farm home near Siam, on January 2, of strychnine poisoning. It is said Friend went to Hopkins and secured some strychnine for rats. He also got some headache capsules for his wife. It is supposed he removed the contents of the capsules and inserted strychnine, for Mrs. Friend died shortly after taking one of the capsules. The coroner's jury decided it was a case of suicide.

POSTMASTER SHORT.

Thomas Carey, Postmaster at Modale, Guilty of Embezzlement.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Jan. 18.—Thomas Carey, postmaster at Modale, was recently discoved to be short in his acconnts $208. The bondsmen fixed the matter and Carey went on a protracted drunk. The officers got after him and he was brought before Commissioner Steadman to answer to the charge of embezzlement. He entered a plea of guilty, declaring that he used the money to buy medicine for his sick family when he had no money of his own.

OFFICER FATALLY STABBED.

Knife Wounds Inflicted at a Rock Rapids Dance.

ROCK RAPIDS, Jan. 18.—Ex-Sheriff J. D. Wilson was seriously stabbed by Jesse Whipkey at a dance in Mr. Wilson's hall. The wound is pronounced a dangerous one, being near the heart. Charles Wellington, deputy marshal, in attempting to arrest Whipkey, was seriously cut on the arm. Whipkey escaped and is still at large. He was arrested a short time ago for raising a row at a dance, and was allowed to go on promise of good behavior.

Robbed His Employer.

LYONS, Jan. 16.—Several months ago the residence of D. J. Batchelder, the wealthy retired lumberman, was entered and several hundred dollars in money, silverware and diamonds were taken. The robbery was committed in daylight and there was no clue. The coachman, Peter Nelson, has just been arrested, charged with the crime, and will be taken before the grand jury, now in session.

Mrs. Turney Asks $10,000.

DES MOINES, Jan. 18.—It is said that Mrs. Turney, mother of Chester Turney, will file a petition with the legislature asking indemnity amounting to $10,000 for the alleged unlawful conviction and wrongful imprisonment of her son in Anamosa penitentiary. She is said to be hard at work among the legislators seeking support for the claim.

Lindley Gets Bail.

HUMBOLDT, Jan. 15.—Scott Lindley, defaulting treasurer of Humboldt county, has furnished bonds in the sum of $15,000 and has been released from jail. The board of supervisors is investigating the shortage, and it has been given out that $60,000 will be nearer the amount than $30,000.

Tried to Commit Suicide.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Jan. 15.—John Huntington, Sr., tried to kill himself with ammonia at the house of his son in Oakland. He is in a precarious condition.

IOWA CONDENSED.

O'Brien Bros., owners of a big furniture store in Webster City, have turned their property over to the Hamilton County State Bank. The bank holds a mortgage of $2,500. Other secured claims are in the neighborhood of $6,000, while the total liabilities will reach about $15,000.

A sad accident occurred one mile north of Woodward, a few days ago, causing a young man to lose his life. Thos. Darner, returning home on horseback from a hunting trip, accidently shot himself in the leg. The limb was amputated, but the physicians were unable to save his life, the patient dying within a few hours.

At Iowa City recently in broad daylight two men robbed J. J. Barboka of six hundred dollars worth of diamond rings. While one man held the jeweler's attention with a watch that required repairing the other stealthily opened a showcase and abstracted the rings. The merchant detected the robbery immediately after the smaller thief left, and he locked the first man in the store while he summoned the police. The confederate escaped with his booty. The man in custody says his name is Henry Black and claims he is traveling for a "general furnishing" house of Chicago, but he refuses to give the name of the firm. At night burglars entered a private residence and robbed a half dozen students. The most notable was the stealing of twelve gold and three silver medals, the complete set of trophies representing the sprinting championship of Iowa. They were the property of John Prall, the successor to John V. Crum.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

Story That Uncle Sam Will Help Coerce the Cuban Insurgents.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The World publishes a dispatch from Washington saying: "The agreement between the United States and Spain regarding the terms to be granted to the Cuban insurgents is practically concluded. It is neither a treaty nor a diplomatic memorandum. It is a compact or agreement between the United States and Spain upon the terms that Spain is willing to grant the insurgents. It provides for the capitulation and pardon of the insurgents, for whom General Gomez is expected to sign the treaty. Some minor details are to be arranged and the measure will then be laid before congress. The provisional draft of the new terms was embodied in a lengthy communication addressed to Senor De Lome from Premier Canovas, and brought from Madrid by special messengers. It is believed Secretary Olney has been taken at his word in his offer to compel the insurgents to accept autonomy."

HAVANA, Jan. 12.—The town of Arroyo Naranjo, seven miles from Havana, was captured by insurgents. The garrison and authorities made no resistance.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Press claims to have received news through private channels that General Gomez stormed and captured the important city of Santa Clara on January 9, and is now moving on Havana with 18,000 men. The losses were: Spanish—estimated killed and wounded, 900; prisoners, 700; cannon captured, 18; battle standards, 4; rifles in Spanish arsenal, 5,000, with plenty of ammunition; Cubans killed and wounded, 1,500, which is 600 more than the Spanish loss. Gomez gave his men only a night's rest. Then leaving a garrison of 1,500 men he pushed on to the west. Those of his men who had no weapons were armed from the Spanish arsenal, so that in fighting men he was nearly as strong as before. No sooner had the news of the fall of Santa Clara reached the planters round about than they began to flock to Gomez's standard. Every mile he went he got new recruits. He now has an army of 18,000 well equipped men and is undoubtedly marching on Havana, slowly but surely, and his advance guard is laying in waste the country as they proceed.

CROWDING OUT THE DEAD.

Bodies Being Disinterred to Make Room for More.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Lord George Hamilton, secretary of state for the Indian department, has just sent to the lord mayor the statement upon which the appeal for subscriptions for the relief of the famine sufferers in India will be based. He says that districts with a population of 37,000,000 will be sufferers from famine until the end of March, and that it may continue in some parts until the end of June. In other districts having 44,000,000 of people the distress may deepen with famine for a shorter or longer period, while 6,000,000 people in the native states may be victims of famine. It is estimated that the famine will cost the Indian treasury at least from £4,000,000 to £6,000,000. The Daily Mail's Bombay correspondent reports that in all quarters the famine is daily becoming more severe and widespread. Heartrending scenes are reported from the interior. At Jubbulpore men and women reduced to living skeletons are lying at the road sides. There are terrible scenes at the burial grounds of the Mohammedans, which are much overcrowded, and where the bodies of the plague-stricken victims recently interred are dug up to make room for fresh arrivals.

M'KINLEY'S NEW CARRIAGES.

They Will Have Silver Trimmings and Will Cost $5,000.

CANTON, O., Jan. 16.—For weeks the prominent carriage firms of the country have been endeavoring to obtain an order from Major McKinley for a carriage to be used during his incumbency at the national capital. It remained for a Chicago house to get the order. Major McKinley decided on three carriages, a landau, a cabriolet and a brougham. The carriages are to be finished inside in green morocco, the exterior panels are to be dark green and striped with black, the mountings to be in silver. The cost of these carriages is said to be about $5,000. They are to be delivered in Washington and be at the depot for Major McKinley and family when the latter arrive in the national capital.

MINISTER WILLIS DEAD.

United States Minister to Hawaii Passes Away.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—Advices from Honolulu via the steamer Monowai state that United States Minister Albert S. Willis died in that city on 6th, after several months' illness. The direct cause of his death was pneumonia, which he contracted in San Francisco early last year.

ENGLAND SUCCEEDS RUSSIA.

New Arbitration Treaty Means a Diplomatic Readjustment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Secretary Olney, replying to a question of the Russian minister, E. De Kotzebue, as to whether the arbitration treaty with England was offensive and defensive, or anything in the nature of an alliance, said that the question might be answered yes and no. That in theory and diplomatic acceptance it was not an alliance, but that it is an alliance in support of the Monroe doctrine, which England recognized by the terms of the Venezuelan treaty. "If the arbitration treaty is ratified," Mr. Olney says, "it practically makes Great Britain our ally for the maintenance and enforcement of the Monroe doctrine." The correspondent of the London Chronicle, commenting upon the above, says: "Mr. Olney recognizes that England is the more natural ally of America than Russia, whose hitherto professed friendship for the United States is merely hatred of England. It is probable that Russia will do her best to persuade the senate not to ratify the treaty." The Chronicle, in an editorial, regards the foregoing matter as of the deepest importance and says that it desires nothing better than that Russia should take the course indicated. "The scales will then fall from American eyes," it concludes.

FIFTEEN ORPHANS BURNED.

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 18.—Fifteen little girls and boys are dead as a result of a fire at the Buckner Orphan Home, and nine others are seriously burned and crushed. Three of the injured, it is thought, cannot recover. The fire completely destroyed the boys' dormitory. At first it was thought that only five children had been burned to death. When the ashes had cooled enough to admit of search, scores of sympathizing friends and neighbors began the task of finding the bodies of the five whom it was known had perished. The search had hardly been instituted when the five bodies in the ashes appeared. The search was continued until dawn, when fifteen bodies had been found.

ACCEPTED BY SHERMAN.

Ohio Senator Announces His Intention to Enter the Cabinet.

CANTON, O., Jan. 7.—President-elect McKinley has chosen United States Senator John Sherman for the office of secretary of state. The venerable but vigorous statesman who was in the cabinet of President Hayes as secretary of the treasury and has been a distinguished senator since 1861, except for his term in the cabinet, made a special trip from Washington to Canton to formally accept the tender of the first portfolio. After his conference with Major McKinley, Senator Sherman announced that he had accepted the state portfolio.

Hanna for Senator.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 18.—A local paper says: Mark Hanna will announce himself as a candidate for United States senator. He made this admission to ex-Congressman Henry L. Morey, of Hamilton, who came to Cleveland as the accredited representative of Senator Foraker. "I will announce my candidacy," said the national chairman, "and I believe I am capable of winning the fight alone. We believe that we are entitled to the place."

Five Boys Burned to Death.

DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 16.—A portion of the Buckner's Orphan Home, in the suburbs of Dallas, burned at midnight. Five boys perished and a number of others were injured.

BREVITIES.

Attorney General Harmon was questioned a few days ago as to the course the government would pursue in respect to the Pacific railroads, since the funding bill has failed. He declined to say more than that some action would probably be taken within thirty days. He believed the first step to be against the United Pacific, inasmuch as foreclosure proceedings against that road are now pending in court.

The English foreign office recently received private confirmation of the news from Bonny, on the Guinea coast, telling of the massacre of Consul Phillips and his companions while on a peaceful mission to Benin City. The news has created a great sensation, as the victims are well known. It is stated in the foreign office advices that the party was unarmed when it left the consulate at Benin. They were surprised and massacred on the frontier territory of Benin City. The object of the murder is not yet known. Benin City is within the Niger protectorate, and is sixty miles up the river Benin. The population is 50,000 and is governed by a fetish priesthood, which is notorious for human sacrifice. It is thought that the massacre is possibly connected with the recent escape of the king of the Okria tribe to New Calabar, who was captured by the British.

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER VIII.—(CONTINUED.)

"It is of no consequence," replied the former, turning to the marquis with some quiet remark concerning the weather.

The count bustled away from the room. The countess then earnestly inquired concerning all the turbulent movements in Paris, and the marquis was much impressed by the good sense and intelligence of her remarks.

"What!" thought he, "is that obtuse Languedoc ignorant of the superiority of the wife he treats so slightingly?"

He might have guessed that this very superiority was cause enough for slight from such a little nature as the count's.

The count came back in the highest spirits.

"Excellent, excellent, De Berri, our most sanguine hopes are fulfilled. M. Pierre assures me that the utmost quiet reigns in this little corner of the country. It is our salvation that it is so remote from Paris. He did not seem aware of anything which had taken place there, and I thought it best not to enlighten him. We shall have ample time for preparation, and shall set sail from Frejus with our valuables."

"That is as remarkable as propitious," observed the marquis. "Are you sure this man has means of observation?"

"Certainly; a more faithful, trustworthy fellow cannot be found in all Europe."

The countess and her daughter exchanged glances. In the face of their knowledge it was certainly painfully ludicrous—this complaisance and self-sufficiency of the count's. The marquis did not lose this little by-play of dumb talk between the ladies.

"We must not be over confident," said he, "there is too much at stake to peril it lightly."

"Oh, no," responded the count, rubbing his hands briskly, and acting like a person just emerging from a nightmare of horror into perfect security. "But we can afford to take Pierre's word, I will give warant of that."

The countess opened her lips, and then closed them again, casting at the same time beseeching looks at Felicie. The latter spoke at once.

"But, papa, I do not in the least share your confidence. I can tell you something that will shake your faith in that odious M. Pierre."

"Odious M. Pierre! yes, that is it. Your ladyship has used my absence skillfully; you have instilled into the girl your own absurd and shameful antipathy to my favorite agent!" exclaimed the count, turning angrily to his wife.

She bit her lips ere she answered, with the utmost coolness:

"Felicie will assure you her prejudices are her own. But pray let us leave so disagreeable a subject. I think I hear the bell which summons us to the dining-room; I am sure you must be ready for the repast."

The marquis gave her his arm, and Felicie went out with her father. The latter recovered his good humor at the table, and drank to the health of the future Marchioness De Berri. His daughter received it in silence.

"Edward should be here to respond," said the marquis, gayly, "but I trust a week from this will give him the privilege."

The ladies retired early, leaving the gentlemen to their wine.

"Mamma," exclaimed Felicie, "what is to be done? Papa will never credit our story, so obstinately does he pin his faith upon M. Pierre. And if we tell it, he will carry it at once to M. Pierre, and will not that ruin all?"

The countess sighed bitterly.

"I cherished the hope that he would at least give me credit for veracity. His mistaken confidence in that villain will greatly embarrass us. It will never do to risk the destruction of all by allowing M. Pierre to hear of our discovery. I see only one method."

"I know what that is, mamma. Wait until Emile comes, and ask his advice. I shall look for the flowers every morning and noon. It seems best to me, also."

"You have guessed my decision. And about the marquis and the marriage, Felicie?"

The girl dropped her head against her mother's shoulder.

"I am a coward, mamma, after all my brave talk. I dare not oppose my father's will. Besides, since Emile has seen him and pronounced him worthy, I do not feel so desperately miserable."

The countess kissed her fondly.

"Dear child, Heaven grant there may be no risk. His father is very prepossessing."

"Yes. I wonder how he came to be so intimate with papa, he is so different."

"Hush, my child, do not forget your filial respect."

Felicie accepted the reproof without comment, but as she contrasted this careful respect of her mother's with the tantalizing behavior of the count, she found it impossible not to reiterate her indignation mentally.

The next day the two gentlemen rode over to Frejus, dressed very plainly, and quite unattended. M. Pierre watched them ride away with malignant glee.

"There go two simpletons on a fool's errand," muttered he. "Do they expect all the people to come forward and inform them of the intended revolt? Much wiser may they be on their return."

CHAPTER IX.

THE marquis looked grave as he again entered the drawing room, and the countess hastily inquired:

"No ill news, I hope?"

"Nothing definite; but I am painfully anxious for my son's arrival. I don't fully share the count's confidence. There was a dogged, sullen look on some faces to-day, and on others a suppressed exultation, which suggests to me that Parisian doings are not entirely unknown. Some terrible thing has happened in Versailles, for one man muttered, when he thought the count was too far away to hear, 'What do you think of Versailles? How many are left of the Guards?' Ah, madam, I fear everything horrible!"

The countess sighed, but would not add to his disquietude by the revelations in her power to disclose.

The days wore on into weeks; the weeks became a month. Continual reports of additional horrors arrived, but no sign of the Marquis Edward. In vain, also, Lady Felicie strolled off morning after morning, to the meadow bridge. No longed-for blossoms appeared. If Emile lingered much longer the chilly winter winds would despoil them all. The father was restless and miserable, and dared not return to search for his son. The count, too, grew anxious and less confident. It was a terribly trying time for all. The countess wasted away fearfully; the suspense seemed consuming her very life. M. Pierre still remained with them, and outwardly everything proceeded calmly; but what a feverish tide surged and throbbed beneath the assumed mask of indifference on all sides.

The count and his noble guest were pacing the terrace just at twilight one October afternoon, when a ragged figure, in a rough peasant blouse, came slowly up the avenue. The count lifted his arm in a gesture of rebuke for the presumption, but the forlorn-looking creature gave no heed, only hurriedly approached nearer. Suddenly the marquis with a sob of relief and astonishment rushed to meet him.

"Edward! Good Heavens! In what a plight!"

"Yes, my father. Thank Heaven, I have reached you at last, but I am nearly dead with exposure and suffering," exclaimed the youth, and as he spoke he tottered and would have fallen but for the father's outstretched arm.

They carried him into the house through the balcony window, to save the prying curiosity of the servants, and so came most abruptly upon the countess and her daughter in the little parlor they had used constantly since the count's return. Lady Felicie's first view of her betrothed husband was certainly not a very flattering one. The pale face, the disordered hair, the rough, stained clothing might well change poor Edward's appearance. She retreated in dismay, and left them busily restoring animation to the half insensible youth. When at length she summoned courage to return, he had been moved into an adjoining chamber. Her mother came out, and flinging her arms around her neck, fairly sobbed.

"What is it, dear mamma?" exclaimed Felicie.

"Oh, my child, what horrible times have we fallen upon! That poor youth has narrowly escaped with his life. He has been in prison all of this time; he escaped the day after a fearful massacre. The palace was sacked, the Guards cut down; more than twenty thousand souls sent into eternity. The poor king and the royal family are close prisoners. La Fayette, himself, is denounced, and has fled to Germany. The whole land will be steeped in blood."

"But now the Marquis Edward has come, we shall all escape," said Felicie, soothingly, alarmed at the fixed look of anguish on her mother's face.

"Heaven grant it, my child; for you, at least, may there be safety, but a wild foreboding has seized me; I cannot shake it off."

"Hush, hush, my precious mamma, my blessed one, you are nervous and excited. Perhaps, Emile has come, likewise. Oh, do not give way, you who are all my support and strength."

The noble mother clasped her daughter closely in her arms, closed her eyes, and Felicie saw her lips moving in fervent prayer. After that she smiled calmly.

"It is indeed wrong in me to frighten you, my Felicie; the weakness is over. Whatever it may be, I accept my fate humbly, as the portion dealt out to me by Heaven."

How often afterward did these thrilling words return to the tender daughter! How much comfort and grace did they pour into her bleeding, mournful heart!

"Some one aided him. It was a strange name—the Gray Falcon, I think he called it."

"It was not Emile, then. Somehow I fancied it might be this which detained him so long."

At this moment the count came into the apartment; he was fairly trembling with terror.

"Make ready for instant departure, Violante," said he; "the moment Edward is able to be moved, the marriage must take place, and an hour afterward must see us on the road to St. Joseph, where a fishing vessel lies waiting for us. The marquis and myself have converted everything possible into diamonds, and we shall not need to burden ourselves with anything bulky. We might take the plate, if it can be packed without discovery by the servants. No one but M. Pierre will know of our movements, till too late to hinder."

"M. Pierre!" exclaimed both mother and daughter, in horror.

"The old story!" ejaculated the count, angrily; "one would think at this awful time you might put aside this perversity."

"Count Languedoc, if you confide in that man, you are ruined; the horrors which come, whatever they may be, will lie upon your own conscience. Believe me, I beseech you, for this once in your life. M. Pierre is the leader of the band who wait but the signal for murdering us all," cried the countess, sternly.

"A pretty accusation to bring forward against a faithful fellow I have known and trusted for years; he is as anxious and alarmed as any one of us."

"He is an artful knave, indeed, if he has won your confidence so thoroughly that you will accept his word in contradiction to your wife and child," retorted the countess, bitterly.

"Oh, papa, papa, believe us," cried Felicie, "we have proof of his treachery, we heard with our own ears, we saw with our own eyes—"

"Tell me precisely what you accuse him of, what is your proof?"

"I will gladly do it, if you will assure me that you will not carry the story to him."

"Ah," sneered the count, "you will not allow him the opportunity to clear himself. I shall give you no such assurance, for I should certainly allow him to vindicate his honesty."

The countess wrung her hands.

"Perverse to the last! Immovable as a rock! What can we do?"

"Obey my instructions, get ready your clothing, and have a bridal dress for Felicie. It shall not be said a Languedoc was without fitting wedding garments, even in such a time as this."

The countess and her daughter went silently away. What could be done to convince him of the folly and wickedness of his conduct?

Edward was feverish and too ill to rise the next morning. Much as this delay distressed them, there seemed no other alternative than to be patient. But they were careworn, anxious faces which gathered around the breakfast table. Immediately after the meal, however, Lady Felicie came flying to her mother's side with sparkling eyes. In her hand she held a small nosegay of wild flowers.

"Oh, mamma, I seem to have found strength and safety. Emile is certainly at hand."

The countess' face brightened likewise.

"You found them on the bridge?"

"Yes, yes. What if we go to meet him there at the tree? You know since my father's return, the ghosts have forsaken the woods. He may give us valuable information."

"I will think about it. It will be difficult to elude your father's observation, and he would peremptorily forbid our leaving the house. Yet it is worth the trial."

"You do not look equal to it, ma chere mere. How wan your face has grown! I almost think I have courage to go alone, rather than that you should venture."

No Orphan Asylum in Australia.

Australia has no orphan asylums. Every child who is not supported by parents becomes a ward of the state, and is paid a pension for support, and placed in a private family, where board and clothes are provided until the fourteenth birthday. After that he may be able to go to work, in which case the pension is placed to his credit until the age of eighteen, when he becomes a citizen, with a balance due to him from the state to begin life with. This inculcates a humane, charitable and responsible spirit in all residents, decreases the chances of pauperism, and places every young man on a fair and square footing with the world.

MONETARY CONFERENCE.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 13.—The national conference of representatives from commercial clubs of the leading cities to consider a plan for improving the currency, was called to order by Chairman Hugh Hanna. E. O. Stanard of St. Louis was made temporary chairman. He advocated the retirement of the treasury notes and wanted the national bank law amended so as to permit them to issue notes up to the par value of the bonds they hold. Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild addressed the convention, commending its purpose. Committee on credentials reported 270 present. C. Stuart Patterson, of Pennsylvania, was made permanent chairman. J. H. Walker, chairman of the house committee on finance, responded to a call. He said the question must be settled at once in order to avoid a cyclone in 1900. He said the legal tender notes could not be retired, but the current redemption of any form of paper money by the treasury must be stopped. Many propositions for currency reform were submitted and referred to the committee on resolutions. All plans submitted provide for the retirement of the greenbacks; increasing the national bank issue; allowing banks to issue to the par value of the bonds; reducing the tax on national bank circulation from 1 to ¼ of 1 per cent, and favoring a direct resolution from congress maintaining the gold standard.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 14.—The monetary conference, after a debate in which Congressmen Walker and Fowler seemed to be the only advocates of anything else than what was finally declared for, adopted resolutions in which the members declare for the maintenance of the gold standard, the retirement of all classes of United States notes, and for a banking system "that will furnish credit facilities to every portion of the country and an elastic circulation." In order that the conference's suggestions may be carried out, a committee is to be appointed to secure the appointment at the coming special session of congress of a monetary commission to consider the entire question and to report to congress at the earliest possible moment. If the effort to secure this commission fails the committee is authorized to appoint a commission of eleven members who will perform the work and report to a session of the conference to be called for that purpose.

CARRIED INTO LAKE.

MENOMINEE, Mich., Jan. 16.—Nine men were clinging to a block of ice a few rods square driven out of Green Bay into Lake Michigan by a fierce southerly gale. The wind was blowing thirty miles an hour and carried a zero temperature and an occasional snow squall. The men were fishermen, clad only in the none too heavy garb worn while tending their nets, and there is little possibility that they will be rescued.

FOR LIFE IN CHAINS.

HAVANA, Jan. 15.—Luis Someillan, the naturalized American citizen, has been found guilty of conspiring against the Spanish government. The sentence of the tribunal before which he was tried is that he be imprisoned for life in chains. Someillan's lawyer will appeal to the supreme court at Madrid against the decision of the Havana tribunal.

Platt New York's Senator.

ALBANY, Jan. 15.—The republican legislative caucus nominated Thomas C. Platt for senator to succeed D. B. Hill. The vote was 142 for Platt and 7 for Choate, with two absent.

Madden Withdraws.

SPRING FIELD, Ill., Jan. 15.—Martin B. Madden has withdrawn from the race for senator, throwing his forces to Mason.

PATENT LAW PRACTICE.

DES MOINES, Jan. 12.—A correspondent at Laurens, Iowa, asks, "What liability attaches to an applicant for a patent who proceeds to manufacture the article for which the patent is applied before the patent is granted in case the application should be refused?" Answer:—As a rule when an inventor applies for a patent in good faith and finds he has been anticipated and that his invention is subordinate to a prior patent and then quits, that is the end of the matter. But at the same time he would be liable if prosecuted for infringement and the general rules concerning damages will apply. But the fact that the infringer supposed himself to be the first original inventor of the subject matter covered by a prior patent can be plead as a mitigating fact that the courts will recognize and be lenient as possible to the infringer. GOOD AND EVIL PERIODS IN HUMAN LIFE.

Readings by Mail Becoming a Popular Feature of This Department—Further Instructions to Applicants—Free Readings.

THE astrologer again calls the attention of applicants for free readings in this column to the fact that full name and address plainly written must accompany every request. Only the initials will be published when the readings appear. In case that the applicant does not wish us to use initials, some other means of identification can be given. Such as "Lorene" Topeka, or any other name the applicant may choose. Those who have neglected to send in full name and address with their applications should do so as soon as possible. It is often necessary to send special instructions. Those who do not know the hour or date of birth should send TWO 2 cent stamps for particulars. Their horoscopes can be made by the astrologer's system of calculation.

Our private readings by mail are becoming very popular. Applicants for private readings must enclose 26 cents in stamps. The horoscope will be read at once and forwarded to the applicant's address. Persons who do not wish to wait for newspaper reading can avail themselves of this means of getting a quick reading. Address Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 So. Clinton, St., Chicago, Ill.

The following are the readings for this week:

Inez M: Avoca, Iowa.

According to the data the sign Libra, which Venus rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Venus is your ruling planet or significator. You are medium height or above; graceful figure; medium to dark complexion; blue eyes; chestnut hair; rather a youthful appearance in general. Your are usually cheerful, jovial, youthful and happy; fond of the fine arts, as music, painting, drawing, sketching, etc.; you take delight in going to theaters, parties, dances, and any place where a good jolly time will be had. You are quite yielding in your nature and very much dislike to see bloodshed. You love to see justice rendered to all and would make a good teacher or judge. You will have a very eventful life and be a great traveler. You are not promised an early marriage but your husband will be a model man and marriage will be far more than average fortunate for you. Space is too limited for me to give you his description here.

S. A. C: Clarksville, Iowa.

According to data you are a mixture of the signs Scorpio which Mars rules and Sagittarius which Jupiter rules, therefore Mars and Jupiter are your ruling planets or significators. Saturn is co-significator because on the ascendant. You are medium height or above; medium to dark complexion, hair and eyes; full face; the hair grows very luxuriant. You are very energetic and ambitious; you naturally take the lead in anything you become interested in. You dislike a subordinate position of any kind and should always be at the head of your department. You will be subject to chronic headaches in the early part of life. You have a fine intellect and can readily learn almost anything. You also have very good command of language. You are quite secretive in your nature and do not tell everything you know. You should secure a finished education and make a salaried position your main object by which to secure your money. You will not be very fortunate in anything connected with love and marriage.

"Lorene:" Topeka Kansas.

You have a refined, sensitive and confiding nature and anything rough or boisterous jars on your nervous system and has a tendency to reduce your vital force. You will manifest considerable enthusiasm with very little encouragement and will appreciate and treasure up a kind word to the same extent that you will remember an injury if anyone abuses you. You will forgive but cannot forget them. Your talent runs in the direction of some of the fine arts but whenever you have made any attempts to study anything you have found it necessary to overcome obstacles in your path. You are a firm friend on every occasion. Your love affairs do not run smooth long at a time and if married, your husband has a spirited temper and will not permit anyone to interfere with his business no matter if he is right or wrong and as a rule he is not able to successfully execute what he plans.

Dows, Jan. 15.—Our town was startled yesterday morning to learn that Lulu E. Jameson died Wednesday night. She was taken with diphtheria some weeks ago. She was a bright and most loveable child, in her twelfth year, the only daughter of G. G. Jameson, the banker. But a day or two before her death the report was "She is doing nicely." She was buried at an early hour yesterday in Mount Hope. This makes eight deaths from the terrible malady.

STORMING THE HEIGHTS OF LEAGUED OPPRESSION.

ERUBBABEL! Who owned that difficult name, in which three times the letter "b" occurs, disposing most people to stammer in the pronunciation? Zerubbabel was the splendid man called to rebuild the destroyed Temple at Jerusalem. Stone for the building had been quarried, and the trowel had rung at the laying of the corner-stone, and all went well, when the Cuthaeans offered to help in the work. They were a bad lot of people, and Zerubbabel declined their help, and then the trouble began The Cuthaeans prejudiced the Secretary of the Treasury against Zerubbabel, so that the wages of the carpenters and masons could not be paid, and the heavy cedar timbers which had been dragged from Mount Lebanon to the Mediterranean and floated in rafts from Beyrout to Joppa, and were to be drawn by ox team from Joppa to Jerusalem, had halted, and as a result of the work of those jealous Cuthaeans for sixteen years the building of the Temple was stopped. But after sixteen years, Zerubabbel, the mighty soul, got a new call from God to go ahead with the Temple building, and the Angel of the Lord in substance said: "They have piled up obstacles in the way of Zerubbabel until they have become as a mountain, height above height, crag above crag; but it shall all be thundered down and made flat and smooth as the floor of a house. 'Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain.'"

Well, the Cuthaeans are not all dead yet. They are busy in every neighborhood and every city and every nation of every age, heaping obstacles in the way of the cause of God. They have piled up hindrances above hindrances until they have become a hill, and the hill has become a mountain, and the mountain has become an Alp, and there it stands, right in the way of all movements for the world's salvation. Some people are so discouraged about the height and breadth of this mountain in front of them that they have done nothing for sixteen years and many of those who are at work trying to do something toward removing the mountain toil in such a way that I can see they have not much faith that the mountain of hindrances will ever be removed. They feel they must do their duty, but they feel all the time—I can hear it in their prayers and exhortations—that they are striking their pickaxes and shovels into the side of the Rocky Mountains. If the good Lord will help me while I preach I will give you the names of some of the high mountains which are really in the way, and then show you that those mountains are to be prostrated, torn down, ground up, leveled, put out of sight forever. "Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain."

First, there is the Mountain of Prejudice, as long as a range of the Pyrenees. Prejudice against the Bible as a dull book, an inconsistent book, a cruel book, an unclean book, and in every way an unfit book. The most of them have never read it. They think the strata of the rocks contradict the account in Genesis. The poor souls do not know that the Mosaic account agrees exactly with the geological account. No violin or flute ever were in better accord. By crowbar and pickaxe and shovel and blasting powder the geologist goes down in the earth and says, "The first thing created in the furnishing of the earth was the plants." Moses says, "Ay! I told you that in the Book of Genesis: 'The earth brought fourth grass and herb, yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit.'" The geologist goes on digging in the earth, and says, "The next thing in the furnishing of the earth was the making of the creatures of the sea." Moses says, "Ay! I told you that was next in the Book of Genesis: 'God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creatures that have life; and God created great whales.'" The geologist goes on digging, and says, "The next thing in the furnishing of the earth was the creation of the cattle and the reptiles and the beasts of the field." "Ay!" says Moses, "I told you that was next in the first chapter of Genesis: 'And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind.'" The geologist goes on digging in the earth, and says, "The next creature was the human family. "Ay!" says Moses, "I told you that was next in the Book of Genesis: 'So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.'" Those prejudiced against the Bible do not know that the explorations in Egypt and Palestine and Syria are confirming the Scriptures,—the same facts written on monuments and on walls of exhumed cities as written in the Bible. The city of Pithom has been unburied, and its bricks are found to have been made without straw, exactly corresponding with the Bible story of the persecuted Hebrews. On terra cotta cylinder recently brought up from thousands of years of burial, the capture of Babylon by Cyrus is told. On a Babylonian gem recently found are the figures of a tree, a man, a woman, and a serpent, and the hands of the man and woman are stretched up toward the tree as if to pluck the fruit. Thus the Bible story of the Fall is confirmed.

In a museum at Constantinople you see a piece of the wall that once in the ancient Temple of Jerusalem separated the court of the Gentiles and the court of the Israelites, to which Paul refers when he says of Christ, "He is our peace, who hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." On tablets recently discovered have been found the names of prominent men of the Bible, spelled a little different, according to the demands of ancient language. "Adamu" for Adam, "Abramn" for Abraham, "Ablu" for Abel, and so on. Twenty-two feet under ground has been found a seal inscribed with the words "Haggai, son of Shebaniah," thousands of years ago cut, showing that the Prophet Haggai, who wrote a part of the Bible, was not a myth. The Royal Engineers have found, eighty feet below the surface of the ground at Jerusalem, Phoenician pottery and hewn stones with inscriptions, showing that they were furnished by Hiram, King of Tyre, just as the Bible says they were. The great names of Bible history, that many suppose are names of imaginary beings, are found cut into imperishable stones which have within a few years been rolled up from their entombment of ages, such as Sennacherib and Tiglath-Pileser. On the edge of a bronzed step, and on burned brick has been found the name of Nebuchadnezzar. Henry Rawlinson and Oppert and Hincks, and Palestine exploration societies, and Asyriologists, and Egyptologists, have rolled another Bible up from the depths of the earth, and lo! it corresponds exactly with our Bible, the rock Bible just like the printed Bible, inscriptions on cylinders and brick-work cut thirty-eight hundred years before Christ testifying to the truth of what we read eighteen hundred and ninety-seven years after Christ. The story of the Tower of Babel has been confirmed by the fact that recently at Babel an oblong pile of brick one hundred and ten feet high evidences the remains of a fallen tower. In the Inspired Book of Ezra we read of the great and noble Asnapper, a name that meant nothing especial, until recently, in pried-up Egyptian sculpture, we have the story there told of him as a great hunter as well as a great warrior. What I say now is news to those prejudiced against the Bible. They are so far behind the times that they know not that the Old Book is being proved true by the prying eye of the antiquarian and the ringing hammer of the archaeologist and the plunging crowbar of the geologist. No more is infidelity characterized by its blasphemy than by its ignorance, but oh! what a high mountain of prejudice against the Bible, against Christianity, against churches, against all evangelizing enterprises—a mountain that casts its long, black shadows over this continent and over all continents. Geographers tell us that Mount Everest is the highest mountain in the world. Oh, no! The mountain of prejudice against Christianity is higher than the highest crags that dare the lightnings of heaven. Before our Zerubbabel can it ever become a plain?

Yonder also is the Mountain of Crime, with its strata of fraud, and malpractice, and malfeasance, and blackmail, and burglary, and piracy, and embezzlement, and libertinism, and theft, all its heights manned with the desperadoes, the cut-throats, the pick-pockets, the thimble-riggers, the plunderers, the marauders, the pillagers, the corsairs, the wreckers, the bandits, the tricksters, the forgers, the thugs, the garotters, the fire-fiends, the dynamiters, the shoplifters, the kleptomaniacs, the pyromaniacs, the dipsomaniacs, the smugglers, the kidnappers, the Jack Sheppards, the Robert Macaires, and the Macbeths of vilainy. The crimes of the world! Am I not right in calling them, when piled up together, a mountain? But we cannot bring ourselves to appreciate great heights except by comparison. You think of Mount Washington as high, especially those of you who ascended as of old, on muleback, or more recently by rail-train, to the Tip Top House. Oh, no! That is not high! For it is only about six thousand feet, whereas, rising on this western hemisphere are Chimborazo, twenty-one thousand feet high, and Mount Sahama, twenty-three thousand feet high, and Mount Sarota, twenty-four thousand eight hundred feet high. But that is not the highest mountain on the western hemisphere. The highest mountain is the Mountain of Crime, and is it possible that this mountain, before our Zerubbabel, can ever be made a plain?

There is also the Mountain of War, the most volcanic of all mountains,—the Vesuvius which, not content, like the Vesuvius of Italy, with whelming two cities, Herculaneum and Pompeii, has covered with its fiery scoria thousands of cities and would like to whelm all the cities of both hemispheres. Give this mountain full utterance, and it would cover up Washington and New York and London as easily as a householder, with his shovel, at ten o'clock at night banks a grate fire with ashes. This mountain is a pile of fortresses, barricades, and armories, the world's artillery heaped, wheels above wheels, columbiads above columbiads, seventy-four pounders above seventy-four pounders, wrecked nations above wrecked nations. This Mountain of War is not only loaded to cannonade the earth, but it is also a cemetery, holding the corpses of thirty million slain in the wars of Alexander and Cyrus, sixty million slain in Roman wars, one hundred and eighty million slain in war with Turks and Saracens, and holding about thirty-five billion corpses, not million but billion.

"What a hissing, bellowing, tumbling, soaring force is Kilauea! Lake of unquenchable fire: convolutions and paroxysms of flame: elements of nature in torture: torridity and luridity: congregation of dreads: molten horrors: sulphurous abysms: swirling mystery of all time: infinite turbulence: chimney of perdition: wallowing terrors: fifteen acres of threats: glooms insufferable and Dantesque: cauldron stirred by the champion witch of Pandemonium: camp-fire of the armies of Diabolus: wrath of the mountains in full bloom: shimmering incandescence: pyrotechnics of the planet: furnace-blast of the ages: Kilauea!" But, my friends, mightier, higher, vaster, hotter, more raging is the volcanic Mountain of War. It has been blazing for hundreds of years, and will keep on blazing until, until, —but I dare not hazard a prophecy. Can it be that its fires will ever be put out? Can it be that its roar will ever be silenced? Can it be that before our Zerubbabel that blazing mountain will ever become a plain?

Sometimes a general begins a battle before he is ready, because the enemy forces it on him. The general says, "The enemy are pushing us, and so I open battle. We are not sufficient to cope with them, but I hope the reserve forces will come up in time." The battle rages, and the general looks through his field glass at the troops, but ever and anon he sweeps his field-glass backward and upward toward the hill, to see if the reserve forces are coming. "Hard pushed are we!" says the general. "I do wish those reinforcements would come up." After awhile the columns of the advancing cavalry are seen tossing on the ridge of the hill, and then the flash of swords, and then the long lines of mounted troops, their horses in full gallop, and the general says, "All is well. Hold out, my men, a little longer. Let the sergeants ride along the lines and cheer the men and tell them reinforcements are coming." And now the rumbling of the batteries and gun-carriages is distinctly heard, and soon they are in line, and at the first roar of the newly-arrived artillery the enemy, a little while before so jubilant, fall back in wild retreat, their way strewn with canteens and knapsacks and ammunition, that the defeated may be unhindered in their flight. That is just the way now. In this great battle against sin and crime and moral death the enemy seem too much for us. More grogshops than churches. More bad men than good men, and they come up with bravado and the force of great numbers. They have opened battle upon us before we are, in our own strength, ready to meet them, and great are the discouragements. But steady, there! Hold on! Reinforcements are coming. Through the glass of inspiration I look, and see the flash of the sword of "him who hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written King of kings and Lord of lords." All heaven is on our side and is coming to the rescue. I hear the rumbling of the King's artillery, louder than any thunder that ever shook the earth, and with every roll of the ponderous wheels our courage augments, and when these reinforcements from heaven get into line with the forces of God already on earth, all the armies of unrighteousness will see that their hour of doom has come, and will waver and fall back and take flight and nothing be left of them save here and there, strewn by the wayside, an agnostic's pen or a broken decanter or a torn playbill of a debasing amusement or a blasphemous paragraph, or a leper's scale, or a dragon's tooth, to show they ever existed. Let there be cheering all along the lines of Christian workers, over the fact that what the shovels fail to do will be accomplished by the thunder-bolts "Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain."

The mountains look on Marathon,
And Marathon looks on the sea,
Shrine of the mighty can it be
That this is all remains of thee!

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Perkins, of California, presented protest of California legislature against Pacific funding bill. Mills addressed the senate on the Cuban resolution. He attacked the position of President Cleveland, quoted the Monroe doctrine and made a strong plea for the recognition of Cuban independence. After Mr. Mills had concluded the senate drifted into a discussion of the constitutional question of the rights of recognition, in which Messrs. Allen of Nebraska, Hear of Massachusetts, Chilton of Texas, and Morgan of Alabama, took part.

HOUSE.

The Pacific railroad funding bill was laid before the house. Amendment fixing rate of interest at 3 per cent instead of 2, as provided by the bill, was defeated. A substitute giving secretary of the interior and attorney general the power to settle the debts with approval of the president was also defeated The vote on the motion to order a third reading and engrossment on the bill was 168 against to 102 for, and the bill was thus defeated. Powers wanted the bill recommitted to the committee on Pacific roads, but Dockery raised a point of order which Speaker Reed took under consideration. House then went into committee of the whole on the military academy appropriation bill. The bill was passed. Several bills of minor importance passed. Adjourned.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The free homestead bill was under cousideration and was debated by Nelson, Allen, Vilas and Peffer. Hill introduced a bill making the terms of postmasters four years, including fourth-class postmasters, as well as those who now hold their offices at the pleasure of the appointing power.

HOUSE.

Johnson, of California, rose to a question of privilege and replied to an attack made in the Record by Maguire. He acknowledged that he had been indicted for forgery in New York thirty years ago, but had moved to California and tried to do right by paying everything he owed. A motion to expunge Maguire's remarks from the Record carried. Speaker sustained the point of order against recommitting the Pacific funding bill, and the bill is therefore dead. A little business of minor importance was done.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 13.—An executive session was devoted to consideration of treaties between the Orange Free States and the Argentine Republic, the senate finally refusing to agree to the treaties as proposed by Secretary Olney. Bacon, of Georgia, made an address upholding the power of congress to recognize new governments, and made an attack upon one-man power.

HOUSE.

After several minor bills had been passed the house took up a bill to make oleomargarine, butterine and other imitations of dairy products subject to the laws of the state into which they are transported. A big fight resulted and the bill finally went over without action.

HOUSE.

The house spent almost the entire day in debating the imitation butter bill, and the bill was finally passed by a vote of 126 to 96.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The senate to-day passed the measure known as the free homestead bill, which has been under discussion since the holiday recess. The effect of the bill is to open to settlement all public lands acquired from Indians, free of any payment to the government beyond the minor office fees, and to release from payment those who have heretofore settled on these lands. Morgan secured the adoption of a resolution for inquiring as to whether the Union and Centaal Pacific roads now belonged to the United States by reason of default in payment of bonds.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Representative Spencer, of Mississippi, to-day introduced the following bill:

The secretary of state is hereby authorized to offer to the government of Spain a sum of money, not to exceed $200,000,000, for the purchase of the island of Cuba. The sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary to defray the expenses of pending negotiations, is hereby appropriated.

It was private bill day and little of importance was done. An evening session was devoted to pension legislation.

MONETARY CONFERENCE BILL.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Following is the exact wording of the international monetary conference bill, as agreed upon by the republican caucus:

That whenever, after March 4, 1897, the president of the United States shall determine that the United States should be represented at any international conference, called by the United States or any other country, with a view to securing by international agreement a fixity of relative value between gold and silver as money by means of a common ratio between these metals, with free mintage at such ratio, he is hereby authorized to appoint five or more commissioners to such interr ational conference, and for compensation of said commissioners, and for all reasonable expenses connected therewith, to be approved by the secretary of state, including the proportion to be paid by the United States of the joint expenses of any such conferences, the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Most of to-day in the house was devoted to cratorical tributes to the late speaker Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, who died during the recent session of congress. Several bills of little importance were passed.

Roloff is Arrested.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—General Carlos Roloff, secretary of the so-called Cuban republic, was arrested by United States authorities for alleged breach of the neutrality act in connection with a large filibustering expedition which left for Cuba on the steamer Woodal last June. After spending a night in jail he was released on bail.

A Very Popular Calendar.

Few people in these busy days are willing to live without a calendar to mark the passing of time. This fact, no doubt, accounts for the calendars of all kinds, colors, shapes, and sizes which flood the mails at this season. Among them all the one that best suits us is the one issued by N. W. Ayer & Son, the "Keeping Everlastingly At It" Newspaper Advertising Agents of Philadelphia. We have just received our new copy and are fixed for 1897. It is not difficult to see why this calendar is so great a favorite. The figures on it are large enough to be read across a room; its handsome appearance makes it worthy of a place in the best furnished office or library, while it is business-like all the way through. The publishers state that the demand for this calendar has always exceeded the supply. This led them years ago to place it at a nominal price—25 cents, on receipt of which it is sent, postpaid and securely packed, to any address.

A NOBLE WORK.

(From Omaha Christian Advocate.)

There is no one in Omaha or vicinity who has not heard of Mr. N. J. Smith, founder of Rescue Home. He has for a number of years devoted a large share of his time to the work of rescuing the fallen, furnishing aid to those in distress and helping in every way possible those in trouble. He has been in poor health for several years, but all will be pleased to learn that his health is now much better and he is able to take active charge of the mission work, to which he now devotes his entire time.

On January 1st, 1897, he writes as follows: "I have been troubled for several years with a bad cough. I had lung chills and slight hæmorrhage of the lungs and was threatened with consumption. My mother and two sisters having died with consumption, I expected the same fate; but I tried Dr. Kay's Lung Balm, prepared by Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., Omaha, Neb., and two 25c boxes have entirely cured me of my cough and soreness of my lungs. That tired, sleepy and drowsy feeling is all gone and my appetite is now good. I feel well and full of life. I can work night and day and do not feel tired. Praise the Lord for the help it has given me. I write this hoping if any read it who are similarly afflicted and have been unable to get help from any other source, that they will try this excellent remedy, which I believe to be the best cough medicine of which I have any knowledge."

A Bootblack's Novel Scheme.

The most enterprising bootblack in New York is a young negro who has a stand on Columbus avenue, not far from the Natural History Museum. His location is one which does not bring much "transient" trade, but he has a goodly number of regular customers. On days when the weather looks threatening this wise young man issues rain checks, good for twelve hours, so that if it rains and a customer's shine is ruined he gets a new one free of charge. The rain checks are slips of paper with the date and hour written in pencil.—New York Press.

Calendars and Coupons.

So many beautiful calendars and entertaining novelties have been issued by the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that we are hardly surprised to receive this season not only one of the very prettiest designs in calendars, but with it coupons which entitle the recipient to attractive novelties. Every one who gets a Hood's Sarsaparilla calendar for 1897 secures something that will prove interesting and valuable as well as a beautiful specimen of the lithographer's art. The calendar is accompanied this season by an amusing little book on "The Weather." Ask your druggist for Hood's Coupon Calendar, or send 6 cents in stamps for one to C. I Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

The "Rote of the Waves."

It is a favorite theory with the fishing and seafaring people on the northeast of Scotland that in a storm three waves are strong and violent, while the fourth is comparatively weak and less dangerous. This succession they call a "rote of waves." Fishermen returning from their fishing ground often prove by experience the truth of their theory and hang back as they come near the shore to take advantage of the lull that follows, they say, pretty regularly after three big breakers.

RACE OF "LITTLE NIGGERS."

Savage Dwarfs Who Live Near the Bay of Bengal.

In an archipelago in the Bay of Bengal there exists a race of savage dwarfs. Sailors call them "little niggers," because the average height of them is four feet ten inches, the women reaching a stature of four feet seven inches. The oddest thing about these little people, says the San Francisco Chronicle, is that they look like babies all their lives. It is only lately that these dwarfs of the Andaman islands have known how to build fires. There is a volcano on one of these islands, and from this they have procured fresh supplies of fire when necessary, but they know how to keep slow, slumbering embers sufficiently alive not to compel them often to visit the volcano. The thing which has excited their curiosity most of anything introduced by the whites is the friction match. Formerly the dwarfs of the Andamans were accustomed to murder all strangers who reached their shores. Even now sailors wrecked in the Bay of Bengal would probably be massacred. It is believed the inveterate hostility of the "little niggers" arose originally from the cruel practices of the Malays, Burmese and Chinese, who visited the Andamans to get edible birds' nests and sea cucumbers, and who used to capture the little natives and sell them for slaves. There are several shades of color among them, ranging from bronze to shiny black. Their hair is extremely frizzled, growing in spiral tufts. It is fine, and seldom becomes more than two or three inches long. Most of the women shave their heads once a week, leaving only two narrow strips of hair from the crown to the nape of the neck. Many of the men do the same, although the style is different. They leave a patch like a skull cap on the crown of their heads. The most remarkable custom of these little people is the wearing of necklaces of human bones. When a child dies it is buried, only to be dug up again. The father carries the body to the nearest creek and removes the flesh from the bones with the greatest care, carrying them and the skull back to his hut. The mother, after painting the latter with a yellow pigment, hangs it around her neck. Infants' skulls, being fragile, are protected by a covering of string. For a few days a mother will spend all her time stringing the bits of bone into necklaces, to be distributed among her friends as mementoes. These are supposed to ward off disease. Teeth are also strung as necklaces, every native of the Andaman islands wearing a chain of some sort of human bones.

DRIED UP ON AN ISLAND.

Four Sailors Turned Into Mummies by Solar Heat.

"The warmest weather that I ever experienced," writes a navigator who has been all over the world, "was on a small island called John's Biscuit, off Cape Gracias, on the coast of Honduras. The Elizabeth Jennings, on which I sailed in 1870 from Portland, stopped there for water, and a boat's crew went ashore for it. It was a little volcanic island and awful dry and hot. We didn't know whether there would be any water there or not, but we did find a spring with a stream as large as a broomhandle pouring out all the time. And, do you believe me, the water was dried up and soaked up before it had run four feet in the sand. The place was covered with dried trees, and a little distance away was what looked like a hut—a habitation for man. We went in and found the shrunken remains of four men, sailors probably, who had died in one night, to judge from appearances. One was leaning against the wall in a sitting position. There was dry food on the table, dry meat in a box and everything was burning dry.

"A letter in the pocket of one man was dated Liverpool, 1816, and on the table was a bottle with a note in it, evidently intended to be cast adrift. It said they were four English seamen, marooned by the captain, left to die. The note was dated 1816, and I suppose they had been there dead in that hut for over thirty years, and they must have died of heat one day and dried right up. We left them where we found them."

Cripple Creek's Output.

The total output of the Cripple Creek district from 1892 to 1895, inclusive, was $13,700,000. It is expected that this year's output will reach $10,000,000, making a total of $23,700,000. It is claimed that of this year's output $3,500,000 will be net profit to the owners.

Market for Railroad Ties.

It takes each year 200,000 acres of forest to supply crossties for the railroads of the United States. It takes 15,000,000 ties to supply the demand, for which the contractors get on an average 35 cents apiece, making in the aggregate $5,250,000.

A CRY OF WARNING.

"I suffered for years and years with womb and kidney trouble in their worst forms.

"I had terrible pains in my abdomen and back; could hardly drag myself around; had the 'blues' all the time, was cross to every one; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me of all my pains.

"I cannot praise it enough, and cry aloud to all women that their suffering is unnecessary; go to your druggist and get a bottle that you may try it anyway. You owe this chance of recovery to yourself."—MRS. J. STENARD, 2218 Amber St., Kensingston, Phila., Pa.

FIGS AND THISTLES.

Do all you can find to do for the Lord at home, and you will soon believe in foreign missions.

God has declared that the man who brings wicked devices to pass, will soon be out of that business.

Every good man is a lamp which God spares from heaven for awhile, to help give light to the world.

The man has a hard place who has so much religious work on hand, he never has time to pray in secret.

No matter what happens, the Christian should insist on believing that God is doing all things well.

If you are poor, it may be that the Lord wants to show you how rich he can make you without money.

The devil has never been able to make any man dissatisfied with his lot, who had perfect trust in Christ.

The time is flying this way on rapid wings, when the only thing that can prosper in this world is righteousness.

One reason why the world gains knowledge so slowly, is that every child must find out for itself that fire is hot.

The man of faith will not be cast down because there are some people who seem to be making the devil's service pay.

New Line to Washington.

The popular Monon Route has established a new Sleeping Car line to Washington, D. C., via Cincinnati and Parkersburg, by the C. H. & D., B. & O. S. W. and B. & O. Railways. The sleeper is ready for occupancy in Dearborn Station any time after 9 p. m., and leaves at 2:45 a. m. daily, arriving at Washington at 6:47 the following morning. This schedule will be in effect on January 24th, and thereafter. As the sleeper goes through without change, and the hours of leaving and arriving are most convenient, this will prove altogether the most comfortable as well as the most picturesque route to the national capital. The Success of Anton Wenzl.

When Anton Wenzl settled in Pawnee county, Neb., in 1867, he was compelled to work out by the month to support his family. To-day he owns 1,640 acres of the finest farm land, valued at $30 per acre, together with stock and other property valued at $10,000. Every dollar of it was made on the farm. Mr. Wenzl is one of seven brothers whose aggregate land holding amounts to over 5,000 acres.

In our "Nebraska Book" (40 pages with maps and illustrations), are dozens of statements like that of Mr. Hotze. They are made by farmers who have made a success of farming. They show that Nebraska is as good a state as any in the Union.

The book in which they appear is as different from the ordinary agricultural pamphlet as day is from night. It is interesting, practical, truthful. In a straightforward, simple fashion, it tells you everything you need to know about Nebraska—its climate, people, schools, churches, railroads, markets, soil and crops. It explains why the Nebraska farmer makes money in spite of low prices and hard times. Why land is cheap. And how it is as easy for an intelligent and industrious man to BUY a Nebraska farm as it is to rent one in any state east of the Missouri river.

Every farm renter who wants to become a farm-owner; every farm-owner who is tired of trying to make money off high-priced land; every father who wants to give his sons a start on the high road to independence, should write for a copy. Free.

Sunday was the most disagreeable day of the winter. It came very near being a blizzard in the forenoon, quit storm ing about 11.00 o'clock but was very cold. All meetings were poorly attended.

L. G. Hess returned from his visit with his parants and — but Gee says she has gone back on him. Remaining over Sunday with friends here, he returned to Swea City Monday, to take his position in the depot at that place after enjoying a 30 day lay off.

Hans Nissen and wife drove to Goodell Monday evening, taking the editor and family, and Miss Skow along, all attending the 2nd. quarterly conferance. Presiding Elder Yetter, delivered a very interesting sermon, after which the business was attended to.

Minutes seem like hours when a life is at stake. Croup gives no time to send for a doctor, delay may mean death. One Miunte Cough Cure gives instant relief and insures recovery. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. Harr.

The Mens meeting was not well attended. The weather being so severe we think was the cause, but those who did come enjoyed the meeting very much. C. W. Knapp will lead the meeting next Sunday at 3:00 p. m. Let there be a good attendance you will be benefited if you come.

The league supper was a success both socially and financially. A good supper was served, a short but interesting program rendered, and all seemed to enjoy it very much. Mr. and Mrs L. A. Griswold were up from Goodell and asisted with the program. Receipts $9.00.

Chicora, Pa., "Herald:" Richard Vensel reports One Minute Cough Cure the greatest success of medical science. He told us that it cured his whole family of terrible coughs and colds, after all other so called cures had failed entirely. Mr. Vensil said it assisted his children through a very bad siege of measels. One Minute Cough Cure makes expectoration very easy and Rapid. Harr.

DIED.—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs Mart Lau, Tuesday morning, Jan. 19th. 1897. of heart desease. Age 26 days.

The funeral will be held in the German M. E. church Thursday at 2:00 p. m. and buried in the Germantown cemetery. Thus it is that "we know not at what hour the Son of man cometh." This little one was taken up in the morning and fed, as usual, and laid back in bed again, but shortly after when the mother went to the bed, found the child dead. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to these bereaved parents.

There will be an Oyster Supper given in the Bastian building Saturday evening, by the school. Proceeds to be applied towards decorations for the school rooms. This is of public interest and should be well patronized. Supper from 6 p m untill all are served.

Bert Hess came up from Clarion Saturday to visit relatives and—, he stopped at Terhufens. Bert has a good situation in Clarion, and we are confident he will give his employers the best of satisfaction. He returned Monday.

W. F. Jurgens gave his first entertainment Saturday evening to a small audiance on account of the weather being so stormy, but those present report the views very good and the entertainment will be much better when he has a little more experience with the lecture part of the program.

The band concert monday evening was a success considering the weather. The band rendered their numbers in a creditable manner; the solo "In the Shadow of the Pines" by Mrs. Ida Griswold received the most applause, and the recitation "Mrs. McCarthey's Goat" by Chris Blumer was well received. Valuable assistance was rendered by MR. and Mrs. L. A. Griswold of Goodell, and the Misses Hubbard, Terhufen, Haefner and Mrs. Henry. The program was worthy of better patronage but the boys are thankful for small favors.

The progressive ladies of Westfield, Ind., issued a "Woman's Edition" of the Westfield News, bearing date of April 3rd. 1896. THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

No one works hard enough, if he has any time left to talk.

Have some object in life if you really want to know that you are living.

Some natures are never quite contented unless they are being shocked.

There are people who think that they cannot be independent without being abusive.

If most of us had our lives to live over again, we should only make another lot of big mistakes.

How vivid becomes the recollection of an old friend if he lives in a town where you want something done.

People get thanks from employers not for the work they do so much as for the amount of work they can get out of other people.

Woman's intuition is seldom at fault, but it occasionally fails to tell her how to deal with an old beau after she has married the other fellow.

If a mountain should suddenly appear in the middle of Lake Michigan, there would soon be some fellow around claiming that he caused the phenomenon by throwing a brick into the water.

A year ago rumors of wars filled the air. The same rumors are still in the air and statesmen are still jawing each other. They seem to have become inoculated with the contagion that afflicts the pugilists.

Chicago and New York retail merchants have organized to fight the big department stores. These mammoth concerns threaten to drive the small dealers out of business and they are uniting for self-protection. In Chicago the small dealers are securing pledges from the people not to trade at the department stores. It is claimed that real estate has depreciated because small store rooms cannot be rented and that business for the small dealers has been practically ruined.

A tax upon newspaper advertisements has been introduced in the Spanish cortes, and the newspapers of Spain are raising a storm of indignation about it, as it is likely to ruin a great number of provincial newspapers. Publishers and editors have united in addressing the minister of finance in a memorial, protesting against the tax. The minister of finance, however, has declared that he cannot consistently recede from the position he has taken from the first, and since the cortes has decreed that such a tax on advertisements is fair and would increase the revenue of the country, which needs money very badly just now, there will be nothing left to the publishers but to pay up or go out of business.

London is excited just now over a small boy of 8 years, who has the most astonishing knack of sketching portraits ever vouchsafed one so young. The child, called Little Stanley, is the son of a sign-painter and ticket-writer in moderate circumstances. The foundation of the boy's fortunes dates from a recent race meeting, where the Prince of Wales was attracted by a crowd watching the small artist sketch prominent people, rewarding him with pennies. Among the pictures was one of the prince and that gentleman was so pleased he sent the boy a sovereign, which, suitably mounted, he now wears as a locket. A few nights ago the boy appeared at a concert, where were present the Dukes of Cambridge and Teck among other notables and all were surprised at the boy's skill. He can sketch Gladstone in eight and one-half seconds and draws 200 prominent men from memory. He is engaged at a music hall at present.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

NOTORIOUS SEEVERS CASE.

Now On Trial in the Mahaska District Court.

OSKALOOSA, Jan. 24.—The now celebrated case of the state vs. Thomas Seevers, charged with bastardy by Mary Brooks, is on trial in the district court. The board of supervisors tried to have the case dismissed or continued, to save costs, but the motion was overruled. A jury was empanneled and proceedings begun. The case was first brought for damages of $5,000 before the child was born. In place of one child twins were born and the amount was raised to $10,000. Out of the original case came a case against Al Hughes, of Creston, charged with trying to compel Mrs. Brooks to dismiss the case. This affair was written up in a graphic manner by a reporter, the papers printed the correspondence, and out of this came damage suits of $25,000 each against the News, the Farmer and Miner, of Oskaloosa, and the Leader, of Des Moines. The fate of the several cases will depend upon the outcome of the present case.

GUEST IN COMMAND.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 23.—Brigadier General James A. Guest, of Burlington, whom Judge Spurrier, of the Des Moines district court, declared not elected to that office, has been officially recognized as brigadier general of the First brigade, Iowa National Guard, by Governor Drake, acting as commander-in-chief of the state troops, and command issued to him to appoint a staff. Acting on the governor's orders, and despite the contrary decision of the courts, General Guest issued a general order No. 1, dating it headquarters First brigade, Iowa National Guard, Burlington, Iowa, and signs it James A. Guest, Brigadier General commanding. Among the staff officers appointed is Lieutenant Lyman G. Guest, a son of General Guest.

DES MOINES A RACING POINT.

Included in the Western Circuit With Other Good Towns.

OTTUMWA, Jan. 22.—The western circuit of racing, managed by Palmer Clark, of Red Oak, has been completed. It will consist of Denver, Lincoln, Omaha, Sioux City, Des Moines, St. Joseph and Ottumwa. The management of the mile track at Ottumwa announces races for July 13, 14, 15 and 16. The card will be made up of four pacing and four trotting events and one special race each day. Of these a purse of $10,000 is given for 2:12 trotters, one of $5,000 for 2:09 pacers, and one of $3,500 for 2:14 pacers, making $20,000 total purses. Manager B. Williams is a brother of Morris Williams, of Hedrick, who has leased the Des Moines track, and the two tracks will run on a partnership plan.

WARRANT OUT FOR STONE.

Sioux City ex-Bank Cashier is Accused of Forgery and Other Crimes.

SIOUX CITY, Jan. 24.—Warrants for the arrest of Cashier E. P. Stone, of the defunct Sioux City Savings bank, have been issued. The depositors counted on $20,000 of cattle paper in the bank vaults as among the best assets. An investigation failed to discover either the cattle or the makers of the notes, however, and the depositors feared that Stone had forged them. Reports that he had fled increased the excitement and his arrest was resolved on by the depositors. He is charged with forgery, making false reports to the state auditor, and withdrawing the bank's money for his own use and giving in return worthless securities. Stone is said to be in New York.

BUTCHER DISCHARGED.

The Sunday Closing Movement at Atlantic Gets a Black Eye.

ATLANTIC, Jan. 23.—John Bauer, the only butcher to open and do business on Sunday, was arrested under the state law, but at his trial was discharged, the justice ruling that he had a right to keep open until 10 o'clock Sunday morning, as there is a city ordinance to that effect. This is discouraging to the Sunday closing crusaders, who were confident all stores would be closed on that day.

Cohen Goes to the Pen.

WATERLOO, Jan. 23.—By order of Judge Blair a mitimus was placed in the hands of Sheriff Law, ordering him to take Mike Cohen to Anamosa. Cohen was sentenced for four years.

Mrs. Bullard Was Asphyxiated.

BELMOND, Jan. 23.—The coroner's jury has at last decided that Mrs. R. E. Bullard died of asphyxiation by coal gas. She leaves two grown sons.

A Miner Injured.

OSKALOOSA, Jan. 22.—Wm. Davis, an old time miner, was hurt by a fall of slate in the Beacon mines. His injuries are serious and he may die

DES MOINES BANK FAILURE.

German Savings Bank Goes Under Because of Slow Collections.

DES MOINES, Jan. 22.—The German Savings bank has made a general assignment for the benefit of its creditors. Slow collections and extremely hard times are the cause of the bank's embarrassment, which is only temporary. Francis Geneser is president, J. W. Geneser vice-president, and Harry Blackburn cashier of the institution. A notice on the door states that the bank is closed and in the hands of the assignee, Harry Blackburn. The bank was caught for $8,000 in the failure of John L. Wright. The fact caused a run, which the bank could not stand, and, after the clearing house had refused aid, the doors were closed. The assets are said to be $611,000, deposits $540,000, and undivided profits $11,000. Depositors will be paid in full.

PETS CAUSE SICKNESS.

They Transmit Contagious Diseases to Their Owners.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 22.—Two cases wherein contagious diseases have been contracted from animals kept as pets are at hand. Miss Lillie Boyce, of Mason City, is helplessly sick of consumption contracted from a pet dog that is found to have tuberculosis. A child near Decorah contracted scarlet fever from a pet cat, and other cats and pet rabbits in the vicinity are found to be affected.

Jim Paul Convicted of Larceny.

FORT DODGE, Jan. 25.—The noted Jim Paul, recently acquitted on the charge of poisoning his wife at Webster City, has been convicted of grand larceny of a set of harness. This will show to him the inside of the penitentiary. There was a very lively legal fight over the value of the stolen goods, the jury finally placing it above the limit of petit larceny.

Physician Seriously Hurt.

IOWA CITY, Jan. 25.—Dr. Delano, of Lone Tree, met with a very painful accident, and serious results are feared. While dressing a wound his knife slipped and the sharp point penetrated his hand. The wound was a very painful one and blood poison has set in.

Heavy Damages Secured.

CHEROKEE, Jan. 24.—The jury in the case of Martha Lewis vs. the city of Cherokee returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and gave her $3,000. Mrs. Lewis sued the city for $5,000 for injuries received by falling on a defective sidewalk.

President Aylesworh Resigns.

DES MOINES, Jan. 23.—President Aylesworth, of Drake University, has resigned, the resignation to take effect at the close of the winter term. His wife's poor health is the cause, and he will probably remove to Florida or California.

Dougherty Murder Case.

ALBIA, Jan. 22.—W. E. Dougherty and Dr. S. M. King are on trial here for murder. The wife of Dougherty died last September as the result of an abortion alleged to have been produced by the defendants.

Two Miners Killed.

FORT DODGE, Jan. 25.—John Ray and and Peter McClellan, miners for the Pleasant Valley Company, were crushed by falling coal in the mine.

A Switchman Killed.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 22.—John E. Noble, a switchman in the Milwaukee yards, fell under the wheels and was instantly killed.

IOWA CONDENSED.

At Des Moines recently Deputy Sheriff Peterson served a writ of mandamus on Governor F. M. Drake and Adjutant General H. H. Wright. The writ was issued pursuant to the order of the court in the Prime-Guest case.

Engineer C. W. Lamb of Keokuk and Brakeman Frank Lafferty of Eddyville, on the Rock Island passenger, quarrelled at the station at Ottumwa. Lamb started for Lafferty with a hammer. Lafferty picked up a coupling pin and fractured Lamb's skull, inflicting a probably fatal wound. Lamb is in the hospital. Lafferty went on with the train but was arrested on the arrival of the train at Keokuk.

Des Moines dispatch: The movement inaugurated at the recent meeting of the Iowa State Traveling Men's Association for a straight 2-cent 01,00 mile railroad book assumed form at a meeting of the committee appointed through the association, at which it was decided to have printed immediately 5,000 petitions to be distributed over the state. The prospects are that the general assembly will be deluged inside of twenty days with petitions from all over the state asking that 1,000 mile books for 2 cents a mile, with no rebate, be incorporated in the new code. There is another movement on foot for a 2½-cent passenger rate for everybody, which has been working quietly for some time, and which its promoters will spring at what they consider the proper time. The two movements are entirely distinct, but they show in advance something of the railroad agitation that is to be developed during the extra session of the general assembly.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

PACIFIC FORECLOSURE.

The Government Will Push Proceedings Against the Union Pacific.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—It was decided at a cabinet meeting to begin foreclosure proceedings against the Pacific railroads at once. An agreement has been made with the reorganization committee of the Union Pacific company by which the government is guaranteed on its lien on the aided portions of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific lines, including the sinking fund, not less than $45,754,000, and $4,500,000 has been deposited as a guarantee of good faith. It is believed that there will be higher bids, but, if not, an estimate shows that the government will at least realize a sum equivalent to the principal of the subsidy bonds, with interest at about 3 1-3 per cent from their issue to the average date of their maturity, or about 3.45 per cent from date of issue to January 1, 1897. The minimum of $45,754,000 guaranteed the government is in cash, so that all relations with the property will terminate upon the confirmation of the foreclosure sale.

THROWN FROM A TRESTLE.

Three Railway Employes Killed and Other Persons Injured.

BUTLER, Pa., Jan. 25.—One mile east of Shippensville, Clarion county, occurred one of the most frightful wrecks in the history of the Pittsburg & Western railroad, in which three trainmen lost their lives and many passengers were seriously injured. The accident occurred immediately at the sharp curve upon the high trestle which spans Paint Creek. The train was composed of baggage, mail and three passenger coaches, and all went down. At the fatal curve, without a moment's warning to the fireman and engineer, the whole trestle gave way, precipitating the human load fully seventy feet to the depths below. The unfortunate trainmen clung to the engine and baggage car in the wild leap from the heights above and were terribly crushed beneath. Conductor Tonks jumped fully fifty feet in order to save himself, and received injuries which may prove fatal.

WEYLER MUST DO SOMETHING.

The Spanish General Starts Once More After the Enemy.

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—Captain General Weyler, accompanied by his son, aides-de-camp, Chief of Staff Escribano, Colonel Domingo, Governor Porrua, and the chief of police, left the palace in a coach, going by the highway to Luyano, escorted by five squadron of cavalry. It is thought the captain general's intention is to concentrate the Spanish forces on the outskirts of the city, and, it is believed, to advance them eastward and endeavor to compel the insurgents to evacuate Havana province preparatory, possibly, to pushing further eastward to meet the insurgent army under Maximo Gomez. The opponents of General Weyler say that if he returns to Havana again without having accomplished something definite towards the pacification of the island, his recall will follow almost immediately.

NINE PERISH.

QUOGUE, L. I., Jan. 22.—The three-masted schooner Nahum Chapin, Captain Arey, of Rockland, Me., from Baltimore to Boston, with coal, was lost within three hundred yards of shore and her crew of nine men perished miserably within sight of hundreds of men and women who could do nothing to help them. The vessel went ashore at 4 a m. For three hours she pounded up higher and higher upon the hard sandy beach. Then with a crash she went to pieces and one by one the nine sailors on her who could be plainly seen clinging to her rigging, were engulfed with the wreckage and died within hail ing distance of the life-savers on shore.

Traffic Ordered Stopped.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 24.—The government ordered the stoppage February 2 of all pilgrim traffic from Bombay and Karachi, on account of the plague. There are now over 1,750,000 persons employed on relief work and 170,000 receiving gratuitous relief. The principal increase in the number relieved is in Bengal and the northwest.

Lexow After Trusts.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The senate has adopted the resolution presented by Senator Lexow, providing that a special commission investigate trusts and report to the legislature by March with a bill intended to remedy the alleged evils.

Lewelling Again Honored.

TOPEKA, Kansas, Jan. 23.—Ex-Gov. Lewelling has been elected a railroad commissioner by the executive council.

No More Whipping Post.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 24.—A bill was introduced in the state senate abolishing the whipping post and pillory.

SPANISH FORCED TO RETREAT.

Report of a Battle Said to Have Occurred Near Havana.

KEY WEST, Jan. 22.—Passengers from Havana report a fight at Helena del Sur, in the southern part of Havana province. A Spanish cavalry force of some 600 men, camping there, were surprised by 400 Cubans under Col Sanchez, one of Maceo's old officers. The Spanish force fought bravely, but retreated within half an hour with twenty men killed. The Cubans suffered a loss of eight. The Cubans pursued but were drawn into ambush and punished terribly, losing fifty men. They withdrew, and the Spanish re-entered their old camp and began merry-making in honor of their victory. Late that night the insurgents again attacked and surprised the camp, forcing their way to the commanding officer's quarters before their presence was discovered. Then the terror-stricken Spanish soldiers fled, flinging down their weapons. The insurgents pursued them for miles, killing and wounding over 100. The captured officers were finally released on parole.

HAVANA, Jan. 22.—Insurgents held up a train at Guanabacoa and looted the passengers and took two Spanish captains, eleven other officers and four soldiers into captivity. Later they hanged Lieutenant Barnado Banos, a native Cuban, for serving Spain. The others were released.

BREVITIES.

The vote of the Colorado legislature for senator resulted 92 for Teller and 6 for Allen. Teller was present and was given an ovation.

In London recently the trial of Edward J. Ivory, the alleged dynamite conspirator, suddenly came to an end by the complete collapse of the government's case, and the discharge of the prisoner.

United States senators elected last week: New York, Thomas Platt; Pennsylvania, Boies Penrose; North Dakota, Henry Hansbrough; Missouri, George Vest; Arkansas, James Jones; North Carolina, J. C. Pritchard; New Hampshire, Jacob Gallinger; Connecticut, Orville Platt; Kansas, William Harris.

News from the Philippine islands says that 150 prisoners in the jail at Cavite revolted, killed the guards and then escaped. The convicts made their way into the interior and divided into four groups. People turned out and hunted the runaways, with the result that ninety were killed and only eighteen or twenty captured.

The Spanish gunboats Centinela and Relampago left Manzanillo a few days ago with the object of going up the river Cauto to Fort Guamo. Both gunboats were near Mango landing when an explosion of a torpedo, which had been well placed in the river, sank the Relampago. Those of the crew who survived swam toward shore, but were fired on from the banks. At this critical moment a boat was launched from the Centinela, which rescued the men in the water. In view of the obstructions, and the fact that the commander of the Centinela and nearly all of the crews of both gunboats had been seriously wounded, the expedition had to return to Manzanillo.

Crown Point, Ind., dispatch: The watchmen employed by the Tolleston Gun Club, of Chicago, located at Tolleston, and a number of farmer boys came together in a pitched battle on the club lands, with shotguns, pistols and rat shears, and when the smoke cleared away the following were picked up on the battle field: Frank Costick, shot through the lungs, will die; Theodore Platt, shot through body, will die; Alvin Bothwell, shot in body, will probably recover; John Blackburn, shot in temple with revolver, will probably die. Fourteen farmers entered upon the Tolleston club's duck swamp and when ordered off by the watchmen showed fight, and the result is as above. The watchmen are in jail.

London dispatch: Parliament opens with a program likely to keep members guessing to the end of the session. Ireland, increase of army estimates and the educational bill in a new form will be the chief subjects of discussion and legislation. Large sums of money will be voted for Ireland, though whether they will have any relation to the claims arising on the report of the financial commission that Ireland is overtaxed to the extent of £2,650,000 annually remains to be seen. The cabinet councils have resulted, so far as assured Irish legislation is concerned, in an agreement to form immediately a board of agriculture for Ireland. The majority in Ireland have already approved the creation of the board. The measure had a place in the program of the last session. Mr. Plunkett's recess committee has given impetus to its formation by completing a scheme for the assistance of Irish agriculture, and finally the failure of the potato crop and the prospect of a famine have made some active government demonstration inevitable. The board is therefore to be constituted.

CHAPTER X.

THE count ordered all preparations consistent with the resources of the chateau to be made for the approaching wedding, and flattered himself that he was very diplomatic in talking confidently before the servants, of the series of festivities which should follow that event. He affected an air of the utmost security, and laid out a score of improvements to be made in the garden, at a period when he meant to be safely landed on a foreign shore.

And every few hours he exchanged a knowing nod with M. Pierre, as if glorying over his wise sagacity. In these preparations, of course, the absence of the most valuable service of silver was discovered, but the wily M. Pierre had forestalled the need of explanation by informing his credulous master that he had taken the precaution, in consideration of the disturbances in other places, to secrete it, and that it should be ready for him at the wedding festival, unless he preferred to have it snugly packed for transportation to the fishing sloop, which last idea the count eagerly seconded. He rode over to Frejus to find some one to perform the ceremony, and on the way thither met a bishop coming to him for protection. He had left Paris expecting to find a relative at Frejus, but every one who held the slightest claim to aristocracy had fled from Paris.

The count received him warmly, and carried him back to the chateau in triumph. Now everything was prepared, only waiting for the bridegroom to be able to perform his share of the ceremony. M. Pierre was ostensibly most active in carrying forward the preparations, but the countess shuddered every time she met his eye. The bishop's presence gave the ladies more excuse for lingering in their own rooms; and it also seemed an opportunity to visit the Little Forest. Therefore, that very evening they stole forth cautiously and went speeding along toward the hollow tree. Before they reached the edge of the wood the form of Emile started up from the hedge which bordered the meadow. He spoke their names eagerly, and dispersed the momentary terror which his sudden appearance had caused.

"Thank Heaven you have come! I was trying to conjure up an opportunity for speaking with you. How proceed matters at the chateau?"

"Illy enough, I fear, though the count fancies everything favorable," answered the countess.

"And the overseer?"

"He is there still. The count trusts him implicitly, and has confided to him all his plans of escape."

"Mon Dieu! is the man demented?"

"He will not listen to our remonstrances," answered Felicie, while her mother kept silence.

"Have you told him what you heard?"

"No; though we assured him that we had proof of his treachery. He declared he should go to M. Pierre with our accusations, and we dared not reveal all without first consulting you."

"That was prudent," said Emile, while between his teeth he muttered, "Dolt! idiot! brute! the man does not deserve to live." And in a moment he added gravely, "It would be the extinguishment of your best hopes of escape to reveal my presence here, or the locality of the retreat I have provided. I half expected to find you gone; and I fervently hoped it might be so."

"We waited for the Marquis Edward."

"And he arrived two nights ago. Why were you not away before this? Every hour is of priceless value."

The countess sighed heavily.

"He is ill; we are only waiting for his recovery; then the marriage is to take place, and we are to ride directly to the wharf at St. Josephs."

"I wish I knew their plans better; not a soul has entered the woods since I came, and the pikes have been removed. I lost the precious opportunity by my long absence."

"Ah," cried Felicie, "we looked for you so anxiously. We grew so troubled about you."

"I could not come. I have learned a bitter lesson in my absence. I, who held them to my sway before, have found the tide so swollen that it bore me along like a feather. I lifted up my voice for freedom, equality, manhood—did I know they would interpret it lawlessness, demoralization, brutality? Alack! one cannot play with fire except to be scorched. My heart has died within me to witness the horrors which reign triumphant, conscious, as I am, that I helped to nurse the spark which has become such a madly devouring element. There is but one course left me; I must secretly aid all who come within reach of my helping hands."

"You counsel us to refrain from mentioning the adventure in the woods that night?" questioned the countess, anxious to return as speedily as possible.

"I certainly do, if it is to be retailed at once to the arch villain, Pierre. Besides, it is too late now. Pierre is aware of your movements. I wish I were certain of his. I must go to Frejus and hunt up a few trusty comrades; by their means I may learn more. But it will be prudent for you to accompany me to the tree and learn how to manage the spring which opens the jagged door of the tree-trunk. Then if you can reach it you will be safe, whatever happens to me."

"Let us go now; we may have no other opportunity," said Felicie.

They proceeded thither in silence. The countess seemed greatly fatigued and sat down on the ground, while Emile carefully initiated her daughter into the mysteries of the spring cunningly filed into a round excrescence of the bark. Lady Felicie practiced upon it until able to open it instantaneously.

"Now let us hasten back," said the countess, shivering with the chilly night air.

Just as she turned, she paused suddenly, and, extending her hand, said, with grave, solemn sweetness:

"Heaven bless you, Emile, and reward you for all your devotion."

He held her hand in his just a brief moment, then dropped it without a word. The countess drew Felicie's arm within hers and hurried away, nor cast a single backward glance. They were just in season to escape detection, and had hardly removed their wrappers when the count burst in upon them.

"To-morrow night, Felicie, my love!" exclaimed he. "The Marquis Edward improves rapidly, he declares himself convalescent, and insists that there be no further delay. So get out your finery to-morrow. He will not see you till you are dressed in your bridal garments. It's a pity the wedding must be such a paltry affair; but we'll celebrate it in worthy style when we return again to France. But be sure you look a little like a Languedoc. After all, the dress can be quite as pretty as if you had a dozen corbeilles from Paris. There's plenty of rich lace in the wardrobe, and the diamonds will brighten all. I want Edward to remember his bride as a charming picture, though there be no guests nor festival."

"And you intend to proceed at once to the vessel?" asked the countess.

"Yes, immediately."

"Grant me this favor as a bridal gift, mon pere," exclaimed Felicie, the tears rushing to her eyes; "let M. Pierre believe we are not to go until the night after."

"Foolish child! are those tears?"

"I am so terribly afraid of that man, mon pere; promise, I beseech you!"

"Why not? I will not mention another word to him—are you content? Once safely at sea, we shall forget all these horrors."

"Thank you, oh, thank you, papa, it is such a relief."

He did not disclose the fact that he had just come from M. Pierre and had discussed the whole arrangement freely. And so, believing M. Pierre in ignorance, and conscious of Emile's vicinity, mother and daughter slept peacefully through the night.

CHAPTER XI.

ALTHOUGH apparently very quiet, the next day was really a busy and anxious one at the chateau. Edward was up and dressed in clothes furbished up from the well stocked wardrobes, quite early in the day; but he preferred not to see his bride until the marriage vows were exchanged—on the ostensible plea of reserving all his strength free from excitement, but in reality from a disinclination he could not overcome. The countess, herself, dressed her daughter in the fleecy white robes, nor would allow another hand to touch a single fold. She lingered fondly over the task, reluctant to finish, and even Felicie was obliged to say, with a blush and a smile:

"There, there, mamma! I am sure it is all complete now—you could not be more particular if there were a thousand guests to behold me!"

But the countess smoothed a wave of hair here, brushed out a tumbled flounce, readjusted each spray of the orange crown, and finally removed the diamond ornaments entirely and replaced them with her own rich set of milky pearls.

"My father will not approve!" whispered Felicie.

"For this once, no matter; he will not have time to allude to it. The pearls are so much prettier. Now is my darling a fairy looking bride, indeed. Surely Edward will open his heart to her at once."

"Ah, it is for him you are so fastidiously particular tonight. I had forgotten, almost, what it meant for me, this wedding—I only have rejoiced because it was the gateway for our escape from this wearing life of suspense."

"Wearing, indeed!" reiterated the countess, and putting her hand hastily to her side, she turned deathly pale.

Felicie sprang forward in alarm.

"What is it, my mother? are you faint? are you ill?"

"No, no, it is nothing, it will pass in a moment."

And as she had said, the spasm passed away in a few moments. The daughter was scarcely reassured, when the count's voice was heard at the door.

"Come, loiterers, we are waiting for you."

The countess seized Felicie's hand, and bent forward to press a solemn kiss upon her lips.

"The Holy One forever bless my good and worthy daughter!"

As the bride entered the little oratory, the bishop came forward to meet her. With a fluttering color on her cheek Felicie glanced around in search of the bridegroom. She saw a slender figure at the window, but M. Pierre's square shoulders concealed his face. Edward had been sitting by the window, and he had not turned his head, yet, to take his first view of his affianced wife; when suddenly M. Pierre blew a shrill blast upon a whistle he had been holding nervously in his hand.

A dozen wild faces leaped up at every window, brawny fists dashed the glass into fragments, while the burly figures leaped in upon them from all sides. Edward was felled to the floor by the first blow. With a wild cry of terror, the count turned to his trusted overseer. The villain smiled grimly and drew a pistol. One brief instant was it given to the wicked man to realize his own folly and his servant's treachery, the next he fell a corpse at the feet of his daughter.

Felicie's wild shriek rang through the room. She strove to reach her mother, ere a brutal arm with its uplifted pike should fall—saw the beloved form suddenly sink back and herself sank fainting to the floor. Reviving, she was conscious of a fierce affray going on at the chateau, and she herself lying amidst the cold corpses of her friends. She crept hastily as her weakness would allow to her mother's side, and anxiously listened for a throb of breathing at her lifeless heart. All in vain. And yet, there was no sign of a blow or wound. Remembering how she had fallen ere the pike descended, the poor child had a dismal comfort in believing her heart had broken at the sudden shock.

Suddenly now came the remembrance of her own hapless condition, and the danger of M. Pierre's return with those brutal ruffians. The new thought gave her strength. Hastily disengaging a black cloak from the shoulders of the murdered bishop, she wrapped it over her white robes, leaped hastily through a broken window, and darted like a frightened fawn past a man pacing to and fro, as if guarding against the approach of friend and foe. She knew he saw her, and in a moment heard his plunging steps following. But terror and despair gave her fleetness. She knew the path well and though every now and then her lace flounces caught upon brier and bush, she tore them off with frantic hands, and went leaping forward. She stumbled twice and fell headlong—but sprang up again like a deer, and at length gained the wood. It was easier to elude him here; she darted in and out among the trees, until she was sure her dread pursuer had lost the track. She heard his muttered curses as he blundered around, and lightly as a fairy she flew on to the blessed relief at hand.

She gained the tree, pressed the spring with desperate hand, and rushed in. A cold chill sank upon her heart; it was empty. Where, oh, where, was Emile? Was there no friend left her? She sank shivering upon the earthy floor, and buried her head in her hands. She could not think over, then, all the anguish that had fallen upon her—the terrible bereavement of the past hour; parents, bridegroom, home and friends, all stricken from the hand that seemed to hold them so securely. Her brain whirled, a terrible sickening fear took possession of her—that M. Pierre would find out her retreat, or drag her forth, or that Emile was killed also, and she should perish there of starvation. These absorbed every faculty, and crouching and listening, she survived two hours of almost intolerable agony. Another hour would have turned her brain; before its expiration, a rapid step came bounding to the tree, the door was flung open, and Emile's voice cried frantically:

"Lady Felicie, Lady Felicie! are you here?"

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Pettigrew offered a resolution asking secretary of state as to the statutes of the Venezuelan controversy. It laid on the table. Senate voted to take up the Nicaragua canal bill and Morgan advocated its passage. Chandler presented the bill for an international conference on silver. In executive session Frances' appointment as secretary of the interior was confirmed.

HOUSE.

The bill to prohibit sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians to whom an allotment of land has been made while the title is held in trust by the government, or to any Indian who is a ward of the government, passed. Two bills slightly amending patent laws passed. The remainder of the day was devoted to District of Columbia business.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan 19.—Senator Turpie spoke against the Nicaragua canal bill, and the reading of the legislative appropriation bill was completed with the exception of sections making provisions for the congressional library, which were passed over temporarily in the absence of senators interested in the subject. The bill for a naval battalion in the District of Columbia passed.

HOUSE.

Under special order the entire day was devoted to consideration of private pension bills, and fifty-two of the 900 on the calendar were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Turpie continued his speech in opposition to the Nicaragua canal bill, and without concluding yielded to other business. Consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was resumed and the bill passed. Pettigrew's resolution calling on the secretary of state for information as to the Venezuelan arbitration agreement was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

HOUSE.

The house spent the day in debating the Yost-Tucker contested election case, from the Tenth Virginia district.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 21.—In the course of a discussion of laying electric conduits in the streets of Washington, Hill attacked trusts and monopolies as a menace to public welfare. Turpie concluded his speech in opposition to the Nicaragua canal bill. Morgan tried to force a vote on the bill, but the absence of a quorum spoiled his plans.

HOUSE.

The Yost-Tucker contested election case was decided in favor of Tucker, the democratic sitting member.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Turpie gave notice that on Monday he would ask the senate to take up the Cameron Cuban resolution. He charged that Sherman had agreed with Olney that the senate would not act on Cuba. Sherman denied it. A sensational debate on the British arbitration treaty was precipitated by Hoar, and Stewart made a strong talk against it. Sherman presented a letter in which the minister of the Republic of Central America opposed the Nicaragua canal bill. Morgan charged it was part of an English conspiracy, and a third sensational debate was precipitated, but no action was taken.

HOUSE.

This was private bill day in the house and most of the time was consumed with small bills. The bill to provide for holding terms of the United States court of the eastern district of Texes at the town of Beaumont was passed over the president's veto by a vote of 144 to 68.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The senate confined itself strictly to business to-day, passing a large number of bills, including those for a statue of Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg, Pa., appropriating $300,000 to pay one of the old claims of the late John Roach for the use of his ship yards, and reclassifying the railway postal service. Over 100 private pension bills were passed during the day, thus clearing the calendar. A resolution by Morgan was agreed to requesting the president for all correspondence on the Nicaragua canal since 1887; also a resolution by Allen, asking the attorney general for information as to the reported Pacific railroad settlement between the executive authorities and the reorganization committee of the road.

Mason Senator From Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 20.—Ex-Congressman William E. Mason, having been nominated by the republican caucus, has been elected United States senator to succeed John M. Palmer.

MORE PUBLIC BENEFACTORS.

DES MOINES, Jan. 20.—C. Muma, W. Unger and A. P. Brosius, of Holstein, Iowa, have been allowed a patent for an apparatus for generating acetyline gas, and also have a number of applications pending that, it is believed, will overcome the difficulties that have heretofore prevented that superior illuminating gas from going into extensive use. A. Blanchard, of Plover, Iowa, has a patent allowed for a wagon box and hay rack lifter and support adapted for taking them off and on to interchange them at pleasure without touching them. The manual labor and straining heretofore incident to handling wagon boxes and hay racks may be avoided and the work accomplished by horses hitched to the wagon. C. N. Stanton, of Collins, Iowa, has been allowed a patent for a ventilator, illuminator and air-heater for cellars that is adapted to prevent vegetables stored in cellars from freezing, to give light to facilitate going about and to carry off moist and foul air that would otherwise rise in a dwelling to endanger the health of the inhabitants. F. W. Stevens, of Lake View, Iowa, has been allowed a patent for a double section force pump.

SIGNS OF THE STARS.

SOME TALES TOLD BY THE HEAVENLY BODIES.

Correspondents Should Be Careful to Follow Instructions as to Full Names and Addresses—Date, Place and Hour of Birth.

THE Astrologer again insists that all persons writing him with a view of obtaining free readings in this column, must send full name and address. The name will not be published. The data are often megre, in which case it becomes necessary to address a personal letter to the applicant. It will therefore be seen that it is quite necessary to give name and post office address. These readings are free, and will be published in order as received. Persons wishing the same length reading by mail can obtain it by sending twelve two cent stamps. Write name and address, year of birth, day of month and hour of day, whether a. m. or p. m. Also state place of birth. These are important points and without them an accurate reading of the planetary indications cannot be given. Persons who are not sure as to data should write the Astrologer for special instructions by mail. In doing so send four cents in stamps for reply. Address: Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 So. Clinton street, Chicago.

The following readings are for this week:

Miss Meg, Mendota, Mo.

According to the data furnished, the zodiacal sign, Scorpio, which Mars rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Mars is your ruling planet or significator.

You are medium height, with a well set figure, and will grow stouter as you grow older. Your complexion, hair and eyes, medium; the eyes have rather a sharp, piercing sight. You are very energetic and ambitious, do not like opposition, and will display quite a spirited temper at times; you are a leader, and have the ability to execute plans in a creditable manner; you are fond of soldiers, fireman, surgeons, all manner of military parades, news, etc. If a war would come you would like to go and be right at the front of the battle; you would make a good surgeon. You have far better command of language than this sign usually denotes. Your husband is, or will be, a peculiar temperament, and rather hard to understand, and marriage will only be a trifle over average fortunate. You are under both a good transit of Jupiter and an evil transit of Saturn.

F. B., Oceola, Ohio.

According to the data the zodiacal sign Aquarius, which Uranus rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Uranus is your ruling planet or significator. The sign Pisces, which Jupiter rules, was intercepted on ascendant, therefore Jupiter is co-significator. You are of medium height; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; when young your hair was flaxen; you will grow stouter as you advance in years; you are reserved in your manners, yet quite a busy talker; you are inclined to investigate any of the occult and mysterious forces in nature; you are a seeker after truth no matter where you find it; you are naturally an advanced thinker, and was born with a kind of knowledge which you never had to study to learn; you just know many things without ever having had to study them, and if asked to explain how you knew this or that you could not tell where it came from; you feel and know things in advance. If you would thoroughly understand this it could be made valuable to you. Saturn will make an evil transit for you soon.

Miss S. S. Marionville, Mo.

According to the data furnished the Zodiacal sign Sagittarius, which Jupiter rules was rising at your birth, therefore Jupiter is your ruling planet or significator. You are tall, with slender, well formed figure; medium to light complexion and eyes; the hair, auburn; in general appearance you are commanding, you are jovial, cheerful, happy temperament, you are very ambitious and will be a leader in anything you are interested in; you are kind to animals and especially fond of a horse. You are very courageous even to a reckless degree at times. You will be looked up to by your neighbors; they will expect you to take the lead, and they will follow. You should secure an education in art for you are gifted in that direction, but there will be something to hinder you from getting a proper education in it unless you make special effort and overcome the obstacles that will be in your path, yet you are otherwise quite fortunate.

Note.—Those who have sent in their stamps (26 cents) for readings by mail, will usually be promptly answered. In cases where there is an apparent delay the astrologer should be notified at once and the mistake will be rectified.

FROM LINN COUNTY.

Hog cholery is again raging in Linn county. One man lost forty head, another thirty. Hardlp one escapes. I have succeeded so far by using carbolic acid freely. Brood sows are selling for $5,00 per cwt., and scarce at that price. Hogs at sales sell high. Corn is selling the lowest in the history of the county, 14 cents on a year's time at sales. Oats sold at 10 cents. Is it not a fact that one extreme follows another? I woulden't be surprised to see corn sell for good money next summer. Men are buying cattle at wild prices. "The unexpected always happens,' Why are we all like sheep. All go one direction. We all want to buy or all want to sell. Horse buyers claim that good horses are hard to find, and to buy them takes a good round sum. The open winter is fine on stock, but the worst thing for farmers as grain and stock will not advance in price. We need a wet year and reduce supplies to one-half; farmers always make more on half crops. Sales will be plenty from now on till spring.

In wallaces Farmer.

In these days of quick transportation distance cuts no figure save time. But it is always best to secure your nursery stock from a grower in a similar climate to your own. Iowa grown stock for Iowa planters should be the rule. Sothern stock is quick growing and soft; northern stock is of slower growth and harder wood; easteren stock, if grown in sheltered locations or where tempered by the lake or the sea breeze, is equally objectionable in Iowa. If you do send off for any stock make your selections of such things as you know are hardy hear, otherwise you are liable to be disappointed.

Huron, S. D., Jan. 25—The most complete snow blockade in the history of this portion of the northwest since 1880 and 1881, now prevails. Saturday and Sunday's storm covered this portion of the State between the Missouri and Sioux rivers and into North Dakota. Here the temperature registered 26 below zero and touched 30 in other sections. Fears are entertained for the settlers in the remote districts, where fuel is scarce and nothing has been learned concering the stock losses on the ranges for several days, but it is believed that they will be heavy.

Too many parents forget that Christ is on trail in the home today as much as he was before Pilate. Many a mother who tells fibs has been puzzled to make out how her children learned to lie. What folly for a father to warn his boys against tabacco, if he does it with a breath that smells of smoke. What foolishness for a mother to talk to her children about religion, unless she can show them what it is. If the parental example is a sowing of thorns and briars, how absurd to look for a good fruitage in the lives of the children. The greatest obligation of the parent to the child, is to give a safe example.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

HARDLY second in importance of plenty of good feed is an abundant supply of pure water on the farm where dairying is a leading business, says an exchange. Be the rations ever so plentiful and the supply of water scanty or filthy, the cows cannot do what is expected of them. Cows giving milk need a large amount of water, as any farmer will notice when undertaking to furnish a supply, when from any cause there is a scarcity. It is needed in the pasture in warm weather and at the barn or feed lot in winter. It is bad to be short in supply in summer, but much worse in cold weather, when it is usually so much more difficult repairing water mains and tanks or obtaining a fresh supply. It will pay the farmer to make some extra outlay in order to obtain an abundance of never-failing water, good for all parts of the year. In wet seasons ponds and creeks furnish all that is needed for cattle, but in dry times windmills must be put in operation to meet all the requirements, as much loss comes to the dairyman and stock raiser when the water reserve falls short. By all means have a plentiful supply of water for winter. The nearer to the barn this can be located the better it will be, especially in blustering weather. Whether it shall be in the stables will best be determined by the owner. Since the tuberculosis scare it is thought best by many to be safer and better to have it outside the stables, but if out of doors, it should be well protected from storms. Dairy cows in particular should have as comfortable place in which to drink in bad weather as is possible to furnish. It may sometimes be necessary to drive quite a little distance for water, but if the drinking place is well protected and provided with plenty of good water, not too cold, there will be little trouble or loss, but to be obliged to go a long way and then drink from an icy creek in a beak place, any one can see would be injurious for milch cows and must materially diminish their profitableness, and the same rule would apply in a lesser degree to fattening animals. Half-watered and half-fed stock give no returns, besides being inhuman.

Handicapped by Fraud.

"Honesty is the best policy"—so the old saw runs, says New York Farmer. It is not a very enobling motive—hardly creditable to anyone, but still, as it is better to be honest, if we can only make men honest as a matter of policy, let us do so, rather than do nothing in that direction. It is not many years since the United States was a very much larger factor in the European trade in dairy products than is the case to-day. The demand for our goods was almost unlimited. To-day our trade there is a mere ghost of its former greatness, and it will hardly ever again reach the old high-water mark. We have lost the trade by dishonesty. We have labored with a zest that is seldom equaled in honest trade, to sell filled cheese for a genuine article and hog-butter for its model, the genuine product of the dairy. It is hardly fair to use the word "we" in this matter. Nine-tenths of all this rascality and rottenness came from Illinois, that home of hog-butter and filled cheese, and it is there to-day that the apologists for the frauds are found in greatest abundance. The blot is one which should be wiped out. Filled cheese has recived its quietus—hog-butter needs the same legal status in Illinois and some other states that it has in New York and some of our neighbors. When these two swindles are so handicapped that their profitable manufacture will be impossible, our trade abroad may be restored to us and the consumption of genuine products at home be largely increased.

Probably Roup.

Please inform me through the Farmers' Review what ails my chickens. They will swell up on one side of the head, usually the left eye will swell shut with a sort of thick yellow matter or canker, the tongue, mouth and as far down the throat as you can see is covered with thick chunks of yellow canker. They dump around for about three days and die. I have a good warm hen-house well ventilated. I feed corn, oats, millet, ground barley and oats. Please inform me what to do for them. Some of the hens are laying. I have fed them some Venetian red, which I thought helped them.—G. H.

From the description we would incline to the belief that the trouble is roup. You say the pen is warm and well-ventilated. That may be just the trouble. We are not in favor of ventilators at all. We have seen too much trouble arising from cold drafts of air in warm pens. We have known large numbers of fowls to die from no other apparent reason than this. Better have the pen cold and draftless than warm and drafty. Here is what one authority says on roup: "Almost all forms of chronic catarrh in fowls go by the name of roup. It usually begins by a severe cold, caused by exposure to cold, wet or damp. There is discharge from the nostrils, at first of thin mucous, and the entire cavity of the nose may become filled up; froth and mucous fill the inner angle of the eye, the lids are swelled and often the eye-ball quite concealed, and in severe cases the entire face is considerably swelled. It is said to be contagious, but is probably so only in severe and virulent cases."

Prof. Law describes roup as follows: "Dullness, sleepiness, neglect of food, ruffled feathers, unsteady walk, quickened breathing, with a hoarse wheeze and an occasional crowing sound. On the tongue, at the angle of union of the beak, or in the throat appear yellowish white films (false membranes) firmly adherent to a reddened surface, and raw sores where these have been detached. The nostrils may be completely plugged with swelling and discharge so that breath can only be drawn through the open bill. The inflammation may extend along the windpipe to the aerial cavities and lungs, or along the gullet to the intestines. In the first place death may take place from suffocation, and in the latter from diarrhoea."

Treatment. — The same authority says: "Disuse raw grain and feed on vegetables and puddings made of well-boiled oats, barley and Indian pudding. Dissolve carbonate or sulphate of soda, or chlorate of potassia freely in the water drunk. Remove the false membranes with a feather or forceps and apply to the surface with a feather a nitrate of silver lotion. If diarrhoea supervenes, give a teaspoonful of quinia wine thrice a day. It is all-important to change the run of the chickens for a time at least."

We ourselves have never had fowls afflicted this way, for we have always kept them in tight pens, but not too warm, in fact in pens where a single inch wall of boards is the only protection from the cold.

The Pert Chicken.

There was once a pretty chicken,
But his friends were very few,
For he thought that there was nothing
In the world but what he knew.
So he always in the farmyard
Had a very forward way,
Telling all the hens and trukeys
What they ought to do or say.
"Mrs. Goose," he said, "I wonder
That your goslings you should let Go out paddling in the water,
It will kill them to get wet."

"I wish, my old Aunt Dorking,"
He began to her one day,
"That you wouldn't sit all summer
In your nest upon the hay.
Won't you come into the meadow,
Where the grass with seeds is filled?"
"If I should," said Mrs. Dorking,
"Then my eggs would all get chilled."
"No they won't," replied the chicken,
"And no matter if they do,
Eggs are really good for nothing,
What's an egg to me or you"

"What's an egg?" said Mrs. Dorking;
"Can it be you do not know,
You yourself were in an eggshell
But a little month ago
And if kind wings had not warmed you,
You would not be out today,
Telling hens and geese and turkeys
What they ought to do and say,
To be very wise and shrewd
Is a pleasant thing no doubt,
But when young folks talk to old ones
They should know what they're about."
—Selected.

Housing Hens.—It will not do to keep a lot of hens in a dark or uncomfortable building and expect them to be busy and lay. They prefer a light, dry, roomy place, where each hen can exercise freely and without hindrance from the others. They will never care to scratch, however, if they are fed every time they appear hungry. They must be compelled to scratch and work for their food. We do not advise the limiting of the food. Give them plenty, but only in the litter, where they must work and scratch for each grain. Throw the grain in leaves, cut straw, cut hay or any kind of litter, and at night give them a good feed in the trough, composed of a mixture, but during the day make them work and work hard. At first they may not be inclined to accept such conditions, but unless they scratch let them go hungry. Scratching means eggs, for it keeps them in health.—Ex.

Conserving the Fertility.—The soil being so important a factor in human existence and human happiness, there is required no apology to be offered for a consideration of its forces, functions and character; but rather, if apology be needed at all, it is for the fact that the western farmer, as a rule, appears wholly indifferent as to the conservation of its forces and fertility. It is not so much that we do not know what is required in giving the soil proper and rational treatment, but from force of habit and long usage, we are wholly indifferent, many of us, in protecting from damage or loss the great source of our living.

GOVERNOR DRAKE TO THE STATE LEGISLATURE

A SHORT DOCUMENT IN WHICH THE GOVERNOR'S VIEWS ARE PRESENTED.

Damage to State Institutions by Fire and Wind Should be Repaired---State Should Insure Property. Good Laws Should Be Retained.

The message of Governor F. M. Drake to the Iowa legislature which met on the 19th was a short document, concise and devoid of unexpected features and recommendations. It is as follows:

To the General Assembly of the State of Iowa: The span of years allotted to a generation has passed away since last the general assembly of Iowa was called together in extraordinary session. Fortunately, no questions so momentous and all pervading as those which confronted the people and their representatives at that session and the called session of the year preceding are onw dominant in the public mind. Then the life of the nation was in peril. Multiplied thousands of Iowa's brave men were absent from their homes contending for the life and the integrity of the republic. Members and people were alike oppressed with anxiety for both country and loved ones; for the latter session was held at the darkest hour of the conflict.

Now, in a time of peace, with the fearful struggle of those days long since closed and closed aright, you are assembled to pass in review the statutes of the commonwealth and to put in concise form the laws which are to begin to have force substantially with the commencement of the state's second half century.

A learned and industrious commission has prepared a revision of existing statutes and put them, with such changes and modifications as to the commission seemed advisable, in codified form, in which shape the result of their labors has been before you for more than a year. An opportunity has thus been afforded the members of the general assembly, and to some extent the people at large, to familiarize themselves with the new measures proposed, with the enactments the omission of which is contemplated, with the amendments which are suggested to existing statutes, and with the form which it is proposed to give the body of our statute laws. Therefore the members of the general assembly come together prepared, I doubt not, with the aid of the mature deliberation they have been enabled to give the work, promptly to expediate the business for which the session has been called.

It is gratifying to know that many of the existing laws of this commonwealth have been so founded in wisdom as to commend themselves to statesmen and publicists not only of our sister states but other lands. Our state officers receive not a few testimonials to this effect. I may mention the legislation pertaining to railroads, to insurance, to dairy interests, and to oil inspection. Let us hope that the matters you have in hand will show a still stronger development of legislation thus found to commend itself.

During the year just past, our public institutions were visited by an unusual number of casualities through the power of elements. On the 27th day of March, a severe rain storm did extensive damage to the roofs at the school for the deaf. The repairs necessitated a draft on the appropriation made for "providential contingencies" amounting to $397.03.

On the 11th day of August the oldest building at the Anamosa penitentiary was destroyed by fire. It contained the dining room, kitchen, chapel and library. The damage amounted to $13,200. The departments destroyed were furnished with temporary quarters, and nothing has been drawn from the appropriation on account of this disaster. It will not improbably, however, call for action on your part.

On the 21st day of the same month a tornado took off the roof of a wing of the main building of the normal school and otherwise injured the structure, inflicting damage the repairment of which cost $541. Again on the 29th day of the same month lightning struck the main building of the institution for feeble minded children at Glenwood, set it on fire, and notwithstanding the extraordinary efforts on the part of the officers and employees, the citizens of Glenwood, and the fire department of Council Bluffs, the edifice was destroyed, except the foundation walls and a portion of the walls of the west wing. Most of the contents of the building were likewise destroyed. A contiguous structure belonging to the institution was also damaged by water, and the rain considerably injured other property which had been removed from other buildings in apprehension of their destruction. The damage done was the most extensive ever suffered by any institution in the state. The building itself had cost, with its contents, rather more than $100,000, and the whole damage is estimated at $125,000.

An extraordinary emergency therefore confronted the board of trustees. The dining room, kitchen, school department, the rooms of seventy-five employees, and those of seventy children had disappeared. It should be remembered that prior to the catastrophe the institution was crowded beyond its capacity, and now a large part of the facilities which before were thus inadequate was gone. The members of the board came before the executive council and represented the situation in which they were placed. The appropriation for meeting providential contingencies amounted to only $10,000 of which sum several hundred dollars had already been expended, and it was manifest that there was not enough of that appropriation remaining to provide for any considerable part of the repairs absolutely indispensable for the maintenance of the institution. It was, moreover, clearly a matter of economy for steps to be taken to preserve the yet standing walls which it was believed could be utilized in rebuilding. The executive council, feeling that an occasion had risen for which adequate provisnons had ont been made, unanimously determined to take the responsibility of authorizing the expenditure of $25,000 and afterwards of $15,000 more, in the work of rebuilding; the same being thought to be imperatively necessary for the maintenance of the institution and the preservation of the state's property. For this action on the part of the executive council I ask the approval of the general assembly. A special report of the trustees of said institution and Dr. Powell, its superintendent, is herewith submitted.

Fortunately, none of the calamities recited were attended with loss of life or even personal injury. This will be regarded as the more remarkable when it is taken into consideratiin the kind of unfortunates that are being cared for in the institution at Glenwood.

The state long since ceased paying premiums of insurance upon its property. Indeed, it never did pay out much for such purpose. But, the need of some sort of provision for meeting the contingencies of fire and other elemental disasters becoming manifest, the general assembly began several years ago the practice of making an appropriation for "providential contingencies." I find that the amount thus appropriated, down to the present time, aggregates $134,000, while there is a total of drafts on these appropriations amounting to $63,678.19, making the excess in amount appropriated over the expenditures $70,-621.81. Had the appropriations been cumulative as the first ones were, the unexpected balance of each appropriation being good for succeeding terms, there would have been as appears above a sum ample for making all the repairs at Glenwood that could not wait for the meeting of the general assembly. In view of the experience of last year I submit that prudential considerations require that the state should purchase insurance for its property, or else that provision be made either for the establishment of an insurance fund, or for the adoption of other adequate provision to meet extraordinary emergencies.

I would also recommend a consideration of the propriety of making all state edifices hereafter constructed substantially fire-proof. This while lessening the risk would obviate the danger of horrors such as have befallen public institutions, none of them fortunately in our own state.

A report made to me by the auditor of state, which is herewith submitted, makes an unpleasant showing of the finances. It appears that, owing to drafts, amounting to $569,259.18 on the special appropriations made at the regular session of the present general assembly, there was a net floating indebtedness on the second day of the present month of $397,075.70, there being $593,459.10 of warrants outstanding, with $196,383.40 of cash in the treasury. The auditor estimates that the receipts for the current year will be $2,137,445.68, and that the ordinary expenditures will be $1,723,086.34, while there may be drawn during the year $519,968.07 or the remaining special appropriations made at the last session. Should they all be drawn, which, however, is not probable, the indebtedness at the close of the present year will be in the neighborhod of $500,000.

In view of this showng, I recommend that all of last session's special appropriations, any part of which is yet undrawn, be reviewed by the general assembly, and wherever the same can be done without injury, the expenditure might be made, with a view to reduction wherever practicable. Thus may be effectively inaugurated a movement which shall lead eventually to the cancellation of all indorsed warrants, and, let me express the hope, to an abandonment of the practice of indorsing warrants "not paid," a practice not in conformity with sound business principles, even in the matter of running into debt.

On the 29th day of June last, I received the resignation of Hon. A. T. Meservey as a member of the board of trustees of the Agricultural college for the Eleventh congressional district. Upon being advised that the board had elected as Mr. Meservey's successor the Hon. Hiram C. Wheeler of the county of Sac, I issued a commisison to that gentleman to hold, as provided by the statute, until the then next meeting of the general assembly. It is now incumbent upon you to elect a trustee for the remainder of the unexpired term.

It is unnecessary for me to remind the general assembly that the people of the state are expecting the session to be of brief duration, and I doubt not that you are, as their representatives, in full sympathy with that feeling. Permit me to express the hope that your deliberations will eventuate in a code of laws that will give satisfaction to the people, while it will anew commend the legislation of this great commonwealth to approval beyond our borders.

HYSTERICS.

Women Should Understand This Strange Nervous Derangement.

A Symptom of Something Far More Serious—Mrs. Barris, of Beaver Springs, Relates Her Experience.

The spasm at top of wind-pipe, or in bronchial tubes, the "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart; laughing and crying by turns; muscular spasms; throwing the arms about, etc., tell of a derangement of the female system.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, whatever it may be, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It acts at once upon the organ affected, and the nerve centers; removes the cause, and dispels effectually the symptoms.

Mrs. Barris relates her experience for the benefit of others.

"I had been sick with ulceration of the womb, causing all kinds of disagreeable experiences, such as irritability, sleeplessness, faintness, and at times hysterics. My physician said it was the worst case he ever had. My back ached, leucorrhœa very profuse, and I had a severe bearing-down pain. The physicians thought I should never recover, and as the last remedy, they procured your Vegetable Compound. I had not taken more than one-fourth of a bottle, before I was more comfortable. I continued its use, also the Sanative Wash, and Liver Pills. After using four bottles, I was able to be out, and do almost all my work. I think the Vegetable Compound is the only medicine that will cure female complaints, and it will reach the worst cases in a very short time. I know it saved my life."—MRS. M. DISEASE AND WAR.

AN OLD FIGHTER FINDS DISEASE HARDER TO BATTLE WITH THAN ARMED HOSTS.

He Wins a Victory [With the Aid of a Remarkable Ally.

(From the Gate City, Keokuk, Iowa.)

A reporter called on Captain A. H. Evans, coal dealer and member of the firm of Chisholm & Evans Co., corner Main and Water Streets, Keokuk, Ia., and knows for himself the statements made here are true.

"At the breaking out of the Civil War," said Captain Evans, "I enlisted in the army, serving continuously from 1861 to 1865, in the Ninth New Jersey Regiment of Infantry."

"You are identified with the Grand Army of the Republic, are you not, Captain?"

"Yes, I am a member of Torrence Post, No. 2, Department of Iowa, and served the Post as Commander during the year 1893.

"I am also Inspector of Grand Army Posts in the Department of Iowa."

"Your health appears to be such that it allows you to fulfill your duties and enjoy life better than most men of your age."

"Yes, my health was never better than it is now and I owe it largely to a medicine that is the medical marvel of the age."

"What is that Captain?"

"I will tell you. Last winter my usual good health began to fail me. I suffered from dull feelings in my head, an inclination to shirk work, and a general feeling of lassitude. One day my wife was reading in a newspaper of a case similar to my own, where a gentleman had been benefited by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and prevailed upon me to try them. I did so, purchasing a box at McGrath Bros., 500 Main Street, and began taking them according to directions.

"I began taking the Pink Pills in April and they cured me, and without the aid of a doctor or other medicine whatever."

"Do other members of your family use the pills?"

"My wife has taken them and pronounced them the best regulator for the system she ever tried."

"Would you hesitate to recommend the pills to others?"

"No indeed, I can heartily recommend them to all who are suffering as I did, for I know they will benefit them. You can say that I am always ready and willing to give information about Dr. Williams' Pink Pink to all who will call on me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

New Line to Washington.

The popular Monon Route has established a new Sleeping Car line to Washington, D. C., via Cincinnati and Parkersburg, by the C. H. & D., B. & O. S. W. and B. & O. Railways. The sleeper is ready for occupancy in Dearborn Station any time after 9 p. m., and leaves at 2:45 a. m. daily, arriving at Washington at 6:47 the following morning. This schedule will be in effect on January 24th, and thereafter. As the sleeper goes through without change, and the hours of leaving and arriving are most convenient, this will prove altogether the most comfortable as well as the most picturesque route to the national capital. EVIL . . . FOREBODINGS, mental unrest, despondency and fear of death or impending danger, are symptoms arising from the poisoning of the blood by uric acid. Uric acid retention in the blood causes over ninety per cent. of all diseases. It is the active poison of rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, biliousness, pleurisy, heart disease, brain fever, eczema, bronchitis, asthma, gravel, gall stones, Bright's disease and dropsy.

Warner's Safe Cure

restores the kidneys to healthy action and enables them to separate and force the poisonous acid from the system.

Here's the case of a well-known Philadelphian cured of Bright's disease, which is but advanced kidney disease.

In the spring and fall of 1891, I commenced using SAFE Cure for Bright's disease of the kidneys, so pronounced by three eminent physicians of this city. Acting on the advice of a friend, Mr. A. L. Grant, who thoroughly believed in SAFE Cure, I used three bottles prior to going abroad. During my stay in London, I purchased four bottles more. The remedy took effect at once, and to-day I am perfectly well.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 19.—The senate was called to order at 10 o'clock by Lieutenant Governor Parrott. Permanent organization was effected by the re-election of all of the old officials except Secretary Bullard, who is superseded by Geo. A. Newman, of Black Hawk county. The governor's message was received and read. Shortly afterward adjournment was taken until 10 a. m. to-morrow.

HOUSE.

House was called to order at 10 a. m. All of the old officers of the house were re-elected. A resolution that the standing committees remain the same and that thirteen members be added to the several committees was adopted. After the governor's message had been read the house adjourned to 2 p. m. In the afternoon adjournment was soon taken in order to consider methods of procedure.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 20.—A resolution cutting down the number of committee clerks from 43 to 16 was adopted. Carpenter introduced a resolution providing that no bills shall be introduced except parts of the proposed revision of the code and substitutes therefor and bills for editing and publishing the code; and such bills as may be necessary under the recommendation of the governor in his message in regard to public institutions. Adopted. Chairman Parrott announced that the standing committees would remain the same as last year. In the afternoon Senator Funk was elected chairman pro tem. A concurrent resolution for a conference committee on the code was adopted.

HOUSE.

After a long debate the house adopted a joint resolution providing for a committee of five from each house to arrange the code into bills for introduction. Parker, of Mills county, introduced two bills. The first of these was for an appropriation of $75,000 for the institution for feeble-minded children at Glenwood; the second, to reimburse the employes of that institution for losses aggregating $2,736.30, sustained by the late fire. Adjourned till 2 p. m.

The house refused to consider a legalizing act. Allen introduced a bill amending statutes in relation to the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the state and legislative departments. Passed. A bill fixing salaries of employes of general assembly failed to pass, as the salaries were regarded as too high, but it will be called up again in new form. Bills amending statutes relative to submission of constitutional amendments and publication and construction of the statutes passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 21.—The remonstrances against the passage of a bill permitting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors are flowing in. Trewin introduced a bill providing for the annotation, publication, distribution and sale of the code and statutes to be enacted. The conference committee on code work reported the place agreed upon for carrying on the work. Senator Carpenter, from the code committee, reported eight bills, titles and chapters. Adjourned till 10 a. m.

HOUSE.

Remonstrance against a manufacturing bill was filed. Representative Hayes of Clinton county, took the oath. A committee of seven was authorized to look into the needs of the house as regards clerks, doorkeepers, etc., and report accordingly. A large number of bills were introduced, all relating to code revision. Adjourned to 9 a. m.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 22.—The conference committee made another partial report and the code committee introduced twenty-eight code bills increasing the senate file to forty-two. A number of petitions against a manufacture bill were introduced. The session was a dry one in which considerable routine work was accomplished. Adjournment was made until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

HOUSE.

The house held a very short session. A resolution of regret and eulogy on the death of Hon. N. A. Merrell was adopted. A communication was received inviting the members and their wives to a reception to be given by the National American Woman Suffrage association at the home of Mrs. F. M. Hubbell, January 26. Adjourned to 9 a. m.

SENATE,

Des Moines, Jan. 23.—An attempt to pass the first title and first chapter of the code caused a wrangle, and the matter was finally referred to the code assignment committee. The code committee introduced a large number of bills. A resolution for a committee to visit the state institution at Glenwood passed. Adjourned to 11 a. m Monday.

HOUSE.

A resolution providing for a committee to visit the state institution at Glenwood was adopted. A bill making a general reduction in the salaries of the employes of the general assembly was passed. An amendment to cut salaries of legislators failed to pass. Two divisions of the code committee reported a large number of bills and adjournment was then taken until Monday.

Lyman J. Gage Would Accept.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Lyman J. Gage, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, will accept the treasury portfolio in Major McKinley's cabinet if it is tendered him. Mr. Gage has as much as intimated this to his friends, indicating that he would consider it the crowning honor of a successful life.

Train Robbery In Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 22.—Three unknown men held up a train on the Southern railway, near Berry station, and robbed the Southern Express Co.'s car. The messenger's keys were secured and the safe was opened and its contents taken. The train was delayed but twelve minutes.

REGARDING PASSENGER RATES

Decision of the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners.

In the matter of the communication of the secretary of the state grange of Illinois dated Jan. 1, 1897, embodying a resolution of that body adopted at its December meeting, 1896, asking the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners to reduce the passenger rate from three (3) cents to two (2) cents per mile, the commission is of the opinion that to do so at this time would be unwise and unwarranted and would be unjust to the railroad interest of the state. While some of the great trunk lines in Illinois might be able to stand such a reduction, yet the smaller roads, and those which do almost wholly a local business, and which are now and have been for the last two years struggling for existence, would be most seriously affected by it.

Such action on our part would simply increase the heavy burdens under which they are staggering now. It is a well-known fact to those who have taken the trouble to investigate the amount of passenger business done by the railroads in Illinois during the past two years that there has been a large decrease in the number of passengers carried. This is due in our judgment not to the amount charged for such service but to the general depression in all lines of business, the low prices of farm products and the unsettled financial conditions which have had their effect on the passenger as well as the freight business.

And it is also a fact, as shown by the sworn reports of the railroads of Illinois that the capital invested in such property has not paid even a fair interest to the stockholder. This question was before us when we revised the freight schedule in 1895, and the whole question was thoroughly considered. We did not think then and neither do we feel now that in justice to both the public and the railroads, because each should stand on the same equality before the law, this reduction should be made at this time. If the country was prosperous our conclusions might be different.

The statistics in our office show that for the past three years, 1894, 1895 and 1896, the average amount charged by the railroads per passenger mile is a fraction above two cents, although the maximum allowed them was three cents.

For the reasons above stated we do not feel that this reduction should be made at this time. We are also asked to recommend this reduction to the legislature. In view of our conclusion we do not feel that it would be consistent for us to do so; however, the legislature has the power to regulate the maximum rate which can be charged for passenger service and we leave the matter to their wisdom.

WHAT A LIE.

A Editor Says That It Takes Money to Run a Newspaper.

From the Covington (Ohio) Gazette:

"It takes money to run a newspaper."—St. John (Kan.) News.

What an aggregation; what a whopper. It has been disproved a thousand times; it is a clean case of airy fancy. It doesn't take money to run a newspaper; it can run without money. It is a charitable institution, a begging concern, a highway robber. B'Godfrey the newspaper is the child of the air, a creature of a dream. It can go on and on and on, when any other concern would be in the hands of a receiver and wound up with cobwebs in the window. It takes wind to run a newspaper; it takes gall to run a newspaper. It takes a scintillating, acrobatic imagination, and a half dozen white shirts, and a railroad pass to run a newspaper. But money—Heavens to Betsy and six hands round, who ever needed money in conducting a newspaper! Kind words are the medium of exchange that do the business for the editor—kind words and church social tickets. When you see an editor with money, watch him. He'll be paying bills and disgracing his profession. Never give money to an editor. Make him trade it out. He likes to swap. Then when you die, after having stood around for years and sneered at the editor and his little jim crow paper, be sure and have your wife send in for three extra copies by one of your weeping children, and when she reads the generous and touching notice about you, forewarn her to neglect to send fifteen cents to the editor. It would overwhelm him. Money is a corrupting thing. The editor knows it and what he wants is your heartfelt thanks. Then he can thank the printers and they can thank their grocers. Take your job work to the job office and then come and ask for half rates for church notices. Get your lodge letter heads and stationery printed out of town, and then flood the editor with beautiful thoughts in resolutions of respect and cards of thanks. They make such spicy reading, and when you pick it up filled with those glowing and vivid mortuary articles, you are so proud of your little paper! But money—scorn the filthy thing. Don't let the pure, innocent editor know anything about it. Keep that for sordid tradespeople who charge for their wares. The editor gives his bounty away. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. He'll take care of all the editors. Don't worry about the editor. He has a charter from the state to act as a doormat for the community. He'll get the paper out somehow; and stand up for you when you run for office, and lie about your pigeon-toed daughter's tackey wedding, and blow about your big-footed sons when they get a $4 per week job, and weep over your shriveled soul when it is released from your grasping body, and smile at your giddy wife's second marriage. He'll get along. The Lord alone knows how—but the editor will get there somehow.

Many people have lived on a pedestal who will never have a statue when dead. —Beranger.

To Get Out of the Way

When trouble is coming, is obviously the part of common sense. An obstruction to the bowels is a serious obstacle to health. To get this out of the way is an easy matter with the thorough laxative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, although it affords relief, never gripes and convulses like a drastic purgative. Dyspepsia, malarial, kidney and rheumatic ailments and nervousness yield to this genial family medicine.

IT'S CURES THAT COUNT.

Many so-called remedies are pressed on the public attention on account of their claimed large sales. But sales cannot determine values. Sales simply argue good salesmen, shrewd puffery, or enormous advertising. It's cures that count. It is cures that are counted on by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Its sales might be boasted. It has the world for its market. But sales prove nothing. We point only to the record of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as proof of its merit:

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the kind friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us during the sickness and death of our dear little Adellbert.

MR. and MRS. E. A. SUCKOW.

The Funeral services of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Suckow were held in the Eng. M. E. church Friday, at 1 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Anderson. The remains were intered in the Germantown cemetery. The TIMES joines the people of this vicinity in extending their warmest sympathy.

C. W. Knapp expects to sever his connection with this bank soon, and spend a little time in Illinois, after which he will look up a location. Mr. Knapp has a host of friends here who will regret very much to have him leave our town. We hope, however, that he may find it to his interest to return after his trip, and locate permanently with us. In any event, we wish him abundant success wherever he may locate.

Wm. Schneider President of the Y. M. C. A. of Garner led the Mens' Meeting Sunday afternoon, and a splendid meeting we had. There were Prop. Doderer, Rev. Mertin, Wallace Ramsey. Bert Rhodes, and Mr. Holman of Garner who took part in the meeting, with a good attendance from about Klemme and all enjoyed the meeting very much. The meeting next Sunday will be led by C. W. Knapp, and held during February in the Eng. M. E. church. All men and boys are invited to come.

I have given Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a fair test and consider it one of the very best remedies for croup that I have ever found. One dose has always been sufficient, although I use it freely. THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

The European powers have taken a whole year to do nothing for the Armenians.

The only locality where Weyler seems to have put down the rebellion is in his own mind.

People who are behind the times generally consider that the world is rushing madly to perdition.

We take greater pains to persuade others that we are happy than in endeavoring to be so ourselves.

After all is said, a man never really appreciates how many friends he has until it becomes necessary to call the roll.

The chances are that if you look behind you in life, you will generally find somebody trying to make it unpleasant for you.

At East Liverpool, Ohio, Samuel Barlow laughed at a farce comedy until he went crazy. A protest should be entered against the production of farce comedies which are too darned funny for a man to witness and preserve his compos mentis. It is possible, however, judging from some of the alleged side-splitters with which we are afflicted periodically, that Mr. Barlow's mental disorder was caused by acute melancholia.

Jesse Pomeroy, who years ago was given a life sentence in the Charlestown state prison for the murder of two children, came very near escaping from his quarters last Wednesday. With no tools except a piece of wire and a few nails, he succeeded in boring through the wall of his cell until only a few bricks lay between him and liberty. When discovered in his attempt to escape, he showed no emotion whatever. Pomeroy was only 14 years old when he committed the crime of murder, and he was then regarded as the worst specimen of youthful depravity ever known.

The United States is pushing to the front in naval matters. According to the report of the secretary of war, we have built or building, 11 battle-ships, 7 coast-defense ships, 18 cruisers, 18 lookout ships and gunboats, 18 torpedo boats and one torpedo destroyer. June 30, 1893, there were serving in the navy 6,459 enlisted men and 1,215 apprentices; June 30, 1894, 6,950 men and 1,144 apprentices; June 30, 1895, 7,499 men and 1,238 apprentices, and June 30, 1896, 8,165 men and 1,378 apprentices. Of the enlisted men in 1893 1,640 were serving under continuous-service certificates; in 1894, 1,824; in 1895, 2,270, and in 1896, 2,409.

It is refreshing to turn to one international marriage where the bridegroom was not a fortune hunter. It is that of the daughter of Millionaire Claus Spreckles to Mr. Watson, a San Francisco broker, of English birth. But then this was not a match arranged by the bride's parents. They objected strenuously and the couple eloped. Papa Spreckles had settled a million or two on his daughter. She was a high-spirited girl and did not want to be beholden to her papa for her fortune since she had married without his consent. Her husband told her he married her for herself and not for her millions, and Mrs. Watson promptly deeded back to her father the property he had given her to the tune of a couple of millions. But then it is not likely they will ever know the pangs of want.

Even Ceylon has an agricultural college, and as a result vine-growing has been introduced into that isle. The Indian Agriculturist says: Experiments in viticulture in Ceylon have been turning out very satisfactorily, and it is within the range of possibility that grape-growing and wine-making may be established as a supplementary industry to tea-planting in that favored isle. About a year ago a vinery was erected in the School of Agriculture premises, Colombo, and placed under the care of Sigor Zanetti, Only a few months elapsed from the planting of the vines to their showing signs of bearing, and an excellent yield of grapes resulted. There has been, however, a little hitch between the Signor and the government about allowing additional expenditure, and for the time being the experiment appears to be in danger of abandonment. It is very unlikely that the government will allow the experiments to fall through, big with promise as they undoubtedly are, and we may expect to hear by later mail of an adjustment of differences and of further experiment. Already a Sinhalese capitalist, who has watched the partial development and success of the agricultural school vineyard, and is assuerd of the ultimate success of viticulture in the island, has started a vineyard on his own account.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

SENSATIONAL MURDER CASE.

Alleged Murderers in Jail After a Year Has Passed.

INDIANOLA, Jan. 31.—On January 23, 1895, Ed Knotts was found dead in his own house near New Virginia, in this county, under very peculiar circumstances, the body being frozen stiff and assuming a posture which it was thought impossible for one of himself to assume. Knotts lived with C. A. and J. J. McCuddin, tenants who occupied his house, but who had a day or two previous left the place and gone to New Virginia. A preliminary examination was then held, charging the McCuddins with murder, but they were discharged by the justice. The grand jury, recently adjourned, presented an indictment against C. A. and J. J. McCuddin for murder in the first degree, and they are now in jail, having been committed without bail.

STRUCK BY THE TRAIN.

Prominent Resident of Jewell Killed at a Crossing.

WEBSTER CITY, Jan. 31.—John Warburton, hardware and implement dealer at Jewell Junction, was killed between that place and Ellsworth, on the Tama branch of the Northwestern. Mr. Warburton was riding in his buggy, and as a protection from the wind he had the side curtains down. Just as he started to cross the track he looked out to see that no train was in sight, and seeing none, he went ahead. There is a sharp turn at the Northwestern crossing where he was, and as he was on the track the train came rushing upon him. The buggy was completely demolished by the engine, and the body of Mr. Warburton was carried a considerable distance. Death was almost instantaneous.

MINE EXPLOSION.

Eleven Were Hurt in an Explosion at Foster.

OTTUMWA, Jan. 29.—Eleven men were burned in a mine explosion at Foster. All will recover, with possibly one exception. The cause of the explosion is a mystery. It is thought it may have been a keg of powder but the mine authorities claim it was the result of natural phenomena; that air of extreme low temperature met warm, gaseous air of the mine when the shaft was suddenly opened and formed gas, which ignited from the lamps of the miners, who were just leaving work for the noon hour. Louis Folgar is badly hurt and may die.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Amel Lynn Fatally Shot While Hunting Rabbits Near Barnum.

BARNUM, Jan. 29.—Amel Lynn, son of John Lynn, section foreman for the Illinois Central at Barnum, went rabbit hunting in the timber on the north Lizzard, about three miles northeast of Barnum. In some unknown manner he accidentally shot himself in the right side, inflicting a fatal wound. After the accident occurred, he walked and crawled about a half mile in the road, where he was found about two hours after the accident, almost exhausted from the shock and loss of blood. He died a few hours later.

$5,500 for a Wife's Affections.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 29.—In the case of Wm. Wiggin against Charles A. Huston, in which he asked $10,000 damages for alienation of his wife's affections, the jury returned a verdict giving plaintiff damages in the sum of $5,500. The case has been on trial for over two weeks, and on account of the prominence of the parties to the suit the court room was packed to the door the whole time. Huston will appeal to the supreme court.

An Oskaloosa Couple Elope.

CENTERVILLE, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Nannie Wymore and Frank Buck eloped from Oskaloosa and passed through Centerville en route to Hannibal, Mo. Both are already married. Buck leaves three children in Oskaloosa, and Mrs. Wymore also has a number of children. Buck was at one time a bookkeeper for an Oskaloosa coal company.

Settled by the Bondsmen.

HUMBOLDT, Jan. 31.—After a three weeks' struggle, the bondsmen in the case of J. W. S. Lindley, defaulting county treasurer, settled the matter with the county, paying part cash and the balance in secured notes. Only two of the twenty-three bondsmen failed to put up their share and dropped the load onto the others.

Boy's Neck Broken.

MARSHALLTOWN, Jan. 30.—John Lynch, aged 15, son of Mrs. Eliza Lynch, a widow, fell from a farmer's wagon in such a manner as to break his neck, and was dead when picked up.

Suffragists Adjourn.

DES MOINES, Jan. 30.—After a most interesting and profitable session, the National Suffrage Association adjourned. The old officers of the association were re-elected.

IOWA SUPERVISORS' MEETING.

Met at Des Moines For a Two Days' Session.

DES MOINES, Jan. 30.—Thirty-four members of the ninety-nine boards of supervisors of Iowa met in Des Moines for a two days' session. Twenty boards were represented at the meeting. About the first thing done was the passage by unanimous vote of a protest against amending the state law so as to compel boards of supervisors to advertise for bids for the construction of all bridges. The members who spoke to the question all opposed the proposed change, claiming that the boards can do bridge work privately more cheaply than by public contract. Taxation, mulct tax, assessment, roads, and kindred matters were discussed during the session.

DEATH OF JOHN M'HUGH.

Well Known Iowa Man Passes Away With Paralysis.

MASON CITY, Feb. 1.—Hon. John McHugh died at his home at Cresco Saturday morning, from paralysis. In 1888 he was a candidate for congress in the Fourth district, and only lacked one-sixteenth of a vote of the nomination. He represented his county in the lower house of the legislature; was a candidate for railroad commissioner in 1895, and was state bank examiner under President Harrison. He was one of the most noted Short Horn breeders in the state.

LIQUOR LAW PROBLEM.

NEWTON, Feb. 1.—A traveling salesman by the name of Strasburger, representing a Chicago liquor house, was arrested and arraigned before Justice Mitchell under charge of making nine illegal sales of intoxicating liquors. He admitted that he had taken nine orders which were filled and the parties received the liquor, but denied that such sales were illegal. He was fined $450 and costs, from which he appealed to the district court. His house promptly furnished bonds.

Whirled About a Shafting.

BURLINGTON, Jan. 30.—James Wisdom, an employe of the Hawkeye Steam Laundry, in attempting to shift a belt in the dark on a swiftly revolving shaft, was caught in the sleeve by a projecting screw and whirled violently about the shaft a dozen times and then thrown to the floor, denuded of every stitch of clothes except one shoe. He was bruised on every inch of his body, but not fatally injured.

Cedar Rapids' New Union Depot.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Jan. 29.—The new union depot erected the past year by the Chicago & Northwestern and the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway companies has been formally opened. The event was a notable one in the history of the city. The structure cost about $200,000.

Miners Go Out.

FT. DODGE, Jan. 31.—The miners in the J. J. Hill mines of Webster county are out on a strike. The strike was caused by a cut of twenty cents per load for loaders at the mines. Notices have been published warning other miners from going to work while the trouble lasts.

$7,000 Damages for a Boy.

AMES, Jan 31.—Little Daniel Allen, who was run over by a motor car on the college line, has secured a verdict for $7,000 damages.

IOWA CONDENSED.

David Vilson, of Vinton, attempted suicide, but will recover.

The 8-year old son of William Payne, who lives nine miles north of Ottumwa, went to bed recently complaining of a headache. In the night he became delirious, and with the thermometer at 14 degrees below zero, he left the house in his night clothes and, after walking about the the yards for awhile, ran to a neighbor's, a half mile away. He will recover, as he has a powerful constitution.

Centerville dispatch: Something over a year ago S. E. Orange, a wealthy young farmer, sold his property here and left his wife, going away in a wagon with another woman. He had with him $1,000, and when last heard of was going through Missouri towards Kansas City. Nothing more was ever heard of him. The story has just leaked out from his brother, W. D. Orange, that about seven months ago he saw an article in a St. Louis paper of a murder committed near Kansas City. The circumstances and description of the murdered man aroused the brother's suspicions, and he went to William Bray, then sheriff off Appanoose county, with his story and decided to investigate. Their investigations proved to them that the body was that of the brother, who had been murdered by the woman. A few days ago while on a train, Orange saw the woman. He shadowed her to Ottumwa and when she entered a house he went for the officers. When they returned she had disappeared and cannot now be found.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA IS A DESOLATE WASTE.

Cubans and Spanish Pursuing the Work of Destruction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 03.—Unless the war in Cuba be brought to an end within sixty days the island will become a desolate waste. This is the statement made by Consul General Lee, of Havana, in an official report to the state department. Gen. Lee in his report points out that terrible destruction of property is now being waged by both the Spanish and Cuban troops, and the rich island is rapidly becoming a desert. Gen. Lee says the torch is not only applied to the towns by the Spaniards, but that the rebels are pursuing the same tactics, both in the towns and in the country. Since the captain general started on his expedition through Matanzas and Havana he has spared no place where the insurgents are likely to find shelter and food, and has ordered the inhabitants of such places to seek refuge in the cities defended by the royal troops. The Cubans are pursuing the same tactics, and between the two Cuba is becoming a desolate waste. A vast amount of property, both Cuban and American, has been destroyed. The Spanish legation gives out a statement that it has received official advices from Madrid to the effect that Gen. Weyler has succeeded in pacifying the provinces of Matanzas and Havana. Inasmuch, according to the same authority, as Pinar del Rio was pacified some time ago, the Spanish government is now ready to put into operation the reforms in the government of Cuba, which have been so much talked of. Gen. Lee, however, reports to the state department that fighting is still going on in all three of these provinces.

GEORGE TAYLOR CAPTURED.

Convicted Murderer of the Meeks Family Run to Earth in California.

HANFORD, Cal., Feb. 1.—After patiently trailing him for several days, Sheriff Buckner and posse overtook George Taylor, the notorious Missouri outlaw, in a small cabin on the Jacob ranch near Hanford, where he was surprised and taken without a struggle. He was brought to Hanford and placed in the city jail under a strong guard. Taylor and his brother were under sentence of death for the murder of the Meeks family when they escaped from jail in Missouri. The other brother was captured and hanged for the crime.

MEN BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Nitro Glycerine Explodes in Northern Ohio.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 29.—A tremendous explosion of nitro-glycerine in a store house belonging to the Ohio and Michigan Torpedo company occurred near Bradner, twenty-five miles south of Toledo. The explosion was so great that it was plainly heard in Toledo, and it rattled windows in the southern part of the city. William Minson, of Toledo, and Edward Denison, of Rising Sun, were blown to atoms.

IDAHO DEADLOCK IS BROKEN.

Senator Dubois Defeated by a Populist Named Heilfeld.

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 29.—Henry Heilfeld, populist, has been elected United States senator to succeed Senator Dubois. The vote stood: Heilfeld 39, Dubois 30, Nelson 1. Fourteen democrats joined the populists for Heilfeld, and he also received the vote of a single republican member. Four democrats went to Dubois.

Nevada Licenses Prize Fights.

CARSON, Nev., Jan. 27.—The glove contest bill introduced to permit the fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons to take place in Nevada passed the assembly by a vote of 20 to 9, the license being increased to $1,000.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Jan. 29.—The glove contest bill passed the senate, and the governor, it is believed, will sign it. It is pretty certain that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight will come off at Reno.

CARSON, Nev. Jan. 30.—Governor Saddler has signed the glove contest bill and it is now a law. It provides for a license fee of $1,000 for each fight.

Thousands of Cattle Die.

DENISON, Texas, Jan. 29.—Prominent stockmen of the Indian Territory and the Pan Handle report that the recent blizzard has resulted in the death of thousands of cattle on the ranges. For the first time in a number of years large water courses are frozen over.

Filibusters Released.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 27.—The steamers Three Friends and Dauntless, which have been in custody of the United States marshal on a charge of filibustering, have been released on bond by order of the United States court.

The Plague in Formosa.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 31.—Officials of the Japanese legation confirm the report that the plague has broken out in the island of Formosa.

CABINET NEARLY COMPLETE.

Six Members Said to Have Been Decided Upon.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—With the acceptance of the treasury portfolio by Mr. Gage, Major McKinley can almost say that his cabinet is complete. Formal tenders have been made to only two men—Senator Sherman and Lyman J. Gage—but Major McKinley has decided upon four others. The progress so far made in the construction of the cabinet is as follows: Secretary of state, John Sherman, of Ohio; secretary of the treasury, Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois; secretary of the navy, John D. Long, of Massachusetts; secretary of war, Russell A. Alger, of Michigan; secretary of the interior, Joseph McKenna, of California; secretary of agriculture, James A. Wilson, of Iowa. The president-elect has not as yet decided fully upon either his attorney general or his postmaster general. For the former post Judge Goff, of West Virginia, is almost a certainty.

GAGE ACCEPTS.

The Chicago Financier Will Be Secretary of the Treasury.

CANTON, Jan. 29.—In response to a telegram from President-elect McKinley, Lyman J. Gage, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, called on Major McKinley and spent the afternoon in conference with the president-elect. After dinner Mr. Gage said: "Mr. McKinley offered me the treasury portfolio. I told him I would accept the high honor and fill the position to the best of my ability." Mr. Gage also stated there was no ground for the publication that he was a gold democrat during the campaign, and that his only affiliation with the democrat party was in 1884, when he voted for Cleveland. He also said that he and Major McKinley substantially agreed on the tariff question.

ALGER SECRETARY OF WAR.

Calls on Major McKinley and Accepts the Appointment.

CANTON, O., Jan. 30.—Yesterday was Major McKinley's birthday, and he celebrated it by tendering the portfolio of war to Gen. R. A. Alger, of Michigan. General Alger authorized the announcement of the fact that he had accepted the portfolio of war. He was asked if all differences between himself and Senator Sherman had been arranged, and replied that they were on good terms and would work in harmony.

"Tama Jim" Not Yet Appointed.

CANTON, Jan. 31.—Hon. James Wilson, of Iowa, left for his home yesterday, after a conference with Major McKinley. He was very reticent touching the result of his visit, but it was not difficult to infer from his talk that he is more than a cabinet possibility, and that he may accept the agricultural portfolio.

Boodlers Indicted.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 1.—The grand jury returned indictments against fourteen people connected with the city government, including aldermen and police officers. Other indictments may also be expected. The indictments charge various kinds of municipal corruption.

BREVITIES.

Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, who is visiting Europe in the interest of bimetallism, has gone from London to Paris.

A dispatch received recently from Milan announces that the Princess De Chimay, formerly of Detroit, and Janos Rigo, the Hungarian gypsy musician who recently eloped with her, have quarreled violently, and that the princess has gone to Monte Carlo.

Ex-Queen Lilioukalani paid a personal visit to President Cleveland a few days ago. It was entirely informal and was so designated in the note sent by the deposed monarch to the president, requesting the privilege of calling, and the answer of the latter granting it. The conversation was merely of a social nature and nothing was said relative to the restoration of the ex-queen to the throne.

Omaha dispatch: The government of the United States filed a suit in the United States circuit court asking that the government's lien on the property of the Union Pacific railway be foreclosed. The papers presented comprise the bill of complaint, the appearance of Attorney General Harmon in the case, the petition asking leave to make the receivers defendants, and the order of Judge Sanborn granting the petition. The bill has reference to the Union Pacific road alone, the Central Pacific not being included. The interest of the government is alleged to be $57,201,178 39. This includes the balance due the government for interest paid on the subsidy bonds in the amount of $29,964,676; matured bonds paid in February, 1896, in the amount of $4,320,000; matured bonds paid in January, 1897, in the amount of $3,840,000; bonds to come due in 1898, $15,919,512; and bonds to come due in 1899, $317,000.

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XII.

LADY FELICIE, Lady Felicie! are you here?"

A shuddering sob, a moaning cry, was his answer. He stooped down, lifted up the board flooring, and then taking her in his arms, as he would have carried a helpless babe, descended the narrow ladder leading into the subterranean chamber, which his forethought had provided. He laid her down on a narrow, but comfortable bed, and hurried back to close the door and replace the flooring. That secured, he lighted a candle standing ready on the rude table, poured out a glass of wine, and approached her.

"Try this first, and then tell me if you are injured, dearest child."

She looked up, pitifully into his face.

"Oh, Emile, Emile, my mother is dead!"

His face writhed in overmastering anguish.

"I know it, my child; God help us! I was powerless to prevent. I discovered that a body of men had left Frejus in that direction, and hurried after them. If I had only known this was to be the wedding night, I should have been prepared. As it was, when I came, it was too late. We fought them desperately, and drove them off for a time—but I believe it was a useless victory. I thought you were slain too, my child; I was sure I saw your white face lying by the count's; but when I returned to the dreadful scene, I found no trace of you, only your torn veil. I feared that they had carried you off; but a wild hope also led me to seek you here. Heaven be praised that you are spared!"

"Oh, my mother, my mother!" moaned Felicie.

"Be comforted, my dear child, as I was—there was no sign of violence, not a single marring blow, the fright must have killed her. She is secure now from all these terrors which we are left to face."

"She has complained of her heart; yes, I thank Heaven, their vile touch did not send that pure soul to heaven," murmured Lady Felicie, weeping piteously; "oh, I am all alone, now."

"My child, you must be calm; I will try to be father and mother both—the love I bore the sainted dead, is doubly yours. Other perils are still about us, I shall need your courage to help me."

She wiped away her tears, and laid her hand trustingly in his.

"I will do my best, mon pere Emile."

He turned away to hide the tears, which came swelling into his eyes at these touching words, and said huskily:

"I must go back to the chateau before that ruffian band return with augmented strength. We will secure all valuables possible, that they may believe we were there only for the sake of plunder. And you will need clothing; can you tell me where to find it?"

She gave him brief directions, and added anxiously:

"But if they return, and overpower you—what will become of me?"

"There is no danger. They must go to Frejus, first; my men still hold the chateau. We are all masked, so they cannot recognize us; in an hour's time we shall be safely dispersed. I shall bring what is needed for you, for one cannot tell how long they may keep us here. The bodies are decently interred in the garden, by this time. Have no fear of violence, and try to spare yourself more anguish than is possible. You will be calm and patient while I leave you?"

"I will try. Will the light show?"

"Oh, no; the ventilation comes through the trunk of another hollow tree. We need be cautious about smoke; but light, not in the least—you would be dreary enough in the dark."

"Thank you; do not delay. Go now."

He left her to a two hours' solitude, but it was not so trying to bear as she had feared. The extreme anguish and excitement of the terrible scene through which she had passed had left her brain numb and torpid. Sitting down by the couch, with her head leaning against the pillow, she dozed away the time, and started to her feet in the vague alarm of sudden awakening from sleep, when Emile again descended from the upper room. A young man with a very pale face and evidently weak and suffering—who was dressed in a plain citizen's suit, accompanied him. Emile at once explained.

"A friend of mine, mademoiselle, who has got into difficulty with the mob, and he must be concealed, likewise."

She bowed, and looked compassionately at the pale-featured youth.

"I hope I will not intrude upon the lady," observed the stranger in very weak accents; "if I were not so bewildered and helpless, I would try to find other shelter."

"Nay," answered Lady Felicie, earnestly; "I have stood too sorely in need of a friend myself, to be chary of my sympathy for others."

"He ought to lie down at once; he has received a very severe blow upon his head. I am thankful there are two compartments to my den."

And as he spoke, Emile removed a board at one end of the small room, and showed another small chamber. He did not hint for whom he had prepared it, to wound afresh the daughter's grief.

"My men are bringing the needed spoils from the chateau; I must go and bring them in, for I bade them leave all at the edge of the wood, not daring to trust even those brave fellows with the secret of this retreat. Can you, mademoiselle, bathe this poor sufferer's head, while I am gone?"

And bending over her, he whispered:

"Do not betray your name and rank. He believes you to be a lowly born relative of mine; do not undeceive him."

Felicie obeyed him promptly. It was indeed a blessed relief from torturing thought to be doing anything. As the weary head sank feebly upon the pillow with a moan of anguish, she dipped the cloth into the ewer of water, standing near, and began bathing it tenderly. She shuddered as she parted the silky, brown hair, and saw the frightful contusion, where some terrible blow had fallen.

"He does not look like a peasant, so delicately featured, with such a refined look!" mused she. "I have never seen a finer face. It reminds me of some princely youth I have admired in pictures. Is it, indeed, to be proved through this reign of terror, to misguided France that her noblemen must be those of nature's dubbing only? Where will it end? and what will become of me, wretched child that I am, to have survived all that I hold dear?"

The last words were unconsciously spoken aloud.

"Nay, dearest one," responded the voice of Emile, as he entered with his arms full. "If this world were all, you might have cause for despair; but when you remember that an angel mother waits for your approach to another and brighter world, surely you can pluck a rose even from the ashes of desolation; you are young, this world may yet afford you the sweetest and purest happiness. Be comforted, my child—be calm and courageous."

"I will, my noble, generous friend," answered Felicie, with the first feeble smile.

CHAPTER XIII.

AFTER depositing his load, Emile turned to look at the suffering youth.

His eyes were closed, and a wan circle of deathly pallor was around the parted lips, through which the breath came fitfully and hoarsely.

"I feared it," murmured Emile, anxiously; "he will have a tedious illness, at the very lightest. It is very unfortunate, as I hoped to get away before the general rising. But he deserves our tenderest care; he is a noble youth. I met him first one of those wild nights in Paris. The maddened crowd, surging back from the palace of the king, were maltreating a poor old priest, who had ventured to rebuke them. The young man, single-armed, without a weapon of any kind, sprang to the rescue of the poor wretch. I shall never forget the picture, as he stood in the middle of the street, the red torch-light flaring over his erect figure, placed before the priest as a shield, with his indignant, flashing eyes, his heroic, defiant bearing. My heart went out to him at once. For a moment, too, he held the crowd back—but, mon Dieu! there were some demented creatures who could have slaughtered an innocent babe in its mother's arms without a scruple. With a yell they leaped upon him. Then it was my turn to step forward. I had some power then, and they yielded. So from that time, I have watched the gallant fellow, and never once has he disappointed my high expectations. What say you, Lady Felicie, shall we let him die now?"

"No, no," cried the girl, eagerly; "it shall be my task to nurse him back to health."

Emile smiled quietly.

If it was much satisfaction to know she would have an interesting employment to keep her mind from brooding over her misfortunes, and to beguile the weary time—he was wise enough not to mention it.

"But why do I waste the precious time?" exclaimed he, suddenly. "I must have everything safe below ground, ere that disappointed villain can return. He has met his deserts, for all the diamonds he hoped to secure have fallen into my possession. I need not assure you they will be saved for you."

"Why cannot I take the things at the door? It will save you much time, and the invalid is sound asleep."

"Perhaps it will be wise; the time is flying rapidly. Come then, and throw down the ladder, as fast as I bring the goods."

She clambered after him to the upper round, and stood in the secret doorway watching him leaping away. He returned laden heavily. Lady Felicie gathered the lightest of the goods in her arms, and ran down with them, returning speedily for the others. They worked steadily for nearly an hour. Then Emile came dashing back to the tree with a small trunk.

"The last, thank Heaven! and it is only just in time. They have returned with reinforcements; I hear a terrific din around the chateau."

"I hope none of your friends are there?"

"Oh, no; I charged them to disperse as rapidly as possible; there is little mischief they can do—except—"

"What? except what!" cried Felicie, frightened at the uneasy look on his face; "they will not desecrate the graves, surely?"

"They are fiendish enough for anything, but there is little to be gained by such a course. They have fired the chateau, Lady Felicie. Will you take a look at it, ere it falls, and not be distressed beyond my comforting?"

She caught her breath convulsively and stood a moment in shivering silence, then held out her hand to him.

He had closed the door of the tree, and now took her hand tenderly, and led her forward to the edge of the wood.

The stars had paled in sudden affright at the bright glare which rose up from the turbulent scene below.

The chateau was like one huge mansion carven in glowing carbuncle. Never had its symmetry and beauty struck Lady Felicie so forcibly as now when every arched window, and quaint gable, and doomed porch was framed in a burning line of dazzling flame.

It was so grand and beautiful a sight, she forgot her personal interest in its fate, and with hushed breathing and entranced eye, she watched the huge sea of fire waver to and fro, as if playing with its victim; now sweeping a broad dash of red, seething flame across the lofty front, now rising up in one vast spiral column of dense smoke to the very sky.

All at once it wavered—the whole great building seemed to give one direful shudder at its fate, and gather itself up proudly to meet it. One brief instant Lady Felicie saw Languedoc chateau before her eyes, every line distinct, every arch perfect—the next it toppled, crumbled, disappeared.

She turned with a wild sob.

Emile took her hand again, and without a word led her away toward the wood.

Between it and them rose up a dark figure.

"Halt!" thundered a hoarse voice, "and let me know who it is watching the burning of the accursed nest of aristocrats with grief."

She uttered no single cry of alarm. Already had she been taught the courage of desperation.

He ran swiftly as was possible with such a burden, in the direction of the chateau, and gained the shelter of a thicket of trees; then as his pursuer dashed by them, he wheeled suddenly and made desperate efforts to reach the wood again.

He succeeded, and that was all; as the door of the hollow tree closed behind them, the fierce spy came stumbling along in the path.

Emile sat down his trembling companion, and put his ear to the side of the tree trunk.

A volley of oaths escaped the baffled wretch.

"They have cheated me again. I swear it must be some of the royalists, or they would not have fled so desperately. I'll go back to Captain Pierre, and we'll search the whole ground over; there sha'n't be a head left on one of their necks, if I can help it."

And muttering other inaudible anathemas, he went away again.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Squirrel's Capacious Mouth.

A Dummerston (Vt.) man wished to ascertain how many kernels of corn a chipmunk could carry in its mouth. Thirty kernels were placed on a board. A squirrel carried them all away at one time. Forty-five kernels were then placed in position, and chippy got away with all of them at that trial. Seventy kernels were put on the board for a third trial. The little striped animal was beaten this time, but succeeded in carrying fifty-eight of the kernels in his mouth.—Boston Herald.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 25.—The senate held a session lasting thirty-eight minutes at which nothing of importance was accomplished.

HOUSE.

Consideration of the code revision bills was proceeded to. An amendment making the attorney general a member of the executive council caused a sharp debate. Doubleday opposed it because of the bad influence a bad attorney general might have. The amendment was defeated. An amendment providing for payment of state warrants in order of issuance was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 26.—Senator Pusey, from the joint committee to devise a plan for the revision of the code, reported and the plan was adopted. Gorrell presented a resolution instructing Iowa's congressmen to work and vote for the recognition of Cuban independence. Referred to committee on foreign relations. When adjournment was taken the senate was considering a bill relating to county and township governments.

HOUSE.

House file No. 9, referring to the executive department, was again taken up and amended so that the secretary of state may charge $500 for notarial commissions. Funk, from the committee on ways and means committee, referred to the great expense of taking the last census. Haugan wanted provision made for placing some of state's money in banks outside of Des Moines, but his efforts failed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 27.—The discussion of senate file No. 63, in relation to county and township government, was resumed. The entire session was consumed in discussion of amendments to the code revision committee's reports. The amendments were defeated as rapidly as a vote could be taken on them. Ranck's amendment, looking to the abolishment of the domestic animal fund, was pending when adjournment was had.

HOUSE.

In the house a number of code bills were introduced and one, house file No. 23, relating to the State Normal school, was passed without amendments. House file No. 4, relating to the Orphans' home, was amended to permit a woman being a member of the board of trustees.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 28.—The code steering committee made a final report on the division of the code into bills and the military committee reported certain amendments in relation to the present law regarding the militia. Consideration of county and township government was resumed. Law was amended so that dog tax will go to swell the general fund. Recorders in counties of less than 25,000 will receive $1,200 a year and others $1,500. A resolution inviting members of the Woman's Suffrage association to visit the senate to-morrow was adopted.

HOUSE.

The bills relating to domestic animals, care of the insane, lost goods, and to superintendent of public instruction, were passed. The bill for care of the insane was amended so that the amount to be paid for the care of patients in asylums should not exceed $14 per month, instead of $16, as is now the case.

HOUSE.

In the house the bill in relation to the institute for the feeble-minded children was passed; also the bill in relation to the State Agricultural college, both without amendments. The bill pertaining to justices of the peace and their courts was being considered at the time of adjournment.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 29.—The senate was visited by delegates from the National Woman Suffrage conventing, now in session in Des Moines. Addresses were made by Miss Susan B. Anthony, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford, of Colorado; Mrs. Colby, of Nebraska; Mrs. Welles, of Utah; Mrs. Carrie Lane Chapman Catt, of New York, and Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, of Philadelphia. The attempt to amend senate file No. 63 so as to give sheriffs repayment for expenses incurred in serving civil processes failed, and the matter went over for future consideration.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Jan. 30.—Title 4 of the code relating to county and township government was completed with but few changes from the old law. A concurrent resolution was adopted to continue the code steering committee.

HOUSE.

The bill in relation to justices of the peace and their courts was again taken up. An amendment reducing volume of criminal business in justice courts in large cities was voted down. The senate concurrent resolution for plan of considering code work was adopted. Committee substitute for code revision bill relative to bureau of labor statistics passed. It is the old law. Bills for regulation of College for the Blind and School for the Deaf passed.

COMPTROLLER ECKLES.

He Thinks the Greenbacks Can Be Retired Without Causing Contraction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Comptroller Eckles of the treasury addressed the house committee on banking and currency on the several bills referred to them. He said a great deal of the present depression had been brought about by over trading, unwise credit and unusual extravagance—public and private. The great drain on the gold reserve was caused by fear on the part of the public that the government could not meet its demand obligations. The legal tenders could be gradually retired in a way which would not contract the circulation. If the plan of Secretary McCulloch, he contended, had been followed and the obligations retired, we would never have had the late trouble.

ASTROLOGICAL LORE.

SIGNS OF THE PLANETS AT TIMES OF BIRTH.

They Do Not Exert an Influence Over Life, but Indicate Events Likely to Occur—Comes from the Egyptians.

THE planets do not exert an influence over life. Their position at the time of a person's birth only indicate what that life is likely to be. The science has come down to us from the earliest ages of man, and was one of the foremost arts in the days of the supremacy of Egypt. Two hundred years ago its revival began. Its progress has been steady, especially in England and the United States. The most enlightened minds of the century are giving it special study, and its popularity is again in the ascendant.

The free readings in these columns should not be confounded with fortune-telling. The most cultured in the land study astrology. No sensible person takes notice of fortune-tellers or fortune-telling. The popularity of our free readings attest the esteem in which the science is held. Letters come from physicians, lawyers, bankers and merchants. Applicants for readings are again reminded that full name and address of sender must accompany every letter. Also date, hour and place of birth. If the applicant does not know the hour of birth he or she should send for special instruction by mail.

Persons not wishing their readings published in regular order can have them forwarded by mail. Mail readings are sent on receipt of twelve two-cent postage stamps. Address Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 South Clinton street, Chicago.

Following are the readings for this week:

W. S., Marionville, Mo.

According to data furnished you are a mixture of indications of both Leo, which the Sun rules, and Virgo, which Mercury rules, therefore the Sun and Mercury are your ruling planets or significators. You are medium height or above; medium to dark complexion, hair and eyes; there is a notch formed in the hair above the temples. You are ambitious, industrious and energetic, rather reserved in manners, and when a boy quite bashful; you take great interest in animals, especially a fine horse; you are quite studious and like to read up on scientific subjects. Your house of money is afflicted by Mars; this is warning that you should at all times be extra careful of finances and avoid hazardous speculation. Marriage more fortunate than average, and your wife was from an excellent family, yet in some way not so fortunate correspondingly as her ancestors.

Hazel S., Mechanicsville, Iowa.

According to the data the zodiacal sign Leo, which the Sun rules, was rising at your birth, therefore the Sun is your ruling planet or significator. You are above medium height, with a slender, wiry figure, and wide shoulders in proportion to the rest of the body; you are medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes are quite large and expressive. You have a sunny, cheerful disposition, and are recognized as a leader; you will always hold a good position in life and can make money in that way if no other, but you will, with ordinary care of finances, always have money, even if you do generously give lots of it away. You are proud and ambitious, and no small kind of business will gratify your ambition. You have splendid command of language and would make a good orator. You are gifted in one or more of the fine arts, and in this you would be quite original. You are very fond of the occult and mysterious.

C. A. R., Panama, Iowa.

According to the data furnished the Zodiacal sign Sagittarius, which Jupiter rules was rising at your birth, therefore Jupiter is your ruling planet or significator, the moon is on the ascendant and is cosinificator.

You are above medium height; slender, but well formed, and you will become stouter from this time on; you have dark complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes are very expressive and have a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight. You are cheerful, happy, jovial, kind and obliging; you are very humane, and considerably inclined towards the scientific; you are kind to animals. scientofic; you are kind to animals, and very foud of horses, you have an intellect that denotes a special ability in the management of subordinates. Your house of money is afflicted, denoting that your money gets away very easily, and you have little left to show for it.

Note.—Those who have sent in their stamps (26 cents) for readings by mail, will usually be promptly answered. In cases where there is an apparent delay the astrologer should be notified at once and the mistake will be rectified.

POULTRY ON THE FARM.

This year has taught the farmers as they have never been taught before the importance of giving attention to poultry. Many a women in the state of Iowa has made more clear money this year from a flock of hens or a lot of young turkeys than her husband has made in growing corn. Corn has been cheaper than it has been for thirty years, while eggs and poultry have continuously brought good prices. In fact we do not know of any farm product which brings a good price so continuously, year in and year out, as eggs. Nor do we know of any that is produced at less cost in the way of food. The experiment stations have demonstrated that grain fed to the hen brings as many, if not more, pounds of product, in the way of eggs, as when fed to cattle or sheep. We are not sure that even the hog can get more pounds per hundred pounds of dry matter fed than the hen in the way of eggs, while the price of the eggs will range very nearly double the price of the meat product. As a matter of fact, however, the hen on the farm is a scavenger, picking up what would otherwise go to waste, and only for a few months in the year, at most, requiring to be fed out of the bushel.

The main element in the production of eggs, therefore, is care, proper shelter, and the application of the "know how" at the right time. The poultry product of the farms of Iowa might be doubled by simply doubling the care and attention. If farmers would encourage their wives by providing shelter and conveniences, which can be done at slight cost, we will trust the wives to do the rest, and the home will have a great many more comforts and conveniences as a result. The good wife will often be in a position to loan the good man money to pay his taxes and meet obligations. We say "to loan it." Make him give you a note for it, and make him pay it when corn gets to be 20c or 25c a bushel.

The better bred the hen, the greater will be the profit. There is no need of growing dunghill fowls when the best breeds in the world, whether for laying or for meat production can be had at a small cost. The good wife will always be disposed to take better care of the fowls that are well bred than the mongrels; therefore, get the well bred fowls every time.—Wallaces Farmer.

The Proposed Treaty With Great Britain.

The American people are familiar with the fact that there is now before the United States, for ratification, a treaty of peace with England. Few, however, have read the articles of the proposed treaty. In England and other countries this treaty is being widely discussed. Why should not Americans, who are supposed to govern themselves, read and discuss the matter and then write to their senators at Washington telling them what they think about it? For that reason we publish the entire proposition. It is as follows:

The United States of America and her majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being desirous of consolidating the relations of amity which so happily exist between them, and of consecrating by treaty the principle of international arbitration, have appointed for that purpose as their respective plenipotentiaries the President of the United States of America, the Hon. Richard Olney, Secretary of State of the United States, and her majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Right Hon. Sir Julian Pauncefote, a member of her majesty's most honorable Privy Council, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath and of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, and her majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States, who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, which were found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

Article I.

The high contracting parties agree to submit to arbitration, in accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of this treaty, all questions in difference between them which they may fail to adjust by diplomatic negotiation.

Article II.

All pecuniary claims or groups of pecuniary claims which do not in the aggregate exceed £100,000 in amount, and which do not involve the determination of territorial claims, shall be dealt with and decided by an arbitral tribunal constituted as provided in the next following article. In this article and in Article IV the words "groups of pecuniary claims" means pecuniary claims by one or more persons arising out of the same transactions or involving the same issues of law and of fact.

Article III.

Each of the high contracting parties shall nominate one arbitrator, who shall be a jurist of repute, and the two arbitrators so nominated shall, within two months of the date of their nomination, select an umpire. In case they shall fail to do so within the limit of time above-mentioned, the umpire shall be appointed by agreement between the members for the time being of the Supreme Court of the United States and the members for the time being of the judicial committee of the Privy Council of Great Britain, each nominating body acting by a majority. In case they shall fail to agree upon an umpire within three months of the date of an application made to them in that behalf by the high contracting parties or either of them, the umpire shall be selected in the manner provided for in Article X.

The person so selected shall be president of the tribunal, and the award of the majority of the members thereof shall be final.

Article IV.

All pecuniary claims or groups of pecuniary claims which shall exceed £100,000 in amount, and all other matters in difference, in respect of which either of the high contracting parties shall have rights against the other under treaty or otherwise, provided that such matters in difference do not involve the determination of territorial claims, shall be dealt with and decided by an arbitral tribunal constituted as provided in the next following article.

Article V.

Any subject of arbitration described in Article IV shall be submitted to the tribunal provided by Article III, the award of which tribunal, if unanimous, shall be final. If not unanimous, either of the contracting parties may, within six months from date of the award, demand a review thereof. In such case the matter in controversy shall be submitted to an arbitral tribunal consistwhom shall have been a member of the tribunal whose award is to be reviewed, and who shall be elected as follows: viz., two by each of the high contracting parties, and one, to act as umpire, by the four thus nominated, and to be chosen within three months after the date of their nomination. In case they shall fail to choose an umpire within the limit of time above mentioned, the umpire shall be appointed by agreement between the nominating bodies designated in Article III, acting in the manner therein provided. In case they fail to agree upon an umpire within three months of the date of an application made to them in that behalf by the high contracting parties or either of them, the umpire shall be selected in the manner provided for in Article X. The person so selected shall be the president of the tribunal, and the award of the majority of the members thereof shall be final.

Article VI.

Any controversy which shall involve the determination of territorial claims shall be submitted to a tribunal composed of six members, three of whom (subject to the provisions of Article VIII) shall be judges of the Supreme Court of the United States or justices of the circuit courts to be nominated by the President of the United States, and the other three of whom (subject to the provisions of Article VIII) shall be judges of the British Supreme Court of Judicature or members of the judicial committee of the Privy Council, to be nominated by her Britannic majesty, whose award by a majority of not less than five to one shall be final. In case of an award made by less than the prescribed majority, the award shall also be final, unless either power shall, within three months after the award has been reported, protest that the same is erroneous, in which case the award shall be of no validity. In the event of an award made by less than the prescribed majority and protested as above provided, or if the members of the arbitral tribunal shall be equally divided, there shall be no recourse to hostile measures of any description until the mediation of one or more friendly powers has been invited by one or both of the high contracting parties.

Article VII.

Objections to the jurisdiction of an arbitral tribunal constituted under this treaty shall not be taken except as provided in this article.

If before the close of the hearing upon a claim submitted to an arbitral tribunal constituted under article III. or article V. either of the high contracting parties shall move such tribunal to decide, and thereupon it shall decide that the determination of such claim necessarily involves the decision of a disputed question of principle of grave general importance affecting the national rights of such party as distinguished from the private rights whereof it is merely the international representative, the jurisdiction of such arbitral tribunal over such claim shall cease, and the same shall be dealt with by arbitration under article VI.

Article VIII.

In cases where the question involved is one which concerns a particular state or territory of the United States, it shall be open to the President of the United States to appoint a judicial officer of such state or territory to be one of the arbitrators under article III. or article V. or article VI. In like manner in cases where the question involved is one which concerns a British colony or possession, it shall be open to her Britannic majesty to appoint a judicial officer of such colony or possession to be one of the arbitrators under article III. or article V. or article VI.

Article IX.

Territorial claims in this treaty shall include all claims to territory and all other claims involving questions of servitudes, rights of navigation and of access, fisheries and all rights and interests necessary to the control and enjoyment of the territory claimed by either of the high contracting parties.

Article X.

If in any case the nominating bodies designated in articles three and five shall fail to agree upon an umpire in accordance with the provisions of said articles, the umpire shall be appointed by his majesty the King of Sweden and Norway. Either of the high contracting parties, however, may at any time give notice to the other that, by reason of material changes in conditions as existing at the date of this treaty, it is opinion that a substitute for his majesty should be chosen either for all cases to arise under the treaty or for a particular specified case already arisen, and thereupon the high contracting parties shall at once proceed to agree upon such substitute to act either in all cases to arise under the treaty or in the particular case specified, as may be indicated in said notice; provided, however, that such notice shall have no effect upon an arbitration already begun by the constitution of an arbitral tribunal under article III. The high contracting parties shall at once proceed to nominate a substitute for his majesty in the event that his majesty shall at any time notify them of his desire to be relieved from the functions graciously accepted by him under this treaty, either for all cases to arise thereunder or for any particular specified case already arisen.

Article XI.

In case of the death, absence or incapacity to serve of any arbitrator or umpire, or in the event of any arbitrator or umpire omitting or declining or ceasing to act as such, another arbitrator or umpire shall be forthwith appointed in his place and stead in the manner provided for with regard to the original appointment.

Article XII.

Each government shall pay its own agent and provide for the proper remuneration of the counsel employed by it and of the arbitrators appointed by it and for the expense of preparing and submitting the case to the arbitral tribunal. All other expenses connected with any arbitration shall be defrayed by the two governments in equal moieties. Provided, however, that if in any case the essential matter of difference submitted to arbitration is the right of one of the high contracting parties to receive disavowals of or apologies for acts or defaults of the other, not resulting in substantial pecuniary injury, the arbitral tribunial finally dispoing of the said matter shall direct whether any of the expenses of the successful party shall be borne by the unsuccessful party, and if so, to what extent.

Article XIII.

The time and place of meeting of an arbitral tribunal and all arrangements for hearing and all questions of procedure shall be decided by the tribunal staff. Each arbitral tribunal shall keep a correct record of its proceedings, and may appoint and employ all necessary officers and agents. The decision of the tribunal shall, if possible, be made within three months from the close of the arguments on both sides. It shall be made in writing and dated, and shall be signed by the arbitrators who may assent to it. The decision shall be in duplicate, one copy whereof shall be delivered to each of the high contracting parties through their respective agents.

Article XIV.

This treaty shall remain in force for five years from the date at which it shall come into operation, and further, until the expiration of twelve months after either of the high contracting parties shall have given notice to the other of its wish to terminate the same.

Article XV.

The present treaty shall be duly ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and by her Britannic majesty; and the mutual exchange of ratifications shall take place at Washington or in London within six months of the date hereof or earlier if possible.

In faith whereof we, the respective plenipotentiaries, have signed this treaty and have hereunto affixed our seals.

Done in duplicate, at Washington, the 11th day of January, 1897.

SIR JULIAN FAUNCEFOTE, THE BRITISH MINISTER AT WASHINGTON.

WRITE TO YOUR SENATOR.

It will take a two-thirds vote of the senate to ratify the treaty, which really means an offensive and defensive alliance. The senators will take great heed of expressions from the people on the advisability of entering into an alliance of this kind. Action will probably be taken in a few days. Those desirous of protesting or endorsing the proposition should lose no time in writing to their senators.

THE BLUES.

A Graphic Description of the Dreadful Feeling.

What Is Meant by This Form of Acute Misery—Where Doctors Make Mistakes.

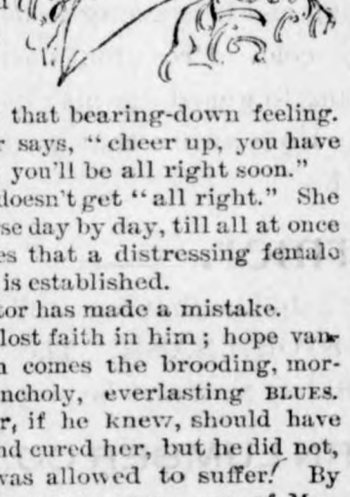
It is usually this way:—

She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached, and back also; has slept poorly; been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart has beat very fast; then that bearing-down feeling. Her doctor says, "cheer up, you have dyspepsia; you'll be all right soon."



But she doesn't get "all right." She grows worse day by day, till all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She has lost faith in him; hope vanishes; then comes the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES. Her doctor, if he knew, should have told her and cured her, but he did not, and she was allowed to suffer. By chance she came across one of Mrs. Pinkham's books, and in it she found her very symptoms described and an explanation of what they meant. Then she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, feeling that she was telling her troubles to a woman. Speedy relief followed, and vigorous health returned.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound instantly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women. It has been the standby of intelligent American women for twenty years, and the story recited above is the true experience of hundreds of women, whose letters of gratitude are to be found on file in Mrs. Pinkham's library.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 25.—In the senate today Mr. Turpie, of Indiana, characterized Captain General Weyler as the "Herod of Havana, the murderer of women and children," and as an "indescribably diminutive reptile." These bitter words were incident to Mr. Turpie's speech of two hours on the Cameron resolution. The speech was not finished, the speaker yielding for the special order, eulogies on the late ex-Speaker Crisp.

HOUSE.

After consuming most of the time to-day in disposing of District of Columbia business, the house took up the Indian appropriation bill and made fair progress with it before the hour for adjournment was reached. The bill carries $7,525,791.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Turpie closed his speech on the Cuban resolution, urging that Spain had utterly failed to quell the outbreak and that the United States should intervene. The Wolcott bill for an international monetary conference was considered for the first time. Little opposition was expressed, but it was generally believed that it would accomplish nothing. Daniel spoke against Nicaragua canal bill. Morgan offered an amendment designed to meet the objections offered by Minister Roderiguez.

HOUSE.

A bill pensioning Jonathan Scott, of the Sixth Iowa Cavalry, now of Oswego, Kan., was vetoed by the president and the house passed it over the veto. The rest of the day was devoted to a continuation of the debate on the Indian appropriation bill. Only a few amendments were adopted and these were of minor importance.

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The military academy appropriation bill was passed after a long controversy over an amendment providing for the attendance of the West Point cadets at the inauguration parade. Allen attacked the proposition and it was finally rejected. The Nicaragua canal bill was the cause of a spirited debate and the motion to recommit the bill was pending when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

By a vote of 131 to 118, the house agreed to the conference report on the immigration bill, which embodies substantially a new measure, being different in some respects from either the senate or house bill. The principal objection to the bill was the clause requiring immigrants to read and write "in the language of their native or resident country."

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The bill for an international monetary conference was debated, Chandler favoring it and Stewart opposing it. The Nicaragua bill and the bankruptcy bill were before the senate for a brief time, but no progress was made on either of them.

HOUSE.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill and entered upon the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill. Grosvenor, of Ohio, made an attack upon ex-Gov. Altgeld for making the statement in a recent speech that the election was won by fraud. Dearmond, of Missouri, replied briefly, and heaped ridicule upon Secretary Morton for the recent issue of a pamphlet entitled "The Farmer's Interest in Finance."

SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The senate spent almost the entire session in debating the monetary conference bill. Vilas, Stewart, Pettigrew, Allen, Carter Cannon, Jones of Arkansas, Hoar and Allison were participants in the debate. While many expressed belief that the effort would prove futile, the opponents were anxious that the bill pass just as the republicans wanted it, so the responsibility would rest with them. It passed, 46 to 4.

HOUSE.

Conference report on the bill to confer the rights and franchises of the Atlantic & Pacific on the purchasers under the mortgage foreclosure came up and was the cause of a heated debate. The report was rejected.

HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was resumed. Much of the time was devoted to a a political discussion. An amendment to discontinue the free distribution of seeds was defeated, 42 to 70. The bill passed.

Will Coalesce.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—"The two wings of the two old parties will, in my judgment, be united in the next campaign," said Senator Palmer. "The sound money democrats and the sound money republicans will form one party, and the silver democrats and the silver republicans will constitute the other party."

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Jan. 27.—Is substituting one material for another patentable invention? A correspondent at Guernsey, Ia., asks this question. We answer, yes, in some instances. We prosecuted the following claim that appears in patent No. 174,898, March 21, 1876, to-wit: "A shoe for car brakes, composed of the cast iron body, (a), having the bearing pieces, (b), of wrought iron, steel, or mallable cast iron, embedded in its face, substantially as shown and described." Rubber and wood substances softer than cast iron, were previously imbedded in the face of a shoe. Practical tests proved that the substitution of one material for another in this instance made a brake shoe wear much longer than one made complete of cast iron, or provided with pieces of bearing surface softer than iron. The history of this improved brake shoe that has gone into general use, and the men that coined wealth therewith, is decidedly interesting. There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with La Gripp, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develope into hasty consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from first dose and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Coughs, and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at Harr's Drug Store.

The Men's meeting at 3:00 o'clock Sunday, was not as well attended as we expected it would be, although there were a good many present. Mr. Yoeman gave us a good practical address on business principles from a Bible standpoint and text, which was listened to with strict attention and a marked degree of interest and all present enjoyed the meeting very much. In the evening at the Epworth League, the church was filled. The audiance gave close attention to the speaker as he discoursed from the text. "He came to his own and his own received him not." The text was handled with ability and was very impressive. Mr. Yoeman left Monday for Buffalo Center to visit his son who is paster of the M. E. church at that place. Mr. Yoeman made many friends while here, who will unite in trying to have him with us again in the near future.

At a meeting of the officers of the State Savings Bank Tuesday, the following officers were elected: Fred Arnold, President; C. H. Wieghman of Claton co., Vice Pres; Fred A. Arnold, Asst. cashier. Directors; F. Arnold, W. R. Bloom, A. H. Wiegman, J. M. Elder and Henry Gruetzmacher. C. W. Knapp will serve as cashier this month, when a cashier to be elected on Tuesday Feb. 16th. will take his place. C. W. Knapp has been an ideal cashier; serving the past three years so efficiently, that there is not one paper nigotiated by him, during that time, but what has been perfectly good and the bank has been doing a good paying business. The bank is in such a condition that the depositors could withdraw their deposits any day and not cripple it in the least.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 1.—The senate passed several code bills in relation to sureties, county high schools and state superintendents. The military bill developed a desire to cut the amount of the appropriation from $45,000 to $40,000 and was put over till to-morrow.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 2.—The committee on code revision made a final report on the apportionment of code bills and completed the introduction of bills for the session. The senate proceeded to consider the chapter concerning procedure in courts of original jurisdiction. It was decided that insurance companies should be brought under the same rule as railway, telegraph, telephone and express companies in the matter of notice of suits. Service on any agent will be binding.

HOUSE.

Funk moved to reconsider the bill relating to the courts of justices of the peace, which had been defeated. The motion prevailed and after a number of offensive sections had been stricken out the bill passed. The committee appointed to draft resolutions on the lives and public services of Samuel Murdock and Reuben Noble made its report and the same was adopted by a rising vote. "Tama Jim" Wilson was in the building and a committee was appointed to bring him before the house. He addressed the members briefly. Resolutions congratulating Mr. Wilson upon his appointment as secretary of agriculture were adopted The bill in relation to the assignment of creditors was passed, after which adjournment was taken to 9 o'clock to-morrow.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 3.—The code bill relating to civil practice was taken up. An amendment had been reported providing that courts may not limit the length of argument by attorneys before the jury. After a warm debate, it was voted down. A motion was made to reconsider. Senate concurred in house resolution congratulating James Wilson upon his appointment.

HOUSE.

The house passed the bill relating to county high schools, amended so that any county may secure such a school. Bill passed relative to the Industrial School for the Blind at Knoxville. In the bill relating to the judicial department it was amended so that county clerks must collect all fees "for the benefit of the county," and the recommendation of the commissioners that only three terms of court should be held in a year instead of four, was rejected.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 4.—Senate reconsidered matter of limiting lawyers' arguments and this time the lawyers won, and the law stands as it was before. The section including insurance companies among corporations against which if action is brought its agents will be liable to service, was reconsidered and another amendment was adopted providing that "when action is brought against an insurance company for loss or damage on a contract, service may be made upon any general agent, wherever found, or upon any recording or other agent who has authority to issue policies."

HOUSE.

In bill in relation to the judicial department, amendment providing that county clerks collect fees for benefit of the county instead of for themselves, was voted down. A proposition to give county clerks in counties of 40,000 and upwards $2,000 a year was also voted down. An amendment making the office of supreme court reporter appointive after January 1, 1899, placing the term of office at four years, and providing that the clerk could be removed at the option of the supreme court was defeated. The bill as it now reads makes it possible for the clerk to make $3,600 per year, whereas he now makes $2,200.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 5.—One of the longest sections of the code, the one relating to civil procedure, upon which the senate had been working for five days, was adopted to-day. The last seven chapters were passed with no great change from the old laws.

HOUSE.

The bill relating to the judicial department was again taken up and just before adjournment it passed. The bill as finally passed differs little from the form in which it had been recommended by the code commissioners.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 6.—Senate bill relating to domestic animals was reconsidered and the house bill on the same subject was substituted. Chapter relating to the educational board of examiners and to the county superintendents were passed as separate titles.

HOUSE.

Bill in relation to internal improvement was taken up. Chapter relating to mechanics' liens was amended so as to require thirty days notice to be given to satisfy liens. The bill as a whole passed. Bill relating to county superintendents was amended to reduce pay of superintendents from $4 to $3 per day. On a vote the bill was defeated.

PORTER ACCEPTS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—J. Addison Porter of Hartford, Conn., announces that he has been offered and accepted the position of secretary to President-elect McKinley.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

BODIES IN THE RUINS.

Store of Frank Novak, at Wallford, Set On Fire.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 4.—The store of Frank Novak, at Wallford, Linn county, was burned. The proprietor slept in the room above and on the night of the fire had Edward Murray for a companion. The bodies of both men were found in the ruins. It is suspected it is the work of robbers, who burned the building to cover a crime, as it is known that Novak had $500 with him the previous night.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 5.—The fire at Walford has caused a very mystifying condition of affairs. Both Grocer Novak and Farmer Murray are missing and it was certain their bodies were in the ruins. The day before the fire a load of charcoal was placed in the cellar beneath where Novak slept, and this continues to burn despite efforts to quench the fire. One body has been recovered and while the ruins have been completely overhauled the other is missing. It is possible the other was completely destroyed. The body is claimed by the relatives of both Novak and Murray. Novak carried $33,000 life insurance and the companies decline to pay. There is emphasized talk of foul play.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 6.—The coroner's jury has decided that the body found in the ruins of the fire at Walford is that of Frank Murray and has ordered it turned over to his father. The belief is unavoidable that he was murdered and that an axe was used to crush his skull. Suspicion surrounds Novak, who was known to be in a bad way financially, and it was certain that he would be compelled to default on part of his life insurance at the time of the next payment.

ODD FELLOWS' ORPHANS.

Indianola Man Wants to Enjoin Construction of the Home at Jefferson.

DES MOINES, Feb. 6.—J. H. Henderson, of Indianola, filed a petition in the district court asking for an injunction against the grand officers of the Odd Fellows in the state, restraining them from paying out lodge money to erect the orphans' home at Jefferson. It is an effort to tie up the funds and prevent the erection of the home, in the hope that the sovereign grand lodge, to which the case has been appealed, will decide in favor of Indianola.

CURTISS SUCCEEDS WILSON.

Present Assistant Professor Becomes Acting Professor of Agriculture.

AMES, Feb. 6.—A meeting of the board of trustees of the State Agricultural college was held here. Professor James Wilson, who has been appointed secretary of agriculture in Major McKinley's cabinet, was granted an indefinite leave of absence, and Prof. C. F. Curtiss, at present assistant professor, was made acting professor of agriculture.

Queer Place for a Kernel of Corn.

WEBSTER CITY, Feb. 7.—A sprouting kernel of corn was removed from the nostril of the little 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Woods, living near Pocahontas. The child, unknown to its parents, got the kernal into its nose. Trouble was soon noticed in breathing, and the matter gradually became worse. Finally the trouble got so bad the father made an examination and with great difficulty removed the obstacle with a hairpin. It had quite a sprout protruding from it.

Relieved of a Charge of Murder.

BURLINGTON, Feb. 5.—For six months Henry Krekel has been lying in jail with the charge of murder opposite his name on the prison calendar. He was bound over to the grand jury on this charge, and the grand jury found a true bill against him. Now comes the surprising news that there is no evidence against him upon which a conviction could be secured, and Judge Smythe has discharged the prisoner from custody.

Mott Watson Case Decided.

DAVENPORT, Feb. 6.—Judge Waterman delivered a lengthy opinion on the Mott Watson will case from Maquoketa, deciding against the alleged illegitimate son of Watson, who claimed the large estate. The estate was estimated to be worth $300,000, and the plaintiff laid claim to it as the illegitimate son of Watson.

Shot With Murderous Intent.

OSKALOOSA, Feb. 5.—There came near being a tragedy in the Bon Ton bakery here. William Frame, a baker, shot twice at Thomas Barr, the proprietor, but neither bullet hit the intended mark. The parties recently moved to Oskaloosa from Fort Dodge, and the bakery is one of the largest in the city.

An Overdose of Morphine.

OTTUMWA, Feb. 6.—John P. Lander, of Oskaloosa, patentee and manufacturer of patent trusses, took ten grains of morphine while intoxicated. He will probably recover.

YETZER IS A CRIPPLE.

Cass County Bank President Spends His Time in the Prison Hospital.

ATLANTIC, Feb. 7.—Joseph Yetzer, president of the broken Atlantic bank, who is doing a five years' sentence at Fort Madison, has been declared to be a helpless cripple from rheumatism. He was in such a frail condition when taken from the Cass county jail last summer that grave fears were entertained that he would die before he could be placed in the prison. He has lingered at the point of death for a long time. The prison official gives but little hope that the bank president will be able to spend any great portion of time outside of the hospital. He has lost the use entirely of one arm.

GRISWOLD BANK FAILS.

First National Bank Closed by Order of the Comptroller.

ATLANTIC, Feb. 5.—The First National Bank of Griswold has closed its doors. The cash on hand had run below the legal reserve and the advice from the comptroller of the treasury was to close and await the coming of a national bank examiner. The deposits were reduced to $40,000 at the time of the failure. The capital stock was $50,000, and the bank will pay out in full. Thomas H. Brown is president of the bank. Several firms in Griswold may be forced to an assignment as a result of the closing.

MISSING MAN REAPPEARS.

He Claims to Have Been Robbed of $12,000.

OTTUMWA, Jan. 6.—E. E. Harned, the merchant and real estate dealer, who disappeared a week ago, leaving behind many heavy creditors, has as suddenly reappeared in the city. He says he has returned to face the music, and that he will try and straighten out his affairs and start in business again. Harned claims that he left Ottumwa with $12,000, but was robbed of it all in Chicago.

Wealthy Farmer's Suicide.

MASON CITY, Feb. 8.—W. A. Lichtenwalter, a wealthy farmer of Cerro Gordo county, committed suicide by hanging. Neighbors found him danging from a rope in the lott of his barn. He was a stockholder in the City Bank of Nora Springs, which failed some weeks ago. Fearing that he would be financially ruined, he preferred to meet death in this way. He owned 200 acres of land in Cerro Gordo county and 400 in Minnesota.

Cascade Saloonkeepers Fined.

ANAMOSA, Feb. 8.—The Jones county school fund has had $150 added thereto again by the Cascade saloonkeepers in fines. John Geery and T. V. Williams, who were arrested a short time ago, were arraigned in Justice Ricker's court and both pleaded guilty, whereupon the justice fined each $75 and costs, which they promptly paid.

Head Clerk Disappears.

OTTUMWA, Feb. 7.—Victor Johnson, Swedish-American, for years head clerk for Allmayer's clothing house, disappeared recently. He started home from up town about noon, and has not been seen since. He was not well, and it is believed that he wandered off in a fit of temporary aberration of mind.

Serious Fire at Shell Rock.

SHELL ROCK, Feb. 8.—Fire was discovered in H. D. Wilson's dental office and before it could be put out four buildings were totally destroyed and two others damaged, all occupied by by business men. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss will probably reach $6,000.

Henry Weston Pardoned.

ANAMOSA, Feb. 5.—Governor Drake has pardoned Henry Weston from the Anamosa penitentiary. Weston was city marshal of Bellevue, and in arresting a man he shot and killed him. He got 18 months and has served about half the time.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Ottumwa dispatch: Bradley's Bank at Eldon was entered by burglars at an early hour in the morning, the safe blown open with nitro-glycerine, and from five to seven thousand dollars in cash, all on hand, taken. The burglars escaped. One of the robbers was hurt by the explosion, as an amount of blood on the walls of the bank indicates. A team of horses and a vehicle were stolen from Rich Bros., grocers, by which the thieves, in all probability, made their escape from the city. The entrance to the bank was made through a side window on the main street. The brick vault was opened with tools, which the robbers left behind. The team and buggy taken by the robbers were found about noon, near Sugar Creek, between Eldon and Ottumwa. Three strangers were seen in Eldon the previous night. Two were tall and one short. One wore a light overcoat. It is now believed that they came to Ottumwa and took a train from here, or are still in the vicinity.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

DISLODGED BY DYNAMITE.

Victories for the Cuban Insurgents—The Trocha Broken.

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 2.—A daring attack was made on the trocha west of Artimisa. A strong force of insurgents under Col. Pedro Nodars attacked Fort No. 10, and after two hours fighting, dislodged the garrison. After summoning the fort to surrender, which was refused, he ordered the dynamite gun to open on it. The first shell flew wide, but the second and third made big gaps in the sides, killing several in the garrison. A furious infantry fire was maintained and soon the garrison flew the white flag. Fifteen of the garrison were killed, while but one Cuban was hurt. Proceeding on to the next fort, the garrison came over to his forces at the first demand and stated that that they wished to fight for Cuba. They were sick at heart of the murderous work they had to do. There were 100 men and three officers, with a goodly supply of ammunition. These forts, with No. 7, were destroyed. In all the three forts much valuable amunition, guns, etc., were secured. This leaves the trocha open for any Cuban band that may desire to pass through.

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 5.—Havana advices say a pilot engine, with an armored car, and steering a passenger train, left San Cristobal. Arriving at a culvert at Bacungua, near Paco Taco, two dynamite bombs exploded, wrecking the engine and car completely. Four civilians were killed and also the captain of the volunteers and five soldiers. The engineer, fireman and eight soldiers were wounded. The culvert was destroyed entirely.

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 6.—It is rumored in Havana that General Weyler, who is in the province of Santa Clara at the head of his troops, will return to Havana soon, because the frequent raids made into Havana province have alarmed him. It is no secret in Havana that the Spanish officials are uneasy over the appearance of General Rivera in that province, and the possibility of his striking a blow at the capital itself, has greatly alarmed them all. Marquis Ahumada has consequently been in close touch with Weyler. General Rivera had a skirmish with a troop of cavalry fifty miles northwest of Havana and defeated the Spaniards. No details have been allowed to escape, and the censorship has been increased the past fortnight.

CONFLICTS IN CRETE.

Villages Destroyed and People Massacred by the Mohammedans.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—A dispatch to the Times from Athens gives details of the troubles between Christians and Mohammedans on the island of Crete. It is announced that 3,000 Christians have surrounded the seaport town of Canea, and that they have already burned the Mussulman village of Taratzi in revenge for the burning of the town of Galata. Altogether six villages are reported to have been destroyed by fire at the hands of the Mohammedans and Christians, and a rumor has been widely circulated to the effect that a massacre of Christians has occurred at Galata. The Mohammedans made an attempt to burn the telegraph station at Suda. Troops were landed from the English and Italian warships, who aided in extinguishing the flames.

OMAHA EXPOSITION ASSURED.

Ways and Means Committee of the Nebraska House Favors It.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 7.—The ways and means committee of the Nebraska house of representatives unanimously reported the Trans-Mississippi Exposition bill appropriating $150,000 for the exposition. This practically ends all doubt as to the exposition and insures the rapid development of the enterprise.

M'KENNA FOR THE CABINET.

Doesn't Know Whether It Is Attorney General or Secretary of Interior.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 6.—Judge McKenna, of the United States court, has authorized the statement that he has been invited by McKinley to take a position in his cabinet and that he has accepted. Whether he is to be attorney general or secretary of the interior is not known.

Gowdy Gets the Paris Consulship.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 7.—Chairman John K. Gowdy, of the republican state committee, has been tendered and has accepted the position of consul-general to France.

War in Siam.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The statement is published that fighting has occurred on the frontier of Siam between the French and Siamese.

Philippine Island War.

MADRID, Feb. 8.—A dispatch has been received from Manilla stating that eight ministers of the insurgent government have been shot.

PURSUED TO GATES OF HAVANA

Severe Defeat Administered by Cubans to Spanish Volunteers.

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 5.—One of Colonel Hernandez's bands met 300 Havana volunteers ten miles from Havana and defeated them badly. The Cubans feigned a retreat and drew the volunteers into an ambush on the sides of the road, from which they delivered a terrible fire. The volunteers fled and the Cubans pursued them almost to the gates of Havana. A part of the blockhouse garrison there attempted to stem the torrent of Cubans, but were driven into their fort. The loss of the volunteers was over fifty men wounded, killed and missing, while half the force returned to Havana unarmed. The Spanish officials have ordered all officers of the corps to be tried by court martial for cowardice.

BREVITIES.

Arthur Duestrow, the St. Louis millionaire who killed his wife and child, will hang, the supreme court having denied him a new trial.

Prince DeChimay has been granted a divorce from the princess on account of her misconduct with the gypsy musician, Rigo, with whom she eloped. The princess was formerly Miss Ward, of Michigan.

The supreme court of the state of Michigan has declined to take up the petition for mandamus to compel the ousting of Governor Pingree as mayor of Detroit except as an appeal from the county court.

A serious strike, accompanied by bread riots, occurred in Madrid recently. Many arrests have been made The municipal authorities resigned, owing to their inability to suppress the disturbances. Marshal law was proclaimed.

Photographs received by Sheriff Lewis, of Carrollton, Mo., of the man captured several days ago at Hanford, Cal., bear no resemblance to George Taylor, the Meeks family murderer, and the sheriff has been wired to turn the man loose.

Rawlins 32, Thatcher 29, Henderson 1, Brown 1. This was the result of the fifty-third ballot of the Utah legislature which elected Joseph L. Rawlins to the United States senate and closed one of the most exciting political contests ever held in the state.

Washington dispatch: Senator-elect Wellington, of Maryland, has returned from Cleveland, where he talked with Hanna. He says there is no doubt about the passage of a tariff bill. The free silver republican senators and the new senator from Idaho will vote for it.

The supreme court of the United States has decided the Ohio tax cases in favor of the state. These cases were brought up by the express companies to enjoin the collection of taxes under the Ohio laws of 1893 and and 1894 for the taxation of express, telegraph and telephone companies.

Philadelphia dispatch: The Brooklyn, one of Uncle Sam's newest and finest war ships, lies in the Delaware river in a crippled condition. While being moved to a new anchorage to escape ice jams she struck a hidden ledge of rocks. Her lower double compartments forward were crushed in by the terrific collision, and it was only favoring chance that saved the magnificent $4,000,000 creation of naval architecture from going to the bottom of the river. Her inner compartments withstood the shock and kept her afloat until humble tugs dragged the leviathan of the navy from the rocks to the protection of the ice breakers at Marcus Hook.

Washington dispatch: As the representatives of their respective governments, Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, and Senor Jose Andrade, the Venezuelan minister to Washington, at the state department, signed a treaty providing for the settlement by arbitration of the long standing dispute over the boundary between Venezuela and British Guinana. The arbitrators named on the part of Great Britain are Baron Herschell and Sir Richard Henn Collins, while those named for Venezuela are Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Brown of the supreme court. The king of Norway and Sweden is the fifth arbitrator.

Fire was discovered in Lieutenant Governor Lyons' room on the second floor of the main building of the Pennsylvania state capitol recently while both houses of the legislature were in session. It was at first thought the blaze was of a trivial nature, but in a short time the solons were compelled to vacate and within an hour the main building of the capitol, including the senate and the house chambers and the headquarters of several of the executive departments, was in ruins. No one was seriously injured. The building was over eighty years old and most of the libraries and valuable records and collections had been removed to the new library building and two other buildings of the four which constituted the capitol.

ABOUT RAILROAD TRAVEL

What It Cost to Carry Passengers on Western Roads.

There is a surprising amount of misinformation among the people regarding the cost of carrying passengers on railroad trains and to this condition as a public mind is doubtless due much of the sentiment in favor of lower rates, which is finding expression through bills for sweeping reductions in the legislature of many of the western states this winter.

Mr. P. S. Eustis, General Passenger Agent of the C., B. & Q. R. R., in argument before the house committee of the Missouri legislature last week on the two cent bill gave some valuable and surprising information about the passenger business in the west. His statements were based upon the reports of the Inter-state Commerce Commission and the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Missouri and are therefore beyond question.

Mr. Eustis showed in the first place that the volume of passenger traffic on railroads is dependent upon the density and wealth of population in the territory through which it runs, and then compared the population of Missouri and the traffic resulting from it with the same figures in other states, thus clearly illustrating the theory of his point.

The following table showing the relative population and rates is interesting in this connection:

Missouri	39	$ 977.00
Illinois	68	2075.00
Ohio	90	1951.00
New York	122	4513.00
New England	200	4422.00

Mr. Eustis made the statement that while the named rate in most of the western states was three cents per mile, the actual amount received is considerably less than that sum. This is due to the fact that the railroad having a long line between two points cannot charge more than the rate fixed by a road having a shorter line, and to excursion rates demanded by the people, all of which reduce the average rate materially.

But the most surprising assertion made by Mr. Eustis was that the western roads, with possibly one or two individual exceptions, carry passengers at an actual loss. The St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern was cited as an instance. Mr. Eustis produced a statement of the expense on that road to show that the cost per passenger per mile exceeded three cents, the legal rate.

The report of the Inter-state Commerce Commission referring to the railroads of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and that part of the Dakotas and Missouri lying east of the Missouri river shows that it cost the railroads two and three one-thousandths cents per mile to carry passengers exclusive of any charge for taxes, rents, interest on mortgages and other items of the kind. Mr. Eustis declared that a two cent flat rate in Missouri would reduce the average to one and three quarters cents if not lower.

It was shown that lower rates do not largely increase traffic and instances were cited where reductions from four cents and three and one-half cents to three cents per mile did not result in increased travel.

Answering the question as to whether or not rates in Europe were not lower than in this country, Mr. Eustis showed that while the third class rate on some European lines is lower, the second class rates, which are paid by the great traveling public, are higher than American rates. The conveniences of second and third class travel in Europe are not to be compared with those of America in point of comfort and convenience.

To leave it he refused;
A spark fell on his haughty neck,
And, Oh! the words he used!

YOUNG GIRLS.

Their Conduct and Health Often Mystifies Their Mothers.

Young girls often feel and consequently act, very strangely.

They shed tears without apparent cause, are restless, nervous, and at times almost hysterical. They seem self-absorbed, and heedless of things going on around them. Sometimes they complain of pain in lower parts of body, flushes of heat in head, cold feet, etc.

Young girls are not free from incipient womb troubles.

Mothers should see to it that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is promptly taken; all druggists have it. The girl will speedily be "herself again," and a probable danger be averted. Any information on this subject, or regarding all female ailments, will be cheerfully given free by Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Write her.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XIII.—(CONTINUED.)

Emile carefully examined the door, and then went outside, and strewed leaves around the trunk of the tree, to hide the traces of the frequent approach that night. Leaving all things as natural looking as possible, he came down to the lower room, where Felicie had retreated.

She looked up anxiously in his face.

"Will they discover us, Emile?"

"I think not, my child. We must manage without a fire, till their watch is removed. But we can do that well enough; we are provisioned for six months, at least. There are several casks of water upstairs, and the spring is not far distant; I can easily replenish them at night."

"How exhausted you must feel! Take some of the wine, I beg you."

"Perhaps I had better; I dare not go to sleep until after the visit to the woods, for I may hear important plans discussed. After that I must sleep, for I believe it is a week since I have really taken a night's rest. It is nearly daybreak now; I brought a basket of provisions from the chateau, thinking they might please you best; pray take what refreshment you can, for we must not have another patient. Poor fellow! he is in a complete stupor. Keep his head wet all the time—it seems to be all we can do now; and be sure and care for yourself!"

"The poor chateau!" murmured Felicie, sinking wearily into a chair, and for the first time throwing off the heavy black cloak.

The bridal dress, rent and soiled, and in several places crimsoned with the blood of her father, came to view.

The thought of the tender maternal care which had arranged every fold with such proud and loving hands, of the woeful tragedy which had met her, instead of the bridal service, was too overpowering, and it rushed suddenly upon her.

She fell back fainting. Emile caught her in his arms, and while the tears poured over his cheeks, used every effort to revive her. For a time it seemed to him he was to be left with two corpses on his hands, for the youth scarcely stirred, and Felicie lay cold and breathless in his arms.

But the latter at length gasped, and in a few moments opened her eyes. He laid her tenderly upon the pile of blankets brought from the chateau, and gave her spoonful after spoonful of wine.

"You deserve better behavior," said she, feebly; "I did not mean to yield to my feelings, but the sudden remembrance of my desolation swept aside all my fortitude."

"You have been brave and courageous, my child; I can admire, but not blame your noble efforts. Ah, Felicie! if I allow myself to recur to the thought that she is gone, my strength gives way—but for the present we must not dwell upon it. Dearest one, your grief is mine; for her sake you would be the most precious thing left in the world, even if your own merits did not win my esteem. The chateau is gone, they are gone, too, for the brief day of life; thank Heaven, not for the eternal ages! Will you consent to put away your identity as the daughter of the Count Languedoc? Will you adopt me for a father, brother, uncle, whatever you like, and take a new name? I think the sooner you use yourself to it, the safer it will be when it becomes necessary," said Emile, gently.

"Tell me what you wish, and that is enough for me."

"Your name shall be Chlotilde; I had a sister once whose name was Reinard—and you shall be for the time Mademoiselle Reinard; and as my young friend yonder, if he recovers, will be likely to be awkward and embarrassed in your presence, knowing your rank, I particularly request that he shall believe you my sister's child. You will become somewhat used to the name, I hope, before you venture into the world. And now I must listen to the doings without; lie still and rest—the patient will not stir for many hours, and doubtless it is the best thing—kindly nature will recuperate the palsied brain with the sweetest of balms, untroubled sleep."

CHAPTER XIV.

HE went back—this generous, self-sacrificing man, to watch and listen for the approach of the bloodthirsty, unscrupulous foe. For himself there was no real danger, he had but to go forth boldly, and the Falcon of Paris received instant protection and confidence; but for these helpless ones he stood bravely in defence, never for a single moment harboring the thought of deserting them, to secure himself from peril.

Once, intense weariness overpowered him, and leaning against the natural wall of his secret apartment, he fell sound asleep.

Sharp voices without aroused him suddenly. He started up, alert and not in the least bewildered, and put his ear to the tiny aperture in the trunk of the huge tree.

"You were a fool, Pepin!" said M. Pierre's voice, angrily. "Why didn't you shoot the wretch? Now he has got away—I know who it was well enough—it was the one I vowed should die first."

"I thought he was dead, citizen Pierre."

A volley of oaths exploded a little of M. Pierre's rage, and after it he was able to answer coherently.

"So did I; but I have opened the grave, and I tell you two are missing. The girl has escaped beside; curses upon my ill luck! they have found all the diamonds, too, and are off; but I shall track them, I shall find them, though I hunt France over. They are hid up, somewhere, and they will try to reach a foreign country. It is the shore I must watch. Not a craft of any kind must leave Frejus or St. Thomas night or day, without a thorough search. I will triumph yet. Keep a band of men around this forest, and when day comes we will search it thoroughly. I suspect, though, some soft-hearted fool has given them a shelter; the peasants of the estate were always ready to kiss the ground Felicie and her mother stood on, much as they hated the count. We must keep a sharp eye on all; there is old Jeannot, where is he, in all this excitement? Not a sign have I seen of him."

"Never you fear, comrade; if they're around we'll beat them up. But who could they have been, those black masked villains who beat us, when we thought we held the chateau?"

"Perdition seize them! It must be looked to. There's not much fear of their appearing another time; things will be more orderly in future; and the whole country is up now. I half suspect they had our motives, Pepin, to get the diamonds and treasure for themselves, and, curse them! they have got them, or else that wretch revived, and bolted with bride and money both; but I shall find them yet, let me alone for that."

"The man I saw certainly came as far as here, but where he went then, le diable only knows. I lost him, like as if the earth had opened and swallowed him."

"We'll hunt the whole place over thoroughly, when daylight comes; this confounded dry ground won't give us a trace of steps. But come, let's station a pack of our men around the whole place."

Talking eagerly, they moved slowly off.

"We must lie close for our lives," muttered Emile, as he sat down again; "but I feel pretty secure. I left no trace of my work when I excavated. The door I would defy a police officer to find, without acquaintance with the secret. Let the villain Pierre search, the Gray Falcon is too keen-eyed to be caught! And yet it will change my plans—I must not attempt to leave by the Mediterranean, I see that. It is safest to go where the danger is most imminent, when you are followed, for there no one suspects you have the temerity to venture. Yes, we must all get away from here to some large city—I am not sure but it were better to go direct to Paris itself. For Felicie there would be little risk, but for the youth a great deal—yet it will mar my plans to separate them! Well, I am not obliged to decide to-night. Now is my opportunity for the much-needed rest—an hour or so will freshen me wonderfully."

He drew over him a blanket he had left there for the purpose, and curled himself up for sleep, and was evidently accustomed to obtain rest in this manner, or he would not so soon have fallen into sound sleep, in such an uncomfortable position.

Below, the sick youth was lying stirless as a log, only the heavy breathing showing signs of life, and Lady Felicie, wrapt in sweet slumber, was dreaming that her mother's arm encircled her, and they were pacing softly on the chateau terrace.

The gray dawn broke slowly over the scene, the roseate flush crept up the sky, and touched pityingly the blackened heap of ruins where but yesterday had risen so proudly the grand old building. Softly the growing gold flooded the trampeled ground, the desecrated graves, the melancholy, pitiable wreck of the home the Count Languedoc so fondly believed should stand in pride throughout the century. And he, its haughty master, was lying in a bloody and unhallowed grave.

Mellow and warm were those sunbeams ere they crept through the leafy canopy of the forest, and bathed gratefully the massive trunk of the great tree, whose hollow stairway gave safe shelter to the hapless orphan.

They all slept far into the day; but when Emile came down he found Felicie quietly giving the youth a glass of water, and bathing his head.

His eyes looked rational and intelligent; as Emile came forward, they brightened perceptibly.

"You are better," said the latter, joyfully.

"Thank you, I believe so; have I been ill? Shall we get along on the journey to-day? My friends will be so painfully anxious, I would risk a great deal. But you seem destined to be my preserver."

Emile looked a little embarrassed.

"Not so rational as I supposed," said he, in an undertone. "Mademoiselle Chlotilde, will you be so good as to get me a little of the bread for my breakfast, and there is some cold meat, I think."

She obeyed at once, and this errand took her to the farther apartment.

Emile seized the moment to bend over the youth.

"Have you forgotten the terrible night at the chateau, how you were knocked senseless, how I brought you to the forest, to my secret retreat, and do you remember that your name is Jules Hentz, and that there is caution to be maintained before all, even my little niece here?"

He spoke the words rapidly, but with emphasis; Jules stared at him a moment vacantly, then shuddered from head to foot.

"Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu! oh, yes, I remember. Heaven help me!" cried he, in a voice of anguish.

Emile laid his cool hand upon the fevered forehead.

"You are safe, it shall be well with you, only promise to be calm. I shall care for you."

He caught the hand in his, and the tears gushed over it.

"Noble benefactor, nobler than the royalists of an imperial line! what can I ever do to express my gratitude?"

"Be calm, and learn to recover happiness."

Jules smiled feebly, closed his eyes, and sank off into slumber.

Emile hastened to the side of Felicie, who was setting forth the little table with every delicacy she could find.

"You are taking too much trouble, dear Chlotilde; (you see I must accustom you to the name) only some bread and meat, and a little wine. You will find a spirit lamp for your coffee, somewhere. I am sorry you must do without a servant; but it is imperatively necessary that you learn to understand a little of the work usual to the class you are to represent; I will try to make it as easy as possible for you."

Her eyes filled with tears.

"Pray don't think of trying, dear, generous friend; I am so thankful for work, anything that keeps my hands busy, and my mind from dwelling on past horrors. And for you! oh, how gladly would I go upon my knees, wear the flesh from my fingers, to feel I was really repaying a little of what I owe to you."

"My child," began Emile, and broke down with the sob that caught his voice; "the angel above knows how fully I am rewarded for all I can do for you, without any returns of yours. Yet, give me a little affection, such as I might claim if I were really your uncle, and I shall be blest indeed."

Lady Felicie took his hand and raised it to her lips.

Emile turned away, too much affected by the simple act to be able to reply.

CHAPTER XV.

PIERRE and his band of ruffians scoured the Little Forest over and over again the next day, nor desisted until the shadows of night prevented further search. More than once did the baffled leader pause and lean against the side of the very tree whose reticent trunk might have given lucid answers to all his fierce questioning, had it chosen, or had he possessed the secret spell to unlock its mysteries.

Emile from within heard his bitter denunciations of the fate which thwarted him, and his fierce vows to persist in the search until success rewarded him, and smiled in calm defiance.

But M. Pierre was not so insignificant a foe as Emile believed. As the days wore on and the same vigilant watch was kept over the forest, the village, and the coast, the latter found that it would need his utmost shrewdness and adroitness to effect an escape from the tree.

One night he ventured out, and took a circuitous route to the town. He managed to slip between the sentinels stationed in a ring around the Little Forest, and reached one of his allies at Frejus.

PLANETARY GOSSIP.

HOROSCOPIC READINGS OF PROBABLE EVENTS.

Instructions to Applicants for Free Readings in These Columns—Name, Address, Date and Hour of Birth Important Requisites.

THE free readings now being given in these columns are so popular that it will take some time before those on hand will be answered. Every letter sent in will be answered in its regular order.

Those who do not wish to wait their turn can get their readings by mail for twelve two-cent stamps. In all cases full name and address of applicants must accompany requests for free readings. Also place, date, hour and place of birth. If the hour is not known send two two-cent stamps for special instructions. Address all communications to Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 South Clinton street, Chicago, Ill.

Following are the readings for this week:

Minnie W., Maukato, Kan.

According to the data you have the Zodiacal sign Virgo which Mercury rules with a lingering indication of the sign Leo, which the Sun rules rising at your birth, therefore, Mercury and the Sun are your ruling planets or significators.

You are medium height; medium dark complexion; hair and eyes.

You are rather of a studious nature and take delight in unraveling some mystery and are easily interested in chemistry and electricity. You are very intuitive at times, but your intuition works uneven or spasmodically. You will not generally be appreciated by people until they are well acquainted with you. Love affairs and marriage will not be more than average fortunate. You are liable to accidents and injuries to your feet. You will also be subject to some odd nervous ailment of the heart, this will not be organic or at all dangerous.

E. A. I. X., Owensville, Ind.

According to data furnished you have the zodiacal sign, Scorpio, which Mars rules, rising at birth, therefore Mars is your ruling planet or significator. Saturn is on the ascendant, and is co-significator. You are medium height, with a well-set, strong, plump figure; medium to dark complexion; dark eyes; a luxuriant growth of dark hair. The face is rather full and broad. You are one of the stirring, energetic kind of people, and have the desire and ability to push your business, yet you do this in such a quiet way that others will hardly know anything about it until it is all over. You are secretive and deliberate in your actions, and lay your plans first and work them out afterward. You are fond of chemistry, soldiers, firemen, and all kinds of military affairs. Love affairs never ran smooth with you long at a time. The last half of your life has been the most fortunate. You are under evil transits now, especially for health, and should be careful.

Miss Marie H., Detroit.

According to data furnished the zodiacal sign Aquarius, which Uranus rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Uranus is your ruling planet or significator. The sign Pisces, which Jupiter rules, was intercepted, and Mars was on the ascendant, therefore Jupiter and Mars are co-significators. You are of medium height, or slightly above; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; when small your hair was flaxen. You are quite energetic and ambitious, and do not like to be opposed; anyone that undertakes to control your independent actions will be likely to get the benefit of your opinion of them. You are very independent in your ideas of dress, and will wear anything you think is right and proper, no matter if it suits the four hundred or not. You have a good intellect, and should make a great effort to overcome the obstacles that are hindering your education. Your husband will be one of those bright, refined, kind and obliging men, with dark eyes, that have a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight; marriage will be far more than average fortunate.

Note.—Those who have sent in their stamps (26 cents) for readings by mail, will usually be promptly answered. In cases where there is an apparent delay the astrologer should be notified at once and the mistake will be rectified.

MONEY IN 12 CENT CORN.

In spite of the low prices of corn, says an exchange, one Iowa farmer has demonstrated that it can be made to bring a good price if utilized in the right way. J. J. Chandler, a farmer, who lives at Solomon, near Shenandoah, in Paige county raised 40,000 bushels of corn and it has netted him 53¾ cents per bushel. He fed it to cattle. He gives the following figures to prove his statement;

Sept. 1 1896, 101 head of cattle cost in Omaha	$3 667 60
Cost of driving same home	9 85
Interest on money	71 47
Total	$3 748 92
Dec. 22nd. 1896, sold 101 cattle in Chicago, net	$6 147 51
Ballance	$2 398 65

Amount of corn fed. 4,000 bushels; net per bushel, 53¾ cents.

In this statement Chandler takes no account of interest on land investment, but as he takes no account of hog feed for 100 hogs which followed the cattle, this item will more than off set the interest.

Humboldt, Feb. 3.—Special: Yesterday afternoon R. J. and M. H. Johnston, proprietors of Oakbourne herd of Poland China hogs closed out their remaining stock and will go out of the business. The sale was one of the best ever held in the state. The average for the fifty-four head was over $135. The boar Lookout 28901, four years old, was sold to McQuiston Bros. of Gerlan, Ill., for $1,600 and the sow Klever's Choice 74256, to M. V. Patterson of Norwalk for $600. Their prices decended to 300, 255, 535, 200, 195 185, 160. $150 and so on down. There are still left in this locality other herds of equal value and another sale will come off in about a fortnight.

WALLACES' FARMER.

The cold weather of the last three weeks has prevented the loss of much soft corn.

Now is a good time to plan to utilize odd corners about the farm that have heretofore been going to waste.

The lower the price of farm products the greater the necessity for more economcal production and improved methods.

Can any reader of the Farmer give a logical reason for paying $10 or $15 for a coming-a-year-old calf and but $20 to $30 for a cow heavy with calf and in the full bloom of usefulness.

About the most comfortable feeling I ever had on the farm was when I drew a chair up to the warm fire on a bitter winter night and thought of the stock all bedded down in clean straw and sheltered from the piercing wind. There is something wrong with the man who can feel comfortable himself until he has done all in his power to make the animals comfortable.

A torpid liver means a bad complexion, bad breath, Indigestion and frequent headaches. To avoid such companions take DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. Harr.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

This man whose homely face you look upon,
Was one of Nature's masterful, great men;
Born with strong arms, that unfought victories won,
Direct of speech, and cunning with the pen.
Chosen for large designs, he had the art
Of winning with his humor, and he went
Straight to his mark, which was the human heart;
Wise, too, for what he could not break he bent.
Upon his back a more than Atlas' load,
The burden of the Commonwealth was laid;
He stooped, and rose up with it, though the road
Shot suddenly downwards, not a whit dismayed.
Hold, warriors, councillors, kings! All now give place
To this dead Benefactor of the Race!

—Richard Henry Stoddard.

LINCOLN'S ANCESTRY.

FAR back in the centuries the river Witham, which flows through the lowlands of Eastern England, was known as the Lindis. The town which the Romans built on the bank of the stream received the name of Dinâum. When the Romans made themselves masters of England they built a castle on the top of a hill that overlooks the town and changed the name to Lincoln. In the course of years it became the name of a family, possibly there were several families bearing the name in Norfolk and Lincoln counties.

We know that one such family had its home in Hingham, and that Samuel Lincoln was an infant on that when the Pilgrims, in December, 1620, established a government of the people in America. We also know that there was an older brother, Thomas; but it is not certain that we shall ever learn much about their parents. It seems probable that they were obliged to work hard to obtain a living for themselves and children. We may conclude that their home was a cottage, thatched with straw. We may think of the brothers as playing in the streets, or going in to the green fields and gathering daisies, listening to the larks and nightingales. They could look across the meadows and see the tall spire of Norwich Cathedral, and in the hush and stillness hear the great bell sending forth its music.

Quite likely they heard their parents say that King James had died, and that his son, Charles I., was king. Then the talk was about troublesome times. The king maintained that he was ordained by God to rule the Nation and that it was the duty of the people to obey. The bishop preached that the king could do no wrong. Charles wanted money and levied taxes without consulting parliament. The Puritans who would not pay, together with those who would not accept the ritual prepared by the bishop, were arrested so many times that the jail and the Guildhall in Norwich were filled. When the officers undertook to collect the tax in Lincoln the people pelted them with stones. The Puritans all over England were resisting the demands of the king. Possibly it was the desire of Charles to get rid of them that led him to grant a charter for a government of their own in America. The persecution of the bishop and the arbitrary acts of the king made life so bitter that thousands of Puritans were ready to leave England forever.

Many of the people of Norfolk and Lincoln counties had sailed for Massachusetts; others were ready to join them. The ships, Rose and the John, and Dorothy, were at Garmouth, preparing to sail. Francis Lawes resolved to become an emigrant, and it seems probable that Samuel Lincoln was ready to join his brother, who had settled in Hingham, near Boston. We see them traveling across the meadows and lowlands, with others, to Yarmouth town. Together the ships sail across the Atlantic, to drop their anchors in Salem Harbor.

It is probable that Samuel Lincoln, for lack of wool, did not do much weaving in the town of Ipswich, where his master settled.

The only sheep in Massachusetts were a few which were pastured on the islands in Boston harbor, where the wolves could not get at them.

When the apprentice became of age he joined his brother Thomas in Hingham. He had learned a trade; it is not certain that he followed it, but probably he became a farmer. A maiden named Martha became his wife; her parental name is not known. Their children were Samuel, Daniel, Mordecai, Mary, Martha, Sarah and Rebecca.

Startling news came that the Indians were murdering the settlers of Swanzey. It was the beginning of the war with the Pequos, under their chief, Philip. Samuel, the oldest son, seized his father's gun and powder horn and became a soldier. A year passed, in which more than six hundred of the settlers were killed; but the chief was dead, and his head was hanging on a gibbet in Plymouth. The captured Indians were sold as slaves to the Spaniards.

Mordecai Lincoln, the while, was blowing the bellows and making the anvil ring in a blacksmith's shop. When he became of age he set up his own forge in Hull. Perhaps Sarah Jones may have influenced him in settling there, for she soon became his wife.

The year 1686 was a memorable one to the blacksmith, for a son was born to him—Mordecai, junior. Just before his birth the frigate Rose sailed into Boston harbor, bringing Sir Edmund Andros, who had been appointed governor of Massachusetts, Plymouth, Rhode Island and Connecticut. He had brought over two companies of troops to aid him in upsetting the government of the people. It seems that Mordecai Lincoln could look from his shop door and see the frigate running out its guns and firing a salute, and the cannon of the castle replying. James II. had determined to overthrow the Puritan commonwealth. The people were no longer to assemble in town meeting or make their own laws. We may be sure that the farmers who came to have their horses shod or their ploughshares sharpened, or fishermen who wanted work done, expressed their minds freely upon public affairs, and that the blacksmith had something to say while making the anvil ring by his sturdy blows. Three years passed, and Sir Edmund Andros saw the streets of Boston suddenly swarming with armed men, who came from Cambridge, Roxbury, Hingham, Hull and other towns, put an end to his government and re-establish their own.

NORWICH CATHEDRAL.
(Where the Ancestors of Lincoln Worshiped.)

Blacksmith Lincoln thought the time had come when the people of Massachusetts should no longer be dependent on England for iron. There was an abundant supply of ore in the bogs and meadows of Scituate and Hingham.

Through his efforts a furnace was constructed and the ore dug from a bog and smelted. It was the beginning of an industry which lasted many years. His enterprise went further. He built a mill on Bound Brook, where the water tumbled over the rocks to the sea. The brook at the falls was the boundary between the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts. It was of great service for a large section of the country in both colonies.

Mordecai Lincoln helped build the Hingham meeting-house. The elders decided just what seats people should occupy, and they assigned an honorable seat to him in the front gallery.

He wanted his grandchildren to be well educated, and in his will bequeathed £10 to aid them in Harvard College. We do not know in what year the blacksmith's eldest son, Mordecai, junior, married, neither is the maiden name of his wife to be found on any record. We only know that after the birth of a son the husband became a widower.

Although Massachusetts was sparsely settled, people were emigrating from the province. Mordecai Lincoln, with his son John, made his way to Freehold, Monmouth County, N. J. The citizens of that county regarded him as worthy of their esteem. Hannah Salter, daughter of Richard and Sarah Bowne Salter, gave him her hand in marriage. Mr. Salter was a lawyer,

THE AMERICAN MEETING HOUSE.
(Where the American Ancestors of Lincoln Worshiped.)

judge and member of the Provincial assembly. Hannah's uncle, Captain John, Bower, was rich. He remembered Hannah Salter Lincoln in his will, giving her £250. Her husband was so greatly esteemed that in title-deeds he was styled "gentleman." He was thrifty, and purchased several hundred acres of land. He wanted more, and visited the valley of the Schuylkill, in Pennsylvania to see for himself whether or not the lands there were as fertile and beautiful as reported. He was so well pleased that he resolved to become a citizen of Pennsylvania, and remove to Amity township.

It seems conclusive that John did not go with his father, but remained in Freehold, and married there. It was on the Schuylkill that the Lincolns, Hanks and Boone families became associated. When Mordecai Lincoln died he left George Boone, father of the more celebrated Daniel Boone, to look after his will. The lands were equally divided between the sons, Mordecai, Jr., Thomas, John and Abraham. John and Thomas Lincoln later went to Virginia. The Boones moved to Wilkesborough, N. C. The Hanks family also moved farther west. This was about 1748. France had just driven England out of Canada and the American colonies were beginning to feel unrest.

Daniel Boone explored Kentucky, and thither followed the Lincolns and Hankses. Abraham, son of Mordecai Lincoln, married Mary Shipley before pushing into the wilderness of the territory. They had three children, Mordecai, Thomas and Josiah. Thomas Lincoln grew up and married Nancy Hanks. They settled in a log cabin at Elizabethtown. Here Sarah Lincoln was born to them. Later they moved to Rock Spring, where on February 12, 1809, he who was destined to become one of the grandest men of history was born—Abraham Lincoln.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The Nicaragua canal bill was before the senate nearly all day, but no progress was made toward a final vote. In executive session the treaty between the United States and Great Britain was reported and was discussed briefly.

HOUSE.

A large number of bills were passed today, but few were of any considerable importance. Among these were bills to retire ex-Commander of the Navy Quackenbush; to prevent carrying obscene literature from one state to another; to reduce the amount allowed steamboat inspectors, and to amend an act to repeal the timber culture laws. Good progress was also made on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Chandler introduced the following resolution and said he would speak upon it in a few days:

That it is the sense of the senate that the United States should not permanently acquiesce in the single gold standard, and that the efforts of the government in all its branches should be steadily directed to secure and maintain the use of silver as well as gold as standard money, with the free coinage of both under a system of bimetallism to be established through international agreement, with such safeguards of legislation as will insure the parity of the value of the metals at a fixed ratio, furnish a sufficient volume of bimetallic money, and give immunity to the world of trade from violent fluctuations of exchange.

HOUSE.

The diplomatic and consular bill was passed, and considerable progress was made with the District of Columbia bill. The bill as passed carries $1,673,708. Resolutions arranging for the formal canvassing of the electoral vote of the last presidential election on Wednesday, February 10, were adopted.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Allen's resolutions questioning the powers of the executive to foreclose the government loans against the Pacific roads was taken up and Thurston made a statement of the terms the government would secure under the proposed suits. At 2 o'clock the Nicaragua canal bill came up and Morgan gave notice that amendments offered by Teller had been accepted. Vilas resumed his speech in opposition to the bill. It was the intention of the friends of the bill to force a vote but a quorum disappeared and adjournment was necessary.

HOUSE.

The contested election case of Cornett vs. Swanson, from the Fifth Virginia district, occupied the attention of the house. It was decided in favor of the democratic contestant, Swanson.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 4.—An effort to pass the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the capitol building brought out a speech by Hill on personal liberty. Immigration bill was recommitted to conference. Vilas again resumed his speech in opposition to the Nicaragua bill and had not concluded when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The major portion of the day was devoted to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. Amendment was adopted repealing law by which court of claims was engaged in passing on claims aggregating $1,400,000 against the district.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The Delaware contest was settled by seating Richard R. Kenney, silver democrat. Thurston continued his address against Allen's Pacific railroad resolutions. Debate on canal bill was continued, Allen and Caffery speaking against the bill. Fifty pension bills were passed.

HOUSE.

This was private bill day and the entire time was devoted to clearing the calendar of unfinished business. Out of sixty-three pension bills fifty-nine were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Thurston continued his speech against the Pacific railroad resolutions. Nicaragua canal bill gave way to the calendar. A number of bills of small importance passed. The Cameron Cuban resolution was reached, but the senate then took up and passed the resolutions of eulogy on the late Representative Cogswell, of Massachusetts.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Feb. 4.—A valid patent cannot be granted to one person when two or more persons are the inventors, or vice versa, to two or more persons when only one person is the inventor, excepting when the inventor or inventors as the case may be make a formal assignment and therein direct the patent to be issued jointly to the inventor or inventors and the assignees. Whenever an invention is the joint product of different minds, a joint patent must be applied for by all the inventors, and if a patent for such an invention is taken by any number of such inventors less than the whole number, such patent is void. An invention is essentially a product of mind and not of hands, and he who suggests an essential feature or features of an art, machine, manufacture or compound is the inventor thereof, although another person may embody such suggestions in tangible materials. It is often difficult to determine whether an invention is joint or single; but when two or more persons are engaged together in the making of an invention, and an invention results as the effect of their joint consultations, each invention is joint, and the courts will not go into all the minutiæ of the case, although, of course, one or the other of the persons must have been the first to specify this or that part, or the whole of the invention, in words, or by drawings, or by a model, or by actual reduction to practice. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

Millions of Cook Books Given Away.

There is one large house in this country that has taken business on its turn and means to ride in on the rising tide. Alive to the signs of better times and to the best interests of the people, they are now circulating among families a valuable publication known as THE CHARLES A. VOGELER COMPANY'S COOKERY BOOK AND BOOK OF COMFORT AND HEALTH, which contains very choice information on the subject of cooking. Receipts for the preparation of good, substantial and dainty dishes, prepared especially for it by a leading authority, will be found in its pages. Much care has been taken in its preparation and distribution, with the hope that it will be just the thing needed for housekeepers, and just the thing needed also for the care of the health and household. As a Cookery Book it will be invaluable to keep on hand for reference.

It also contains full information in regard to the great remedies of this house, which provide against bodily ailments, especially the Master Cure for Pains and Aches, St. Jacobs Oil.

To give some idea of the labor and expense of this output, more than 200 tons of paper have been used in its publication, and at the rate of 100,000 a day, it has taken several months for the issue.

The book can be had of druggists everywhere, or by enclosing a 2c. stamp to The Charles A. Vogeler Company, Baltimore, Md.

It costs $500,000,000 every day to run the world's railways.

SOME ST. VALENTINE DAY SKETCHES

ROMANCE OF A VALENTINE.

It was the fourteenth day of February and the lovely Estelle was sitting in her luxurious boudoir when a package was handed her which she opened and exclaimed with innocent delight:

"It is a valentine!"

How exquisite this wreath of hand-painted roses—delicately tinted, as all tea-roses should be. And this little pocket! What can it contain? A ring. Amazing. And written on it this motto: "Think of me." There are no Cupids, with bows and arrows, and lines, rhyming with love and dove, charms and alarms, rain and pain, etc.—but a neat blank verse expressing regard and admiration, and conveying no hint of the donor or other information than that he was one unknown to her, who for the loves of art and travel, which had always ruled his life, would soon be far away on the other side of the blue waves.

Estelle took the ring from its hiding place and slipped it on her finger, curious to know if it fitted, then her maiden modesty suggested that she ought not to accept and wear a gift from an unknown giver—and she withdrew it quickly from her finger and determined to return it. But now the question arose: to whom? where?

After reasoning with her conscience she again put in on her finger. It fitted nicely and produced a mysterious presentiment of coming bliss, and a sensation about her heart which she had never known before painted her cheek with the lovely color of the tea roses on her valentine, and she said emphatically, "He shall be my ideal; I can construct him as I like—I shall make him as handsome as Apollo and as gifted; and who can chide me if I become a hero worshiper?" And he only asks that I think of him.

Her soliloquy and state of curiosity were interrupted by a friend and comrade of the art school, Mrs. Bird, a widow lady of wealth and an enthusiast about art, like herself, whose errand was to propose a journey together to the cradle of art. Estelle was only too glad to accompany her and accepted without hesitation. A feeling she could not account for prevented her from showing her valentine or speaking until long afterward of the little talisman that now seemed almost like a betrothal ring. The congenial friends made their trip a series of delights—and would have regretted reaching their destination so soon if they had not been just in time for one of those annual fetes which the American club of artists delight to celebrate.

As they were speeding along on their pleasure jaunt seated on the deck of a comfortable boat watching their companions and enjoying a delicious breeze and the varied scenery—mountain, crag, castle, monastery and dark forest—Estelle observed a picturesque looking young man, artistically dressed, as suited the occasion, gazing with a surprised and earnest look at herself. His rich brown hair and glowing eyes of the same color reminded her of her ideal, the beautiful hero whom her imagination had created, and she felt the finger encircled by the mysterious ring give a little throb in unison with her heart beat. At this moment to her surprise her friend Mrs. Bird gave him a smile and nod of recognition and before she had time to recover from her confusion of mind, Mrs. Bird requested permission to introduce her artist friend, Henry St. Leger, and she very soon found herself absorbed in conversation with the most attractive man she had ever met.

But it was long after this, on another St. Valentine day, when the artist friends homeward bound, sat gazing down into the dark blue waves—that she laughingly gave an account of her first valentine and the little circlet of gold, which she observed, but did not know why, attracted his attention and excited his curiosity, that he ventured to tell of his long years' study and self-denial, whilst at the same time he had followed and worshiped a star which he thought too far above him to be obtained, but which he now, by the aid of St. Valentine, hoped would ever more be his guiding spirit. E

From Sentimental Sally.

"Sentimental Sally" sends us the following valuable and seasonable contribution:

He who would have me for his valentine
Must have no other love than mine;
I cannot share his heart,
I will not have a part,
I must have all, or none.
For he my heart has won,
And there he reigns alone,
A monarch on his throne.

A Freeze Out.

Cupid seeks in vain for shelter,
Vainly strives to find a door
To a human heart that's loving,
For the signs are frosted o'er,

With a veil of chilling folly—
Prejudice of birth or gold—
But the snowbirds gladly greet him
With a wealth of love unsold.

Brought Her Down in a Basket.

An Oakfield, Cal., girl, in a foolhardy climb at Skaggs Springs, near Santa Rosa, beat her companions in getting to the top of a very precipitous rock, 100 feet above the ground. Once there she became dizzy and hysterical, and was rescued with difficulty by means of a rope carrying a basket being thrown over the rock.—Exchange.

Kidney Disease and Rheumatism

RESULTING FROM ARMY EXPOSURE.

History of Horace Robertson, of Johnson County, Iowa.

(From the Times, West Branch, Iowa.)

Horace Robertson is a prosperous farmer of West Branch, Johnson County, Iowa He is a veteran of the late war, having served for three years and twenty-one days in the Tenth Iowa Infantry.

Since the war he has further done his duty as a good citizen by serving several terms as township clerk, trustee and supervisor. In all of these positions he has served with that modesty and singleness of purpose that invariably brings as a reward unstinted commendation and approbation.

Mr. Robertson suffered excruciating pain for years, suffering as only a confirmed rheumatic can suffer. At his work it was an unwelcome, ever present companion, while his nights were rendered most miserable by the racking pains of this disease. He told a reporter who was interested in his case and who is associated with him in the noble order of the Grand Army of the Republic, that he had been confined to his bed for days at a time and that the pain in his back and legs was almost unendurable and made him at times almost helpless. He had been treated from time to time by different physicians and has taken several kinds of patent medicines all of which afforded him but little if any relief. Mr. Robertson was also afflicted with disease of the kidneys from which he could find no permanent relief. He could not retain his urine which was highly colored and was compelled to get up several times during each night. He has also at times been wholly unable to control the movement of his legs, they having lost their natural powers. In fine Mr. Robertson was a sorely afflicted man both from rheumatism and disease of the kidneys.

He tells the reporter that many months ago he was induced to try Pink Pills for Pale People put up at Schenectady, N. Y., by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company. Had only taken these pills a short time when he began to experience relief from both rheumatism and kidney trouble. After taking them regularly for several months he found most happily that the racking pain was gone from his back as also the incessant ache from his legs. The kidney trouble also showed great improvement, so much so that for a long while he has been able to comfortably retain his urine by getting up only once during the night. He is now not entirely free from kidney trouble, his urine being scant and somewhat colored. He thinks, however, that this may be attributable to the fact that he has not taken any Pink Pills for some time and also that he has been working hard of late. Mr. Robertson told the reporter that he believes himself cured of rheumatism and thinks it probable that a further and persistent use of Pink Pills may complete the cure of his kidneys already so happily improved. He is now able to do a good days work for a man verging on sixty years, has a fair appetite and sleeps quite well. Mr. Robertson has now the best health he has had for years and he says that Pink Pills have accomplished this happy result, and to them he gives his grateful praise and also recommends these valuable pills to all who are similarly afflicted.

Should any one doubt the truthfulness of the above statement and Mr. Robertson's character as a truthful man, the reporter suggests that such persons write to Mr. A.C. Hunter, post master at West Branch, Iowa, for corroboration.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A Modern Way to Stop a Cough

As Tried by a Prominent Iowa Minister.

In a recent letter he says: "Many winters have I coughed all winter long. Twice have I been compelled to rest from my ministerial duties, for a period of several years. When I took cold in winter the coughing would be intense. Last fall I took cold about the 15th of October, and was sick with it for about a week and began what I supposed was a winter of coughing. My wife called my attention to Dr. Kay's Lung Balm, and after much persuasion on her part, and a free expression (of a not flattering character) about patent medicines, on my part, I concluded to try the Lung Balm. I felt at once that it touched a place in my malady that nothing else had ever done. I began to improve. I used about 5 boxes and can now preach without coughing. I keep it by me and if I take cold I use it. If I have a bronchial irritation after preaching I take Dr. Kay's Lung Balm. I can cheerfully say that the Lung Balm prepared by The Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co. of Omaha, Neb., has been a great help to me. It has no bad effect upon the stomach. Respectfully yours. J. D. DE TAR, Pastor M. E. Church, Spring Hill, Iowa, Des Moines Conference."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

They report just a splendid time, and they were completely surprised. The lodge took in six new members Friday night by initiation and one by card. This lodge has rented the upper part of the Schoper building and will have it prepared for a lodge room. It will make a good comfortable room for them.

Died.

At her home in Ell township on Wednesday, Feb. 10th. 1897, of Asthma, Mrs. Anna Barbara Merrill, at the age of 51 years. Funeral at the house, at 11:00 o'clock on Friday.

Mrs. Merrill was born Dec. 26th. '46, in Union county Ohio, in June 1851 was married to Phillip Gates. This union was blessed with a family of 11 children, 9 of which are living. Mr. Gates died in 1893. and in Dec. 1894 Mrs. Gates married Horace Merrill.

The funeral services were held at her late residence in Ell township, conducted by Rev. Haefner and Rev. Anderson of Garner. The remains were followed by a large concourse of mourning relatives and friends to the Ell cemetery where the last sad rites were performed. Mrs. Merrill leaves a husband, 9 children and 8 brothers and sisters to mourn her loss, amoung whom are the Madams Grieve, Nissen, Kluckhohn. George Ell and Phillip Ell. Her husband was very sick with typhoid fever at the time of the funeral and is still very low. Mrs. Merrill has lived in this county for a good many years, and was beloved by all who knew her. The TIMES join the people in the vicinity in extending their sympathy at this time.

Wisdom is in the main a correct appreciation of the follies of other people.

Now that another United States Venezuelan Commission has been appointed the people will be less restless. It has been difficult trying to worry along between commissions.

Jake Schaefer, the former champion billiardist, fell off a Chicago street car and permanently injured the wrist of his cue arm, and is now suing for $100,000 damages. It's a stiff price, but it is also a stiff wrist.

Maguire Hines, a railroad builder, has just returned from a visit to England. He went there to raise $3,000,000 for a new line in the South. "The people I met believe that the late war over here was between North and South America," he said, recently, "and their notion about Venezuela is that the confederacy has started the war again." England is in need of free schools.

Whatever our senators and representatives do or fail to do about other matters, the present session of congress ought not to close without a suitable appropriation for the repair of the frigate Constitution,—"Old Ironsides." Immediate action is necessary for the preservation of a vessel whose decks have been "red with heroes' blood," and whose glorious record is an imperishable part of our national renown.

The special agent recently dispatched to Japan by the San Francisco Bureau of Foreign Commerce for the purpose of collecting data with reference to matters affecting the interests of American manufacturers has submitted a report, in which he states that during the past two months there has been almost a panic in Japanese financial circles, but the worst is now considered over. After the war with China speculation was rampant. Thousands of stock companies were floated, and their shares boomed. Everybody invested, but collapse soon came. The native banks have shut down indiscriminately of late and merchants allowed no accommodations. Heavy stocks of merchandise were thus thrown back upon the market, and warehouses are crowded.

A minister in the far west during the past few years has made a collection of curious and worthless money given at the services of his church. His exhibit includes Peruvian, Hawaiian and Swedish coin, also quarters and dimes, punched, battered, defaced, which he would not attempt to pass for their face value, and could not pass them if he made the attempt. He has given notice that the defaced coin will be sent to the mint and sold as bullion, or melted and made into some article of church ware. Such a matter-of-fact statement is worth more than a hundred jests to show that the collectionplate indicates the possible character of a contributor. If consciously used in this way the debased coin represents a deception. The giver knows that his tradesman would hesitate to accept the coin in trade. To drop it into the contribution-box is an easy disposition of the obnoxious piece of metal, and apparently shows generous obedience to a religious duty. It is a small, misleading act. Its pitiful meanness could not be tolerated by a thoroughly honest mind.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

AWFUL CRIME CHARGED.

Mr. and Mrs. Long Indicted for the Murder of Their Daughter.

HAMPTON, Feb. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Long, parents of the young lady who died a year ago last summer of strychnine poisoning under suspicious circumstances, have been indicted for murder in the first degree. Judge Hindman fixed the bail at $1,500 for Mrs. Long and $3,500 for Mr. Long. They asked for an immediate trial, but will have to wait till the next term of court. They will make an effort to get bonds and will probably be able to do so. The case is an important one and it has been a matter of conjecture whether the parents would ever be tried for the alleged crime. Miss Long died very suddenly and the parents are said to have hushed up the matter. Neighbors demanded on investigation. The body was exhumed and an inquest held. The stomach was sent to a Des Moines chemist who found strychnine in it, which he declared had been administered in a single strawberry. The coroner's jury's investigation lasted a week, when they returned a verdict of poison by strychnine, but whether administered by unknown parties or taken with suicidal intent they were unable to determine. It is thought it will be difficult to secure a conviction.

FEARED A GRAND JURY.

Charley Wins Commits Suicide While a Charge Was Pending.

GUTHRIE CENTER, Feb. 13.—A sad suicide occurred at Foster, eight miles northeast of Guthrie Center. Charley Wins, 20 years old, and single, while his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Wins, and family were eating breakfast, went into a bedroom, placed the muzzle of a shotgun under his chin, and with his foot discharged the gun, blowing his head to pieces. He fell back on the bed dead. Recently a young man named Comstock was being tried in a justice court for the crime of stealing a wolf scalp and collecting a bounty from the county for it. On the trial Comstock swore he shot and killed the wolf and Wins swore he came up when Comstock was skinning the wolf. The grand jury, now in session, was investigating a charge of perjury against both Comstock and Wins, and Wins was cited to appear before the grand jury.

SIOUX CITY SAVINGS BANK.

Failure to Bond the Cashier Makes Directors Liable.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 12.—Judge Gaynor in the district court authorized Receiver Goss of the Sioux City Savings Bank to proceed against the directors of the bank for damages for failing to require the cashier to be under bonds. After the failure it was discovered that Cashier Stone had not been under bonds for several months, and it is claimed that this failure of the directors to require him to be under bonds renders them liable for the amount of the loss to the bank by reason of his forgery of the cattle paper.

CONDITIONALLY PARDONED.

F. J. Peffers Given a Pardon Conditioned on Good Behavior.

DES MOINES, Feb. 14.—Governor Drake has conditionally pardoned F. J. Peffers, who was sent from Marshalltown in 1889 to serve a 15 year sentence for the murder of Jack Cather. The petition for his pardon was signed by Judge Weaver, who presided at the trial, and Attorney Miller, who prosecuted. The pardon is conditional on good behavior.

Treasurers Elect Officers.

DES MOINES, Feb. 14.—The annual convention of county treasurers of the state elected officers as follows: President, W. R. Warren, Wapello county; vice-president, A. R. Cherry, Johnson county; secretary, H. C. Murphy, Polk county; treasurer, Rolt Aye, Grundy county. The convention appointed a legislative committee consisting of Paul Lubbers, of Clinton county; M. W. Moir, of Hardin county, and W. R. Warren, of Wapello county.

Oskaloosa Failure.

OSKALOOSA, Feb. 13.—The McIntyre Bros., and Wilson Dry Goods company has assigned. Liabilities are $30,000; assets, $40,000. The failure was caused by the assignment of the McIntyre-Peck Dry Goods company, of Rock Island, Ill.

Courtney Indicted.

MT. PLEASANT, Feb. 12.—The grand jury returned five indictments for grand larceny against Arthur Courtney, the Marion township farmer, who, with Earhart, his hired hand, are implicated in the theft of a large amount of property in the neighborhood.

Centerville Saloons Closed.

CENTERVILLE, Feb. 13.—The Centerville saloons have been closed on injunction. Judge Sloan granted the decree on the ground that the signatures to the statements of consent are illegal.

SENSATION AT EDDYVILLE.

Sons of Prominent Families Accused of Criminal Assault.

OTTUMWA, Feb. 15.—Albert Epperson, aged 18 years, and Abe Lafferty, same age, have been arrested at Eddyville for an assault on the 16-year-old daughter of A. H. Brubaker, a farmer, who owns a thousand acres of land in Mahaska county. It is charged that the crime was committed at a party at Brubaker's. The young men at the party pursued the two accused boys, but they escaped in a sleigh. Epperson is a son of F M. Epperson, partner of Edwin Manning, the wealthiest man in Iowa, and Lafferty's father is A. M. Lafferty, another very prominet citizen of Eddyville.

MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE.

Verdict Returned in the Eckerlebe Trial at Clinton.

CLINTON, Feb. 11.—The trial of Chris. Eckerlebe for the murder of Mina Keil last July ended, and the case was given to the jury. The jury was out one hour and forty minutes, returning a verdict of murder in the first degree, and recommending punishment by death. The attorneys for the defense immediately filed a motion for a new trial.

Bank Failure at Leeds.

SIOUX CITY, Feb. 13.—W. L. Frost has been appointed receiver of the Commercial Savings Bank at Leeds. The application was made by the Corn Exchange National Bank, and the receiver took possession at once. The plaintiff claims to hold 120 shares of the capital stock of the bank, and also to be a joint owner of the Hinton Milling Company, valued at $10,000. It claims further to have about $750 of trust funds on deposit in the bank. It is stated that the bank has done little or no business since December 24, and that in order to preserve the assets it is best to have a receiver appointed. The liabilities of the bank are given at $11,500 and the assets at $37,956

Will Furnish Beet Seeds.

AMES, Feb. 14.—Prof. James Wilson makes the announcement that the Iowa experiment station, of Ames, will distribute beet seeds to the farmers of Iowa on condition that they grow it according to directions and report for analysis.

IOWA CONDENSED.

A man answering the description of Frank Novak, the Walford murderer, purchased a ticket at Iowa City for Council Bluffs the next day after the fire.

Gov. Drake has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and delivery to the proper authorities of Frank Novak, who is believed to have murdered Edward Murray at Walford.

At Sioux City recently the jury in the case of William Young, the negro who recently killed George Elliott in a quarrel at Coon's poker room, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, and recommended life imprisonment. Sentence will be passed February 16. Young will appeal.

The city of Cedar Rapids has recently settled its claim of $11,000 against ex-City Treasurer Stoddard for $6,000. with the understanding that no suits are to be brought against Stoddard, who claims that there was no real shortage in his accounts, but that the apparent shortage was a result of errors in book keeping.

An important find was accidentally made in Story county recently at the new coal shaft two miles south of McCallsburg. What was thought to be from two to three feet of slate above a two-foot vein of coal has proved to be cannel coal, something not found in any quantity in the state and but little this side of Pennsylvania.

In the breach of promise suit of Stephanic vs. Lefebure, on trial at Cedar Rapids, the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, giving her $5,000 damages, as claimed. Miss Stephanic was a domestic in the employ of the Lefebures. Young Lefebure fell in love with her and they were engaged. Lefebure's father objected and finally the young man broke off the engagement and married another young lady. The Lefebures are wealthy farmers living near Fairfax.

Des Moines dispatch: The mulct law in cities organized under special charters, has been decided by the supreme court to be a dead letter, Justice Granger dissenting and giving it as his opinion that the law was framed to include every city in the state and that those with special charters were no more exempt from it than those organized under a general charter. The cities that this decision will affect and which have special charters are Dubuque, Keokuk, Winterset, Cedar Rapids, Glenwood, Davenport, Farmington and Camanche, the latter in Clinton county. The city of Cedar Rapids will be more affected by the decision than any of the special chartered cities, for the reason that Davenport, Dubuque and Keokuk still observe that part of the law which requires the payment of the tax.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CRETAN SITUATION SERIOUS.

Greece's Insistence on Union May Mean European War.

ATHENS, Feb. 10.—The Official Gazette publishes a royal decree commissioning all available warships in Greece and ordering the immediate dispatch of additional ships to Crete.

ATHENS, Feb. 12.—The torpedo flotilla, commanded by Prince George of Greece, has gone to Crete. Great enthusiasm is being manifested on the part of the people. Prince George admits that his orders were to prevent by every means possible the landing of any Turkish troops on the island of Crete.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Pall Mall Gazette says there is reason to believe that the government of Great Britain regards the dispatch of the Greek flotilla to Crete as a very serious matter and as likely to involve the gravest consequences. It adds: "No intimation of the intentions of Greece was conveyed to any of the powers, and the preparations to carry them into effect were carefully kept secret. It may be confidently expected that the Marquis of Salisbury will adopt a very firm attitude, and that immediate and vigorous steps will be taken to neutralize the effect of Greece's action." A dispatch to the Times from Athens says that the central Cretan committee is preparing to support the Cretans with arms, ammunition and supplies on a great scale.

ATHENS, Feb. 13.—The government has formulated a notification to the powers setting forth that Greece cannot remain a mere spectator of the events which are taking place in Crete and that the ties of race and religion compel her to intervene in behalf of the oppressed and outraged Christians in that island.

ATHENS, Feb. 13.—The warlike excitement here increased with the departure of troops for the frontier and the equipping of additional war vessels for service in Cretan waters. Nobody seems to doubt that a clash of arms will occur between Greece and Turkey unless the powers intervene; but it is believed here that Greece will be given a free hand in Crete, and that if she succeeds in annexing that island, her right to do so will not be questioned by the rest of Europe.

ATHENS, Feb. 15.—Pressure has been brought to bear by the powers upon the sultan and King George to prevent an outbreak of hostility. As Crete has already declared independence of Turkey it is difficult to see how the sultan can again secure control of the island without the aid of the powers, inasmuch as the insurgents control the whole of the island except the large cities and the Greek squadron refuses to allow Turkey to land more troops. Turkey is hurrying more troops to the frontier and says she will attack Greece in Thessaly if the powers do not interfere.

BRITISH VICTORY.

Expedition Against the Emir of Nupe is Successful.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Sir George Goldie, commanding the Royal Niger Company's expedition against the emir of Nupe, cables from the palace of the emir at Bida under date of January 29, saying the palace is captured. The capture of the Bida probably completes the destruction of the Fulah power, and will most likely add to the British-African territory. The dispute between the emir and the Niger company is of long standing, growing out of the emir's practice of executing slaves by wholesale after raiding the territory under protection of the company, to obtain victims. He was frequently warned to stop the practice, but failing to do so the punitive expedition was sent against him, with the result above given. The emir was a most powerful vassal of the great Mohammedan empire of Sokoto.

Will Fight at Carson City.

CARSON, Nev., Feb. 12.—Dan Stuart has arrived and has announced that the big fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons will occur in Carson March 17. He gives as a reason for the selection of Carson in preference to Reno that the Carson people had worked hard for the passage of the bill, while the Reno citizens were opposed to it.

Work for Three Thousand.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—All the mills of the Illiinios Steel company at South Chicago, have started at full blast for the first time in many months. Nearly three thousand men returned to work. Wages all along the line were cut from 10 to 15 per cent.

Wright Renominated.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—The president has renominated Carroll D. Wright of Massachusetts commissioner of labor.

Fitzsimmons' Money Up.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Fitzsimmons' side bet of $7,500 is now in the hands of Stakeholder Smith,

GOMEZ SCORNS WEYLER.

HAVANA, Feb. 9.—General Weyler's attempt to arrange for a secret interview with Gomez in Santa Clara over the question of Cuban reforms has proved a complete fizzle. It is learned that Marcus Garcia resigned the commission delegated to him at the meeting in the palace last week because he learned that General Gomez had threatened to hang him as a traitor if he caught him. Garcia went to Sancti Spiritus but no farther. It is supposed he communicated with General Gomez by letter or special messenger, and considered discretion the better part of valor. General Gomez, sent word, it is said, that he would not confer with General Weyler upon any subject whatever, and refused to meet him under any circumstances.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 11.—An expedition landed in the southern part of Pinar del Rio province last week and brought on a fight between the Spanish coast guard and a Cuban escort under Capt. Petoris. The Spaniards lost eighteen men, the Cubans seven. Fifteen men of the Spanish patrol were killed in Havana outskirts on the southwest side. While they were passing a large stone building it was blown up and twenty men were buried under its ruins. It is suspected to be the beginning of the "reign of terror" promised by Lieut. Col. Hernandez when he made his last raid in Havana.

Alderman O'Malley Acquitted.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Alderman Thomas J. O'Malley, of the Twenty-third ward, and John Santry, who have been on trial for the murder of Gus Collander, an election judge, in 1894, were acquitted. The trial lasted a month and was bitterly contested. The jury was out several hours, and although a unit as to the innocence of O'Malley on the first ballot, some of the jurors were in favor of convicting Santry. They finally agreed to his acquittal, however. Gus Collander was a judge of election, who in a local election in 1894 was shot by one of a gang of toughs which raided the polling place over which he presided.

William E. Mason Faints.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Senator-elect Wm. E. Mason was attacked by a fainting spell at his home. At first it was believed to be apoplexy, but he soon recovered. Later, upon advice of doctors, he left for New Orleans to get rest.

Bradley Martin Ball.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Bradley Martin fancy dress ball which cost in the neighborhood of $300,000 and which marked an epoch in the social history of New York, took place at the Waldorf hotel and was a marked success.

Initiative and Referendum.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 14.—The senate, by a strict party vote of silver men and republicans, again passed the initiative and referendum resolution, submitting the question to a vote of the people.

Roth Must Hang.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 13.—The court of appeals overruled the petition for a rehearing in the case of Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Pearl Bryan.

BREVITIES.

Gen. Joseph Shelby died at his home near Kansas City on the 13th.

The steamer Three Friends has been seized at Jacksonville, Fla., and libelled. The libel charges piracy in that a Hotchkiss gun was mounted upon the bow of the steamer and was fired at a Spanish gun boat at the mouth of the San Juan river while endeavoring to land an expedition. Bonds were immediatly furnished and the boat was released upon the special provision that a deputy marshal should be placed on board, and have authority to take charge of the boat in case an attempt should be made at any time to violate the law.

London dispatch: In the house of commons a few days ago Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, speaking relative to the appropriation of £798,802 for the expenses of the English expedition up the Nile to Dongola, said that England would make further advances. In voluntarily retiring from Egypt, France had thrown the whole responsibility for the safety of Egypt upon Great Britain. Great Britain might fairly demand a free hand in the performance of her responsibilities. She believed she was right and would not be run out by any difficulties such as a refusal of money by the Egyptian mixed court of appeals. The words of the chancellor have created a sensation in Paris, the French newspapers declaring that the speech is a direct allenge to France, who must reply by action. A Russian newspaper asserts that "the speech has furnished the opportunity Russia and France have so long foreseen, when together they can ask for a definite period when England will leave Egypt. And," adds the writer, "you may rest assured Russia's pressure will be more than moral."

From him he learned of the thorough precautions taken to intercept them, and of the dogged persistence of M. Pierre's belief in their vicinity.

This man was outwardly among the most eager of M. Pierre's supporters, and was much in his confidence; and he assured Emile that it would be extremely hazardous to attempt escape for a month at least, although he was willing to do the best he could for them.

Emile heard his unfavorable account thoughtfully, and replied:

"I see plainly that I must mix among you here. I will remain secreted with you through the day, and make my way back to my hiding place at midnight. The next night I will manage to get out on the highway; and do you give out publicly that you have received word that the Gray Falcon is coming down from Paris to stir up the populace of Frejus. Come and meet me, if you can, and introduce me to this Pierre. Let me gain the confidence of the majority and I think I can manage the matter."

Getting back into the forest was not so easy a matter; the change of guards had given control to a more faithful and vigilant set of men.

Emile was challenged twice, and giving some hasty excuse, saying he was a trusty citizen of Frejus out to look at the chateau ruins, was gruffly ordered back to the town.

He turned back a little way, and laid himself down among the bushes, just in sight of the pacing figures.

What must he do? Daylight was at hand, and it was absolutely necessary he should prepare his young charges for his absence, and acquaint them with his future plans. Lying prone on his face he crawled along, the reconnoisance showing him there was one spot at a projecting knoll where but one sentinel was stationed, and he hardly in sight of the others, when he turned the rather sharp corner.

Emile's mind was made up at once. He found a heavy stick, and in the same serpent fashion crept cautiously along on the ground toward the spot.

Having obtained the desired position he remained perfectly quiet, allowing the unconscious guard to pass three times over his beat before he made any demonstration. On the fourth, as the man slowly moved around the point, he leaped to his feet, and in the twinkling of an eye tripped him up, and sent him sprawling some two or three yards away.

In the brief time required for the astonished man to gather himself up, Emile had darted into the wood. Away he sped, the swifter for the loud halloo of the sentinel.

He was familiar with every spot in the forest, and gained his object long before the aroused sentinels could follow him. He found his faithful friends anxiously awaiting his return.

Jules had recovered entirely, and he listened anxiously to the plans of Emile.

"It will do very well for me who shall have my old strength in a few days longer, but for your niece, for Mademoiselle Chlotilde, it would be more trying. But, why, indeed, should they bear any ill will to her?"

"Because she has lived in a noble family and was extremely attached to its members; because this wretch of an M. Pierre means to make her his wife, and she abhors the idea."

"Abhors, indeed!" ejaculated Jules, gazing after the slender figure which had passed into the further room, which she had taken for her own private retreat; so singularly-gifted and refined a creature to marry that odious miserseer! The very idea is distressing even to me. Ah, Monsieur Emile, if I and your niece are impartial types of your class, I cannot help feeling humiliated that we have ever presumed to call others noble in comparison."

"Chlotilde has had superior advantages," observed Emile, quietly; I doubt if the hapless Lady Felicie Languedoc herself was more accomplished and graceful."

"I am sure I have not a moment's question about it," replied Jules, hastily; "none of the noble ladies I have ever seen could equal Chlotilde for loveliness or grace."

"The care of this retreat will devolve upon you in my absence. It will be safe to go a few yards from the tree beyond it, but no farther than that. I must not have you even venture to go fishing. I will fill up the water cask before I leave. I am thankful for a few books I brought from the château with them and each other's society I trust you will not find your confinement underground too irksome."

"No, that is, I must speak for myself. It is a peaceful refuge from pain and violence. But for past sorrows and anxious fears of the future I could not ask a happier life. Chlotilde, too, seems weighed down by some grievous recollection. I do not like to question her."

"Do not, I beseech you. Allow them to die away, if possible. It is worse than idle to dwell upon the past, since nothing can remedy it; and it weakens your vigor and energy for coping with future perils."

"I have endeavored to follow your directions. What more did you hear from Paris?"

"Additional horrors—the people have gone mad. They must become gorged with blood ere the reaction comes. I foresee that. Nevertheless, I can see no other way than for us to get to Paris. It is the only place where this M. Pierre will not search for you and the girl he has declared shall marry him."

"But I shall be recognized by scores there," exclaimed Jules, with a shudder.

"I hope not. I shall find means to color that fair hair jetty black; you must wear it in another fashion. Garments, too, make a wonderful change; but of course you will keep as retired as possible."

Jules drew a long breath.

"It seems to me I would rather be here forever, but I trust implicitly in your sagacity; I yield unquestioning obedience."

"Your health would suffer by long residence in this unsunned cave. I am already anxious about Chlotilde. The two weeks have paled her cheek sadly. With extreme caution you might both go up to the surface every day. There are apertures in the trunk of the tree to take reconnoisance in every direction. Seeing the ground clear, you could venture out, though I warn you to be wary. If he be crafty, this M. Pierre will soon remove his watch from sight and set a secret trap. But I mean to get you both away speedily."

"You have talked with Jules long enough, my uncle; say something to Chlotilde now."

He drew his hand caressingly over the glossy hair.

"I have been telling him what good care he must take of my child when I am gone."

"Gone! oh, Emile!" exclaimed she, in consternation.

"For a little time, dear one, only to prepare for your escape."

The tears were slowly trickling down her cheeks, she could not speak a word of answer.

"Why, my little one, are you so stricken? Jules is left to take care of you."

"Jules is a very poor substitute for you, monsieur; no one is better aware of it than he himself, but he will do his best," observed the youth.

"Nay, nay," interposed the girl, eagerly. "I did not mean to wound your feelings, dear Jules; you are everything kind and good. As agreeable and pleasing a companion as I could ask, but then we have relied so thoroughly upon my uncle, it struck me with sudden dismay to think of losing him."

"For a little time, my child. It is because I fear for your health and am anxious to get you away, that I leave at all. You will not be weak and childish, I know, but will be calm and heroic, to help me all you can."

"I will try," replied she, firmly; but the sweet lips quivered sadly.

"And you will succeed. Jules must exert all his powers to divert your thoughts. You must read together, and tell fairy stories, and be good children till I return, like a good genii, to release you from your dungeon."

He smiled playfully, but there was a moisture in his eyes.

The three were silent a long time, and then Felicie broke it timidly:

"And when do you go, my uncle?"

"To-night at the darkest hour. I must fill your water cask from the spring before I leave."

They talked gravely over their plans and hopes until noonday; when Emile took his much-needed rest, and the youthful pair sat down rather disconsolately, it must be admitted, each with a book in hand.

Jules turned to the title page of the litle volume of poems he held. A name was traced there in delicate handwriting—Lady Felicie Languedoc.

"Ah," said he, "I should so much like to know just what she was, and how she looked, that poor Lady Felicie!"

His companion glanced over the volume to see what it was which fixed his thoughts, and smiled archly.

"Why are you curious? Did you know anything about her?" asked she.

"Why, yes. I knew that she was the sole heiress, the pride and hope of the chateau yonder, which lies in ruins. It was there, that horrible night, you know, that I was so wretchedly maltreated. But I did not see her, not even her corpse." He paused shuddering, and then added more calmly, "I should like to know just how she looked, just what was her character. The writing, you see, suggested the thought. I fancy I have a good idea, but I may be mistaken. If she resembled her father she was no beauty."

CHAPTER XVI.

FELICIE had averted her conscious face and was bending it down deeply into her book; she dare not pursue the subject, and presently he was lost in the contents of the volume.

Emile did not reappear until after dark, although in their subterranean dwelling night and day were alike, and the hours were most perceptibly marked by the shortening candles. Then he shouldered the one empty water cask, and clambered with it up the rude stairway.

He returned with it still unfilled, and tried to hide the cloud on his forehead.

"It's of no consequence. On second thought, there can be no danger of your needing more water. You will be as prudent as possible, and I mean to relieve you long before you broach the last cask."

Neither suspected that he had attempted to reach the spring, and narrowly escaped capture.

He went back to the upper room, and listened there anxiously.

"I do believe it is the evil one himself; how else could he vanish so mysteriously?" said one wondering voice.

"The peasants say it was haunted long ago," said another, in equal astonishment.

"Peste! don't you know that was our own doing, citizen Pierre managed it? This is beyond belief, only for Pierre's assurance that the royalists are hid up somewhere here. Fire at it next time, and see what that will do," replied a third.

It was a long time before they went away, and then Emile anxiously listened for the direction of their retreating steps.

"Who would have believed that obstinate Pierre would stick so closely to this idea? They will be sounding the tree next. I see plainly I must use my wits to get out. Ah, I have it! Where is my ghostly dress and light! I'll rig them on a pole with cross-arms and carry it in sight of these fellows and set it up. They'll rush forward, believing they have caught the man, and I can slip away unperceived. But I must go to the extreme end of the woods. It will not do to draw further attention to this spot."

And having matured his plan, he acted upon it promptly.

Carrying the effigy before him, he walked unmolested to the outer end of the wood. He heard the first shout of discovery and saw half a dozen forms come rushing toward him.

Setting the pole, which he had taken care to sharpen, firmly in the ground, he slipped behind a tree trunk, and dropping on his knees crawled noiselessly over the mossy earth to the other side.

As he expected, the rush for the supposed capture left the picket line vacated; he lost no moment in clearing it, and as soon as he dared, sprang to his feet, and ran swiftly.

Extreme care was needed for more than a mile, but when morning broke he was safely in the highway. Once there, he brushed from his dress all signs of his late proceedings, and boldly hailed a market wagon passing on to Frejus.

Before he reached the town he met his comrade, who looked immensely relieved at sight of him.

"Welcome to the south, most valiant Gray Falcon! Where did you dip your beak last in the accursed blood of the aristocrat and tyrant?" exclaimed the latter.

"I come from Paris, and am sent south to kindle the zeal of the people for equality and liberty. How goes the cause?" responded Emile, while the driver of the wagon eyed him with open-mouthed wonder and a little fear.

"We have some bold spirits. There is worthy citizen Pierre, you will find him eager for the work; and we expect the famous Gray Falcon of Paris will wake us all up."

They proceeded slowly on till they reached the town. There in the market square they saw M. Pierre conversing earnestly with a group of men.

Emile's companion shouted to them: "Come hither—come and welcome the Gray Falcon. He has arrived at last on a special mission to us!"

The crowd in a moment surrounded them.

ON IOWA RAIL RATES.

PASSENGER SERVICE AND RATES COMPARED.

Reply of the State Railroad Commission to Inquiries by Agriculturists Regarding Average Receipts and Expenses.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Correspondence Chicago Times-Herald.—W. W. Field of Odebolt, president of the State Agricultural society, anxious to enlighten its members on the merits of the railroad question, sought for information from the state board of railroad commissioners on the following points: What is the average rate of fare in Iowa? What does it cost the railroads to carry a passenger a mile? How are we (the agriculturists) to ascertain what rate would be fair on both sides? What is the opinion of the commissioners on the question? In reply an open letter has been written by W. W. Ainsworth, secretary of the commission, saying in part: "The questions suggested by you have recently been considered by the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners of Illinois in response to an inquiry made by the state grange of that state. Its conclusion was that it 'would be unwise, unwarranted and unjust to the railroad interests of the state to comply with this request.' The regular report says: Some of the great trunk lines in Illinois might be able to stand such a reduction, yet the smaller roads and those which do almost wholly a local business, and which are now and have been for the last two years struggling for existence, would be most seriously affected by it. Such action on our part would simply increase the heavy burdens under which they are struggling now.

Decrease in Passenger Business.

"It is a well-known fact to those who have taken the trouble to investigate the amount of passenger business done by the railroads in Illinois during the last two years that there has been a large decrease in the number of passengers carried. This is due, in our judgment, not to the amount charged for such service, but to the general depression in all lines of business, the low prices of farm products and the unsettled financial conditions which have had their effect on the passenger as well as the freight business. This question was before us when we revised the freight schedule in 1895 and the whole question was thoroughly considered. We did not think then, and neither do we feel now, that in justice to both the public and the railroads this reduction should be made at this time. If the country was prosperous our conclusions might be different. The statistics in our office show that for the last three years, 1894, 1895 and 1896, the average amount charged by the railroads per passenger per mile is a fraction above 2 cents, although the maximum allowed them was 3 cents. For the reasons above stated we do not feel that this reduction should be made by us at this time. We are also asked to recommend this reduction to the legislature. In view of our conclusion we do not feel that it would be consistent for us to do so.

Receipts and Cost Per Mile.

"From the statistics given in the report of this commission for 1895 it appears the average amount received by the railroads doing business in Iowa for carrying one passenger one mile during the year was 2.27 cents. The returns from which these results are obtained do not include any passengers carried free. The large number of passengers who have traveled upon reductions of rates as permitted by our statutes—ministers of the gospel, organizations of our military, excursions on holidays, special rates to meetings of many organizations, state and county fairs—are factors that reduce the average fare to the amount above stated. It is obvious, therefore, that the average must always be lower than the rate fixed by law. The character of the business renders it impossible to make any rate that will be absolutely uniform. The Iowa report for 1895 shows only ten roads which returned the average cost of carrying one passenger one mile. The average cost of these companies was 2.14 cents. This result is less reliable than if it were founded upon returns made by all the roads, which would probably increase it. In arriving at the cost of carrying one passenger one mile, as above given, nothing is charged on account of the expenses of the railroads for interest, rents, taxes and miscellaneous fixed charges, and, of course, nothing for dividends on stock. The passenger traffic should, of course, bear its proportion of these expenses, which constitute part of the cost of doing the business. From statistics compiled by the interstate commerce commission it appears that to charge the passenger business of the railroads with its proportionate share of the fixed charges, not including anything, however, on account of dividends and crediting it with mail and express earnings, would give us as the actual cost 2.57 cents.

Figures on Reduced Traffic.

"The statement of the Illinois commission that there has been a general reduction of passenger business is undoubtedly confirmed by the statistics. For the whole United States the number of passengers carried one mile for each mile of railroad in 1890 was 75,751; in 1895 it was 68,572. Though the number of passengers carried was less, the passenger car mileage was greater in 1895 than in 1890, which, of course, increased the cost per passenger. In 1890 the total number of miles run by passenger trains in the United States was 285,575,804; in 1895 it was 317,565,615. In 1895 the revenues from passenger service in the United States decreased $33,103,378 as compared with 1894, though the figures for 1895 include 2,055.29 miles of road more than in 1894. The foregoing statements, which are based upon the most accurate statistics obtainable, at this time indicate: 1. That at the present time the average fare charged in Iowa is less than the actual cost of transporting the passenger. 2. That within the last three or four years passenger earnings have decreased without a corresponding decrease in the cost of doing the business. Unless changes have been recently made that have not come to the notice of the commission the following are the rates prevailing in the countries named: England—First class, 4.2 cents; second, 3.2 cents; third, 2 cents. France—First class, 4 cents; second, 3 cents; third, 2 cents. Italy—First class, 3.6 cents; second, 2.6 cents; third, 1.8 cents. Holland—First class, 3.2 cents; second, 2.6 cents; third, 1.6 cents. Belgium—First class, 2.4 cents; second, 1.8 cents; third, 1.2 cents. Except in England no baggage is carried free.

Density of Population a Factor.

"The density of population also affects the volume of passenger traffic. Where the population is dense there will be more travel than in sparsely settled districts. In Iowa the population per square mile is about 38; in England, 541; Belgium, 511; Holland, 350; Italy, 268; France, 187; New York, 139; Ohio, 99; New England, 83; Illinois, 75; Missouri, 43; Wisconsin, 34; Nebraska, 15; Kansas, 19; South Dakota, 5. The population per mile of railroad in Iowa is about 247, in Illinois it is about 395; New York, 813; New England, 713; Missouri, 447; Wisconsin, 306; Nebraska, 209; Kansas, 108; South Dakota, 129. The average passenger earnings per mile, as shown by the last reports to this commission, of the roads operating in Iowa are $990. The Kansas report for 1895 shows $844, the Illinois report $1,582, and, as shown by the report of the interstate commerce commission, they are $4,422 in New England, $4,513 in New York and in Ohio $1,951."

Quicker in the Old Days.

The Chicago Shade was in a confidential mood and put his feet over the arms of his throne.

"I am a man with a history. When I was on earth I spent my life and my fortune fighting four divorce cases," he said tentatively to the bulky shade on his right.

"And yet they say the world progresses," mused the shade of Henry VIII., as he took a retrospective glance at the pages devoted to his term in the history books.—Pittsburg News.

PLANETARY GOSSIP.

WHAT THE STARS SAY OF THE EARTH'S INHABITANTS.

It Is a Good Idea to Consult the Astrologer When About to Enter Into Matrimony—Answers to Requests—Instructions for Applicants to Go By.

IF PEOPLE should consult an expert astrologer before falling in love, marriages would be more harmonious. The astrologer is often requested to compare the horoscopes of man and wife to find out the cause of the existing inharmony and assist in patching up their differences, etc. He often sees that Saturn in one is afflicting the Venus of the other, denoting: that love affairs do not invariably thrive well; yet improvement can be made from a better understanding of each, which can only be determined by the careful comparison of both horoscopes. It would be well to do this previous to marriage. Those wishing free character delineations from their zodiacal sign and ruling planet published under their initials, should send: Sex, date, month, year and place of birth, also the time a. m. or p. m. If you do not know the time of birth send two two-cent stamps for further instructions. If you prefer the delineation sent by mail send twelve two-cent stamps to cover expenses. Address Prof. G. W. Cunningham, Dept. 4, 194 S. Clinton St., Chicago.

I. S.; Leroy, Ill.

According to data furnished the zodical sign Virgo, which Mercury rules was rising at your birth, therefore Mercury is your ruling planet or significator. You are medium height or above; with slender figure: dark complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes have a peculiar brightness and quick restless movement. You are endowed by nature with a kind and obliging disposition; you are kind to animals and humane in all things. You are very industrious and energetic; you make up your mind quick and every move you make is quick. You are too impulsive and if you will be a little more conservative you will find it to your advantage. You are rather too modest and do not push yourself forward as you should, consequently you are not appreciated to the extent your ability should command. If you had been born twelve minutes earlier it would have changed these indications very materially, for the sign Leo would have been more or less considered.

Miss Mae, Glenville, Iowa.

According to data furnished the zodiacal sign Aquarius, which Uranus rules, was rising at your birth; therefore Uranus is your ruling planet or significator. The sign Pisces, which Jupiter rules, was intercepted on the ascendant. You are naturally the possessor of two kinds of temperaments. At times you are very cheerful, happy, jolly and jovial; then again you will be subject to spells of the blues and will brood over an injury that is either real or imaginary. You are kind to animals, and especially fond of a fine horse; you are quite a leader in anything you may become interested in, yet it will be in a very modest way and without boasting. You are fond of water and enjoy a good glass of it at any time in preference to almost any other drink. You are very fond of the mystical and take delight in unraveling a mystery. Marriage is only average fortunate for you, however you will have more than average wealth and will always be provided for.

Mrs. H. B., Holton, Kan.

According to data furnished, the zodiacal sign Gemini, which Mercury rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Mercury is your ruling planet or significator. You are medium height or above; medium to dark complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes have a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight. You are quick in all your actions and oftentimes change your mind too quick for your own best interests, and it would be better for you to deliberate more on important business matters. You are very fond of books and everything relating to literary attainments, and will always admire a person that has a fine mind. You do not think that wealth is the only thing to live for and will spend a fair portion of your money for books and papers. You will make more money through a salaried position than in any other way. You are somewhat lacking in confidence in your ability and should cultivate self-esteem.

Note.—Those who have sent in their stamps (26 cents) for readings by mail, will usually be promptly answered. In cases where there is an apparent delay the astrologer should be notified at once and the mistake will be rectified.

Storm Lake Feb. 15—Fire Saturday night destroyed the fine residence of A. M. Hutchinson of this city, with all the furniture and contents. All the family had retired for the night but Mr. Hutchinson. He went down in the basement to fix the furnace for the night about 11 p. m. While breaking some coal a piece flew against a lamp knocking it off on a lot kindling wood and breaking it. The wood caught fire and he could not extinguish the blaze, which was between him and the door. He was nearly overcome by the smoke before he finally succeeded in escaping from a window, when he broke in the kitchen door, aroused the family and got them out in only their night clothes. The residence cost from $8,000 to $10,000 and had all the modern improvements. The house was nicely furnished, including a very valuable piano. There was $4,000 insurance upon the house and $1,000 upon the furniture.

When Hefflin opened the door he found two masked men with revolvers leveled at his head. The robbers tied the hands and feet of both Hefflin and his wife, took the old couple to the cellar and left them there The robbers then ransacked the house, securing $160, a fine gold watch, a good revolver, jewelry and other valuables. Before daylight their victims succeeded in releasing themselves and gave the alarm.

WALLACES' FARMER.

A correspondent writes us asking how long a time wheat or oats will remain good for seed if kept in a fair granary. We do not know. We see no reason why the germinating power should decrease to any considerable extent even if kept for a number of years, provided they are not kept in too large quantities and are kept perfectly dry. Heating will of course, weaken the germinating power. The only right course is to take no risks in the matter, but having stirred the mass thoroughly and secured a fair sample of the seed, test a hundred grains under as nearly like soil conditions as possible and then count those that actually germinated.

We are having quite a number of letters from farmers in different parts of the state stating that very little of the corn of 1896 will grow. We do not think any of it will grow certainly unless it was carfully selected and dried before the cold spell in November. Farmers write us that they are making arrangements to get old corn to plant. This will do better, but we would test it beforehand so as to have a dead sure thing. No man can afford to plant any corn, the germinating power of which he is in doubht.

Some practical communications on the growing of buckwheat and barley would be timely just now. Let those who have been successful tell the rest of us about it.

BETTY WASHINGTON.

THE ONLY SISTER OF THE GREAT COMMANDER.

Beautiful Interior Decorations in Her Home at Fredericksburg. Done in Raised Stucco by an English Prisoner —Locks of Vast Proportions.

N the outskirts of the little town of Fredericksburg, Va., stands a house of peculiar interest to all Americans. It is Kenmore, the home of George Washington's only sister, Betty, which was built by her husband, Colonel Fielding Lewis, to gratify the ambition she often expressed of "being mistress of a fine house." Few, if any strangers, visit Fredericksburg without seeing this historic old mansion, which is considered the "show" place of the town.

The interior of Kenmore is severely simple, but very imposing, and its high sloping roof, tiny paned windows and quaint doorways, with huge brass knockers, carry one back to a time now nearly a century and a half past. The doors are high and narrow, of elaborately carved oak. The first thing that strikes the eye on entering the small, square hall, is a high clock of the kind popularly known as "Grandfather's Clock," which was once the property of Mary Washington.

Interior of Kenmore.

Few houses have such an extremely handsome interior as Kenmore. The ceilings and mantels alone are worth a visit to see, being the most beautiful of their kind in the state. The ceilings are stuccoed with raised plaster in elaborate designs of wreaths and garlands of flowers, sheaves of wheat, etc., and over the mantels are large ornate portrayals of the fables of Aesop, done in the same beautiful work. The one over the drawing room mantel is said to have been designed by George Washington for his sister. We are told by an old chronicler that this ornamentation of ceiling and mantel was the chief thing that pleased Mistress Betty Lewis in all her fine house. It was the work of an English soldier, who was captured during the revolution and sent for safe keeping to the home of Colonel Lewis, where he thus employed his time more profitably than most of the other English soldiers then in America. The drawing room, which is lofty and of unusual size, presents a faithful picture of the apartment in which the luxurious Virginian of that day liked to gather his family or entertain his friends. The high walls are paneled to the top, the deep windows furnish seats almost as large, though hardly so comfortable as armchairs, and on the doors are immense brass locks, containing keys of ponderous size. It would almost seem from these cumbersome locks which are found on so many old homes, that our forefathers were wont to have a sense of security in proportion to the size of the locks on their doors. If this be so, we cannot help thinking how very free from fear must the good folk of Kenmore have been. The drawing-room opens at one end on a massive stone porch and on the other into a smaller, but remarkably beautiful parlor, where we find again the same elaborate work on ceilings, mantels and walls. Crossing the halls, we come to the dining-room, the brightest room in the house, and here George Washington often sat, drinking a cup of tea with his sister, or attending as an honorary guest one of her stately midday dinners. During the visit of Lafayette to Fredericksburg to meet Mrs. Washington, his friend's mother, he too, dined in this room, and it is said the gallant Frenchman expressed himself as being more than charmed, with not only his fair hostess, but her handsome home.

Where Mary Washington Died.

On the upper floor of the house are the bed-rooms, which are unusually large and bright, but the chief interest pertains to the one on the left hand of the corridor. Here we are told is the room in which Mary Washington breathed her last. This fact is not generally known, as it is usually supposed that she died in her own more humble home not far away. When she had been ill for some time with an incurable malady, Mrs. Lewis persuaded her to be moved to Kenmore, and it was here that she spent the last few weeks of her life. Not far from the house and within sight of the windows of this room arises the tall granite shaft which was erected to the memory of Mary Washington by the women of America. This is the only public monument to a woman in the United States. It is a handsome shaft, fifty feet high, on the face of which is inscribed in raised letters, "Mary, the Mother of Washington." On the reverse side is cut in the stone, "Erected by her Countrywomen." An amusing incident happened in connection with the latter inscription. Among the crowds of people who attended the unveiling of the monument were many whose lives were passed on farms in remote parts of the country. One of them, an old woman, after giving a long, appreciative look to the monument, and carefully spelling over the inscription, fairly beamed with delight. "Thank goodness!" she said, "here is one thing them everlasting city women ain't had a hand in. Shows what country folks can do when they have a mind to!"

Lavish Hospitality at Kenmore.

Kenmore was always the scene of lavish hospitality, and within its walls were entertained many of the men who assisted in making our country's history. In the spacious drawing-room, in days gone by, stately dames have courtsied low to their partners in the time-honored minuet, and coquettish damsels, in dainty short-waisted gowns, tripped gayly through the Virginia reel. These were the women who later became the wives and mothers of the heroes of the revolution. Most of the men of note of the time just previous to the revolution, were received as guests at Kenmore, and during the war which ensued the house became known far and near as the abode of patriotism. Colonel Lewis, who was a man of prominence, and proprietor of nearly half the town of Fredericksburg, was an ardent patriot, and though ill with consumption (of which he finally died before the close of the war), managed to render much service to his country. When he became too feeble to go on horseback, he had himself carried in his chariot to the neighboring Court House, where he uttered patriotic words which, by reason of his prominence and popularity, had much effect on the young men of the surrounding country, and many were inspired by him to become soldiers. Portraits are still preserved of himself and his wife.

MRS. FIELDING LEWIS.

It seems somewhat strange that while more, probably, has been published of George Washington's mother and wife than of any other American woman, so little should have been written of his only sister. Mrs. Lewis bore a likeness to her brother so great that it was startling, and when, as was sometimes done in joke, a military hat was placed upon her head and a cape thrown over her shoulders, it was almost impossible to distinguish between them. George Washington Parke Custis, in his "Memoirs of Washington," says that on these occasions so strong was the resemblance that "Battalions would have presented arms and senates risen to do homage to the chief." In character and disposition, also, there was the same remarkable likeness between the brother and sister.

The Little Maid's Reply.

(A True Incident.)

The little maiden opened wide the door
To let the honored Washington depart;
The great-souled General, her mother's friend—
The first in war, in peace, in every heart.

"A better office to you, wear," said he,
And placed his hand benignly on her head.
With curtesy quaint and reverent, smiling glance—
"Yes, sir; to let you in," she archly said.
—Charles Lee in St. Nicholas.

Light requires eight minutes and eighteen seconds to pass from the sun to the earth when at its mean distance; therefore, when we look at the sun we see him, not where he actually is, but where he was about eighteen minutes and eighteen seconds ago; his true place is then always in advance of his apparent place.

AN INNOVATION.

A Church Fair in Oklahoma—Everything "Perfectly Square."

"Brethren and sisters," said the Rev. Jack Jonks, the well-known Oklahoma divine, relates the New York World, "I am requested to announce that the ladies of the church will give a fair and festival at Tilligan's hall next Thursday evening, to which everybody is invited. I will further say that everything will be square and aboveboard on that occasion. I have been moved to insist upon this innovation because of the numerous kicks which have been registered since the last event of this character. Certain of the brethren, especially those who have but recently become members of the church and have not yet forgotten their worldly wisdom, have been complaining that there was no reciprocity in the various catch-penny devices and games of chance at the last festival, and they are emphatic in their proclamation that, while they do not object to running up against any legitimate hazard for the good of the cause, they decline to participate in any more lead-pipe cinches. I will therefore add that at the coming festival the grab-bag, fish-pond, weighing-machine and kindred devices for replenishing the treasury will be under the direct supervision of Curly Conroy, the gentlemanly and accomplished dealer of faro at the Blue Ruin fortune parlors. In kindly agreeing to superintend these devices, Mr. Conroy pledges his professional honor that every visitor who puts down his scads will at least have some show for his money, and that his part of the evening's entertainment will be conducted in the same unprejudiced and impartial way that characterizes his work at the Blue Ruin. The usual collection will now be taken."

THE NEW THAMES TUNNEL.

English people are congratulating themselves over the approaching completion of the new tunnel under the Thames at Blackwall, and crowing over the fact that "the biggest city in the world will hold proud possession of the biggest tunnel."

The largest tunnel on this side of the Atlantic is the one under the St. Clair river, which is twenty-one feet in diameter. That building under the Hudson has an external diameter of nineteen feet, while the Blackwall tunnel is not less than twenty-seven feet across.

The length of the new tunnel is 6,200 feet, though the breadth of the river at Blackwall is only 1,212 feet, an apparent extravagance accounted for by the fact that in order to get beneath the bed of the river the engineers had to go down a depth of eighty feet below the Thames high water. That the approaches might not be too steep, therefore, the tunnel had to be made about five times the actual breadth of the river crossed.

Our American tunnels have been bored through clay, but the Blackwall tunnel had to be bored through gravel, an undertaking infinitely more difficult—so difficult, indeed, that many of the most experienced engineers, when consulted, doubted whether the enterprise could be carried through all right.

The undertaking was, however, an imperative necessity. Nearly 2,000,000 Londoners live east of London bridge, and until two years ago, when the Tower bridge was opened, they had only three ways of crossing the river—by the foot-passenger subway at the Tower, by the Wapping tunnel and by the Woolwich free ferry. There was not a single bridge east of London bridge.

The Blackwall tunnel was begun in April, 1892. Extraordinary precautions were taken on behalf of the workmen engaged. As a sample, to avoid the danger of chill in passing out of compressed air into ordinary atmosphere, a covered passage to the bank was built for the men and hot baths and dry clothes awaited them at the close of each day's work. It is hoped that the queen will open the tunnel in person, by way of celebrating the 60th year of her reign.

Statistics of the Franco-German War.

According to recent French statistics, France lost 136,000 men by death through wounds, sickness, or accidents in her war with Germany, while 139,421 men were disabled on the field of battle. Germany's losses were 79,155 dead and 18,543 wounded. The monetary loss is more evenly divided that for France being 12,666,487,522 francs, while for Germany it was 8,000,000,000 francs.

As to the Police.

Artless One—Isn't it strange that they should choose for members of the police force men who are so heavy that they are unable to run with any approach of speed? Sophisticated One—Not at all; if they were sprinters they would be able to get away from a disturbance much quicker than they now can.—Boston Transcript.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 8.—The bill in relation to the system of common schools was under consideration almost all of the time of the session, and had not been concluded when adjournment was taken. A new section was incorporated providing for the establishment of kindergartens.

HOUSE.

Funk offered a resolution providing for a thorough investigation of the cost of the last state census, the committee to have power to take testimony under oath. Lambert offered a resolution for an investigation of the cost of state printing during the past eighteen months. Both of these resolutions were adopted. Bills in relation to internal improvement and livery stable keepers, warehouse men, etc., passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 9.—Carney presented a resolution looking to the careful investigation of the finances of the state institutions. Senate adopted a resolution providing that each bill be given a full reading in each house before adoption. The militia bill passed, leaving the appropriation for the guard at its present figure, and the title relating to public schools and text books was completed. The statutes relating to the construction and operation of railways were considered and only partially completed at the time of adjournment.

HOUSE.

Senate bill relating to county superintendents, being identical with the bill defeated Saturday, came up and a motion to amend by reducing the pay from $4 to $3 per day was defeated. The bill then passed. Majority and minority reports on reading of bills were presented. Speaker named Funk, Louder, Davis, Baker and Volker as members of the committee to investigate the census, and Lambert, Temple and Brant as members of the committee to investigate state printing.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb, 10.—Carney called up his resolution for the appointment of a joint committee to investigate the state institutions to find out if any funds have been illegally retained as fees or other compensation by trustees or officers. It was finally referred to a committee of five, of which Carney is to be chairman. The house bill in relation to county superintendents was referred to the committee on schools, being slightly amended. Committee on educational institutions reported in favor of house bill on state normal schools.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 11.—Hotchkiss' concurrent resolution asking congress to protest against the removal of the pension office from Iowa passed. Special committee to which was referred Carney's resolution providing for an investigation of state institutions reported it back and it was laid over under the rules. The election law was further considered, but was not finished. House bill to amend mulct law so as to include cities working under special charters was received. Bonson opposed consideration, saying it was against the rules, which provided for no new legislation. A motion to suspend rules resulted 29 to 12 and Bonson made point of order that two-thirds vote of all members was necessary. Adjourned.

HOUSE.

Brant introduced a bill looking to a repair of the hole knocked in the mulct law by the supreme court in so far as it pertains to cities acting under special charter and the bill passed. Bill relating to corporations was taken up and finally passed. The law is changed to make private property of members of corporations liable for all debts in excess of two-thirds of the capital stock. Workingmen's co-operative associations, farmer's mutual insurance companies and farmer's co-operative creamery associations were exempted from the provisions of the act. Senate resolution against the removal of the pension office from Des Moines was concurred in.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 12.—Carney's resolution for a joint committee to investigate state institutions was adopted. Chairman Parrott ruled against Bonson's point of order in amendment to mulct law, holding that two-thirds of members present was sufficient to suspend rules. The bill was referred to committee on suppression of intemperance. Election laws was taken up and an amendment preventing names of candidates from appearing more than once on ballot was adopted. An amendment was also adopted doing away with the publication of the sample ballot in newspapers. A motion to reconsider was filed.

HOUSE.

House resumed consideration of the evidence bill. An amendment was adopted in the shape of a change in the section relating to the testimony of witnesses in gambling, liquor, etc., cases to prevent witnesses from escaping by saying that they cannot testify without criminating themselves. The testimony given, however, cannot be used in convicting the witnesses. An amendment excluding confidential clerks from giving information acquired in their clerical capacity was adopted. The bill then passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 13.—Committee on suppression of intemperance reported favorably on the bill amending the mulct law. Consideration of election laws was resumed. A motion was filed to reconsider vote by which law was amended so that in cases when women vote no registration shall be required of them. Bonds of secretary of state were raised from $5,000 to $10,000 and a bond required of the superintendent of public instruction.

HOUSE.

Bills in relation to boards of health, procedure in particular cases and the school fund were passed as fast as the same could be read by the clerk. No argument arose, as no material departures were made from the old law. The pharmacy bill was taken up. It was amended so as to require the payment of the pharmacy tax by itinerant venders of medicines, and to require signatures of purchasers of poisons.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The bill rearranging judicial districts in Texas was passed over the president's veto, 57 to 1. The senate was in executive session from 1 to 5:25 p. m.

HOUSE.

The house devoted the whole day to District of Columbia business, and eight bills of varied local importance were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Routine business was soon cleared away and the senate went into executive session to consider the arbitration treaty with Great Rritain. Morgan offered an amendment to abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

HOUSE.

The house agreed to the final conference report on the immigration bill by an overwhelming majority (217 to 32), and passed two more pension bills over the president's veto. The modifications of the immigration bill contained in the conference report by which an intending immigrant was required to be able to read and write "the English or another language," and which permitted the illiterate wife and minor children to accompany an elligible immigrant, removed the main opposition to the bill.

SENATE.

Washington Feb. 10.—Morgan, in charge of the Nicaragua canal bill, announced his abandonment of the measure for the present session, and bankruptcy bill was made unfinished business. Agricultural appropriation bill was passed. Bill giving each state absolute control of liquor traffic was urged by Tillman, but it went over.

HOUSE.

Nothing of importance was accomplished in the house.

JOINT SESSION.

The senate and house met in joint session in the hall of the house to canvass the electoral vote. The count resulted as follows: McKinley 271, Bryan 176, Hobart 271, Sewall 149, Watson 27.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The senate passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, carrying $1,745,303. In executive session consideration of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty was resumed. The entire time was consumed by Senators Turpie and Morgan, the former in advocacy of, and the opposition to ratification.

HOUSE.

The house passed the fortifications bill, with but a single amendment, and made some headway with the postoffice appropriation bill. But the major portion of the day was consumed in a political debate on the financial question.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 12.—A resolution was adopted requesting Secretary Olney to use every effort toward bettering the condition of Sylvester Scovel, the newspaper correspondent imprisoned in Cuba, and Morgan offered a resolution for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The remainder of the day was spent in executive session in consideration of the arbitration treaty.

HOUSE.

The house to-day passed the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying $95,435,714, and made good progress in the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The secretary of the navy was authorized to send a naval vessel or engage another craft to carry supplies to the famine sufferers in India. In executive session the arbitration treaty was taken up and discussed at length.

HOUSE.

The sundry civil appropriation bill was before the house and the democrats took advantage of the occasion to criticise the vast appropriations made by this congress, estimated at $1,045,000,000. Dearmond concluded the day with a plea for Cuba.

FAVORABLE FEATURES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Bradstreet says: The more favorable features of the business week include sales of 300,000 tons of steel rails on the collapse of the pool, which promises work for the mills for months to come; the advance in the price of print cloth, following the sale of 750,000 pieces from accumulated stocks, and the starting up of a number of important metal and industrial establishments throughout the east and middle states. The recent reduction in the price of steel billets of five dollars a ton, while rails were reduced only $3, foreshadowed another cut in rail prices or the breaking up of the pool. The latter finds prices from $8 to $9 lower than last week. One effect will be to stimulate export of rails, demand for domestic bessemer pig iron and for ore, and consumption of iron and steel generally.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Feb. 12.—F. L. Fairbank and T. N. Cantrel, of Des Moines, have been allowed a patent for a blotter bath and absorbent composition therefor, described in one of their claims as follows: A blotter bath comprising a pan having a transverse partition near one end, an absorbent composition having a flat top surface placed in the pan, a metal cover for the pan having a heavy absorbent filling that has a smooth surface and is adapted to overlay the absorbent in the pan and the cover and absorbent therein adapted to stand on end in the vacant water tight compartment in the end of the pan, and for the purposes stated. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

In the stomach of a cow recently slaughtered by George Daun, a butcher of Portsmouth, Ohio,, were found six pounds of iron nails, hinges, bolts, etc. The neighbors declare that the cow had discovered that iron was good for the blood.

Thomas Hansard and Lewis Lynn of Lincoln county, Ky., were returning home from church, when they began to quarrel about a hog belonging to Hancard which had trespassed upon Lynn's property. Some rude words were exchanged, and then Lynn shot his neighbor through the heart.

A chestnut was given to a Newark grocer, who was advised to carry it in his pocket, as a protection against rheumatism. The grocer had never had the disease, but after the chestnut had been in his pocket two weeks, the malady attacked his ankle, and he was compelled to call in a doctor.

James Welton, of Double Springs, Ala., was assisting to lower the coffin of his friend, Junius Roberts, into the grave, when the strap broke. The lower part of the coffin dropped, and the upper part sprang upward striking Welton on the head, causing a wound from which he died in two hours.

MISSIONS.

Reports from various cities indicate that the charitable work of the order of Deaconesses is reaping splendid results for the Master.

It is estimated that Union Congregational church, Boston, has given $200,000 to foreign missions and $300,000 to home missions and other charities during the seventy-four years of its existence.

Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America, has just completed a week of excellent work among the churches of Chicago in the interest of that class of mission work which she so ably represents.

A novel series of religious services for employes of the Union Traction company was inaugurated by the Sunday Breakfast association at the depot, Fifteenth and Cumberland streets, Philadelphia. President Bean conducted the exercises and an address was made by Rev. Leonard Weaver.

The Chicago Training School for Missions, located at 4949 Indiana avenue, has received the unconditional gift of deeds to property in that city valued at $8,000 to $10,000. The attention of the public is being more and more drawn to this institution, which is putting hundreds of workers into the mission fields of this and other countries. An endowment fund of $100,000 is now greatly needed.

GIRLS IN STORES,

offices, or factories, are peculiarly liable to female diseases, especially those who are constantly on their feet. Often they are unable to perform their duties, their suffering is so intense.

When the first symptoms present themselves, such as backache, pains in groins, headache, dizziness, faintness, swelled feet, blues, etc., they should at once write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., stating symptoms; she will tell them exactly what to do, and in the meantime they will find prompt relief in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which can be obtained from any druggist.

"MY DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so grateful to you for what your Compound has done for me. For four years I suffered such pains from ovarian trouble, which caused dreadful weakness of the limbs, tenderness and burning pain in the groins, pain when standing or walking, and increased pain during menstruation, headache and leucorrhœa. I weighed only 92 pounds, and was advised to use your Vegetable Compound, which I did. I felt the benefit before I had taken all of one bottle. I continued using it, and it has entirely cured me. I have not been troubled with leucorrhœa for months, and now I weigh 115 pounds."—LILLIE HARTSON, Flushing, Genesee Co., Michigan. Box 69.

It does not cause sickness like ordinary cough medicines but is pleasant to take and children like it so well as to cry for it frequently.

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm.

The following is an extract from a letter just received from a prominent Iowa clergyman: "Many winters have I coughed all winter long. Twice have I been compelled to rest from my ministerial duties for a period of several years. When I took cold in the winter the coughing would be intense. Last fall I took cold about the 15th of October and was sick with it for about a week and began what I supposed was a winter of coughing. My wife called my attention to Dr. Kay's Lung Balm and after much persuasion on her part, and a free expression (of a not flattering character) about patent medicines, on my part, I concluded to try the Lung Balm. I felt at once that it touched a place in my malady that nothing else had ever done. I began to improve. I used about 5 boxes and can now preach without coughing. I keep it by me and if I take cold I use it. If I have a bronchial irritation after preaching I take Dr. Kay's Lung Balm. I can cheerfully say that the Lung Balm has been a great help to me. It has no bad effect upon the stomach. Respectfully yours, J. D. DE TAR, Pastor M. E. Church Spring Hill, Iowa, Des Moines Conference. Send for pamphlet and circulars. Also "Womanhood," a special booklet for ladies, free. Address, Western Office, Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., Omaha, Neb.

SOMETHING TO KNOW.

It must be worth something to know that the very best medicine for the restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegitable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centers in the stomache, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters Improves the appetite, aids digestion, ane is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Sold for 50c or $1.00 per bottle at J. L. Harr's.

I have given Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a fair test and consider it one of the very best remedies for croup that I have ever found. One dose has always been sufficient, although I use it freely. Natures that can brook defeat better than delay generally suffer defeat.

Men and sheep are generally unsatisfied unless they follow the prevailing fashion.

People who become popular through extravagance lose it as soon as they get sense.

The nigger in the executive council wood pile at Boston positively refuses to be cut down.

The world is full of people who are of importance only when they are keeping somebody waiting.

People who have to kill time find that it has more lives than a cat is supposed to possess.

The ignorant pauper labor of Europe seems to be in a fair way to devote itself to home industries.

There is nothing novel about the scheme for "bicycling in the air," except the ability to stay there.

It is a wise plan to wait until somebody else recalls the fact that you made a prediction that came out right.

One reason why the world gains knowledge so slowly, is that every child must find out for itself that fire is hot.

Being out of debt sometimes indicates that a man is prudent, but occasionally it merely shows that his acquaintances are wise.

In New York the courts have decided that monuments and tombstones in place are not subject to liens. How then are the marble workers to get their pay? But insurance money is exempt from attachment since it is a fund set apart for the widow and orphan. In a like spirit, the graves of the family are protected from desecration.

William H. Beaumont of Brooklyn sued Nicholas H. Snyder for $30,000 for alienating the affections of his wife. After hearing a mass of testimony rather discreditable to all parties but Snyder, a verdict was given for the defense and the court not only directed the plaintiff to pay the costs of the suit, but also imposed a fine of $100 for his impudence in bringing it.

Musgrove Allen, a farmer of Bass River, N. J., said a "cuss" word one day in Trenton, and was arrested and fined $5. Mr. Allen has engaged the best lawyer in the state to take the case to the Supreme court, and says he will spend a whole lot of cash to show Squire Gale that the word is not profanity. The people of Bass River are said to be with Mr. Allen to a man.

One of the observed of all observers at a recent tea given by Mrs. Cleveland to a number of ladies, gentlemen being barred, was Mrs. Pak Ye, wife of the minister from Corea. She was clad in a quaint gown of dark blue brocade and wore a curious head dress which sparkled with jewels. Mrs. Pak didn't know a word of English and could only look on, but seemed to enjoy the occasion as much as her more loquacious sisters.

Gov. Lee of South Dakota doesn't believe in taking the word of banks, b'gosh! They told him they had several hundred thousand dollars of the state's money, but he wanted to see it, and so a militia company guarded the train which brought the actual cash to the capital, where the governor counted it, bit the pieces to see if they were genuine, rang them upon the tables, and then sent it all back again. Gov. Lee isn't taking any chances—not if he knows.

Dr. Richard S. Storrs, the president of the American Historical society, chose for the subject of a recent address, "The Contributions Made by Plain, Uncelebrated Men to the Development of the United States." The names he mentioned were Eleazar Wheelock, Manasseh Cutler and Marcus Whitman. The first was a poor New England country minister, but his efforts founded Dartmouth college, where Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate, Salmon P. Chase and George Ticknor were educated. Manasseh Cutler was also a country minister, but to him was due the fact that slavery never set foot upon the soil of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. And Marcus Whitman was an humble missionary who gave his life for the Indians, and to them—for they killed him; but because of Marcus Whitman, Oregon belongs to the United States and not to Great Britain. These were all "plain, uncelebrated men," but they saw things worth doing, and did them manfully.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HAMBURG IS STRICKEN.

An Immense Department Store and a Hotel Destroyed.

HAMBURG, Feb. 22.—Fierce flames which raged here threatened the entire business portion of town. The flames were finally gotten under control, but not until damage exceeding $75,000 had been done. The entire Goldberg block, consisting of a big department store, three big rooms on one floor, with the Julian hotel to the rear, and upstairs and everything in the hotel went up in smoke. The guests got out safely with everything that belonged to them, except Charles Goulding, who was in Shenandoah and who lost about $500 worth of clothes and valuables. Goldberg's department store and the Julian hotel are fully insured. Mrs. Goldberg's millinery store and contents, worth about $3,000, was burned. No insurance. The fire started in the basement of the Goldberg department store. It is thought to be incendiary. All the glass fronts across the street are a total loss.

FORGED A CHECK FOR $400.

J. Newcomer's Name Affixed to the Paper and the Criminal Escapes.

GRINNELL, Feb. 20.—During the absence of the cashier of a Grinnell bank, an ordinary farmer looking man presented a check for an amount between $300 and $400 bearing the signature of J. Newcomer, a well-to-do farmer near Grinnell. The check was written on one of the ordinary printed checks and made payable to J. Paul, or bearer. Mr. Paul, in whose favor the check was drawn, is a near neighbor of Mr. Newcomer, and the signature has a very close resemblance to that of Mr. Newcomer. The check was paid without any hesitation. Later it was discovered that the check was a forgery. The swindler has disappeared.

ATTEMPTED MURDER.

Mad Man at Fort Madison Shoots to Kill.

FORT MADISON, Feb. 21.—James Scott, who has more than once figured in the police courts, is in jail charged with the attempted murder of Frank Milmeier, a farmer living near town. Milmeier and Scott were not on good terms. They met and words passed. Scott went home, got his shotgun and started out in search of Milmeier. He ran across him near Atlee's lumber yard walking home, and fired four loads of bird shot into his body at about thirty yards. Milmeier is in a serious condition and blood poisoning is feared.

Iowa Butter Leads the World.

WEBSTER CITY, Feb. 21.—Hamilton county has been the cause of Iowa walking off with the first prize for butter-making at the recent session of the National Butter Makers' asscciation, held at Ostona, Minn. The creamery which submitted the winning butter in competion with nearly every state in the union is located at Randall. The score given was 98½. Congratulatory telegrams have been pouring in on H. H. Miller, the fortunate butter-maker, ever since the award was made.

Had a Narrow Escape.

ELDORA, Feb. 20.—Mr. Frank S. Near, the West Marion street liveryman, had a narrow escape from death. It was a short time after school and the streets were full of children, when George Miller's dray team took fright and ran down the street without a driver. Frank saw them coming and threw himself in front of them, but was knocked down and run over by the team and dray. He was frightfully bruised, but no bones were broken, and he is not seriously injured.

Tramp Made a Mistake.

WEBSTER CITY, Feb. 21.—Because he was suffering with cold and desperate with hunger, and wanted to be fed and lodged, Edward Russell, a tramp, stole a fur coat from in front of a store in Jewell Junction. To his surprise the value of the coat made it grand larceny. He was tried in the district court, found guilty, and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary for the mistake he made.

Sent to the Penitentiary.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 19.—In the district court, Henry Schultz, the young highwayman who attempted to hold up the agent of the Milwaukee road at Fairfax, last December, together with Frank Wolf, who was killed by the agent, was sentenced to ten years in the Anamosa penitentiary. Frank Waterbury, for grand larceny, was given two years in the penitentiary.

Basis of Assessment.

DES MOINES, Feb. 20.—The ways and means committees of the legislature have agreed on 33 1-3 per cent as the basis of assessment of property under the new revenue law.

The Sherburne Bank Robber.

MASON CITY, Feb. 19.—Lewis Kellehan, the Sherburne, Minn., murderer and robber, whose home is in Rock Rapids, is now on trial at Fairmount.

COLFAX GIVEN A PLUM.

Secures the Epworth League Summer Assembly and Training School.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Feb. 20.—The commission to permanently locate the summer assembly and Training school for the Epworth League has decided upon Colfax, because the proposition of that city was the best of all in the state. In going to Colfax the state league gets property amounting to seven acres of Colfax park, with electric light and water supply system, both mineral and common water. Also a fine auditorium with a seating capacity of 2,000, will be built by the citizens of Colfax, and all this is given in fee simple to the Epworth League of Iowa. The cabinet and commission will now proceed with the necessary legal steps.

Diamond Robber Sentenced.

IOWA CITY, Feb. 20.—Henry Black, the convicted diamond robber, was sentenced to 3 years at hard labor in the penitentiary at Anamosa. During the trial Black used every means to prevent his picture being taken, and whenever he left the court room he would tie a handkerchief over the lower part of his face. The officers are of the opinion that he is an old timer and wanted elsewhere.

Wright County Ditch Case.

CLARION, Feb. 20.—Judge Birdsall has decided in favor of the plaintiff in the famous ditch case. This will save farmers many hundreds of dollars. The supervisors ordered the ditch dug and assessed the cost of same to persons whose land abutted the drain. The ditch was some five miles long and cost several thousand dollars. Judge Birdsall held the board exceeded its jurisdiction.

IOWA CONDENSED.

At Wm. Croaks' saloon in the south part of Clinton a few nights ago, four men, named Delaney, Rush, Lawler and Foley, were playing cards. They became intoxicated and began to fight, and as a result Foley had his jugular vein cut and may die.

Des Moines dispatch: Two assignments to R. T. Wellslager for the benefit of creditors have been made. The first was by Anna S. Redhead, widow of the late Wesley Redhead, who died six years ago, and the second by her son, George S. Redhead. It is estimated that the assets, consisting of land and stocks, are about $200,000, and the liabilities $75,000. The cause of the assignment is slow collections.

Des Moines dispatch: The Lathrop-Rhoads-McCain Company's stock of books, stationery and wall paper, at 607 and 609 West Locust street, was destroyed by fire and water. The fire was one of the most thrilling that has visited the city for several years. It was witnessed by thousands of people. The loss, from $12,000 to $14,000, is comparatively small, because the customary large stock carried by the company had been reduced to between $7,000 and $8,000. The building was badly damaged.

J. W. S. Lindley, late treasurer of Humboldt county, recently pleaded guilty to embezzlement of $19,904 and was sentenced to pay a fine of that amount and to imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of four years, the maximum punishment being five years. His time will expire under the good behavior rules in three years and two months. At the same time Tom Fanta was sentenced to three months for forging an order for a $15 overcoat and John Fox got six months for obtaining $20 on false pretenses.

Mary Griswell, a domestic in the family of A. M. Lafferty, of Eddyville, while building a fire, poured a glass full of gasoline on it, when immediately there was a violent explosion and her clothes were set on fire. She ran out into the yard and a son of Mr. Lafferty caught her and rolled her in a pond of mud and water and threw mud on her face and body. He was frightfully burned about the hands and arms in so doing, but this probably saved her life. She was badly burned about the breast and body, but may recover.

At Burlington recently a tall thin man and a short fat one wearing masks were discovered breaking into the confectionary store of H. Hermann, on Elm street, by Clem Neiman, a Hawkeye carrier boy. They captured the boy, bound and gagged him, and bundled him into a dark alley way, where he lay for half an hour while the men finished their job. They then released him and disappeared. The boy at once notified the police, who are now trying to capture the long and short man, who got away with much valuables.

Burlington dispatch: W. L. Schuch died at the Soldiers' Home, at Marshalltown, from the effects of the terrible wounds inflicted upon him a year ago last November by Henry Martin, who, since that date, has been a fugitive from justice. The assault was committed at the shop of Schuch, on Mt. Pleasant street. Martin had worked for Schuch and came to demand payment. A quarrel ensued and Martin seized a ladle used in the foundry for pouring molten iron into the moulds and with it struck Schuch a blow that crushed in the top of his head.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—There is hot fighting in Crete. More Greek troops have embarked at Pyraeus for the rebellious island. Greek forces, under the command of Prince Nicholas, have started for Thessaly, and a Greek warship has fired on a Turkish transport conveying soldiers of the sultan to the Canadian shores. Moreover, the foreign consuls have been compelled to abandon Canea and take refuge on the cruisers in the harbor.

CANEA, Feb. 16.—The powers now occupy Canea. In accordance with a decision arrived at by the representatives, troops from the Austrian, British, Russian and Italian ironclads were landed and marched to quarters prepared for them. The action will tend to restore peace.

CANEA, Feb. 17.—A Greek army corps has been landed at Platanos, a town near Crete. The commander of the invaders, Col. Vassos, upon planting the Greek colors on the Turkish soil of Crete at once issued a flamboyant proclamation, praising the patriotism of the Cretans and sternly demanding the immediate surrender of the Turks in the neighborhood.

CANEA, Feb. 17.—The commanders of the foreign war ships in Cretan waters have been ordered to prevent landings of troops at Canea, Heraklion and Retimo. Meanwhile Greece continues to land troops, ammunition and supplies at these points.

CANEA, Feb. 17.—The Greek troops have attacked and occupied Fort Aghia, capturing 400 Turks. Included among their number are 100 soldiers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 18.—The council of ministers has decided to leave the pacification of Crete to the powers and to adopt military measures on the Greek frontier. The latter, however, is purely for defensive purposes to enable Turkey to be prepared for all eventualities.

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Vienna says that most of the powers have acceded to Germany's proposal to blockade Piraeus, the port of Athens, in order to curb the war-like impulse of Greece.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 18.—Placards are posted in the mosques demanding the sultan's death.

ATHENS, Feb. 19.—In reply to the demand of the diplomats representing the great powers here, that the Greek flotilla commanded by Prince George be withdrawn from Cretan waters at once, M. Skouses, minister of foreign affairs, sent to each minister a note saying the withdrawal of the flotilla would be impossible until Crete is completely pacified, and furthermore, that the Greek government will not rescind its orders to the Greek forces in Crete to oppose the landing of Turkish troops upon the island.

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—It is learned the proposal of Germany to blockade Piraeus, the port of Athens, has been vetoed by Great Britain. There is little prospect of its being adopted. This, with other information, tends to strengthen the belief that the great powers are not seriously opposing Greece.

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—The Greek steamer Pan Hellenic, conveying munitions of war to the insurgents in Crete, has been stopped and turned back by a British cruiser. The action of the British vessel has created the fiercest indignation here.

CANEA, Feb. 20.—The Austrian viceconsul at Heraklion confirms the report of the massacre of 2,000 Moslems by the Cretan Christians at Sitia, on the eastern extremity of the island.

SALONICA, Turkey, Feb. 20.—The authorities have been ordered to arm and dispatch the reserve of the Third army corps to the Greek frontier.

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—In the chamber, the premier, M. Delyannis, introduced a bill abolishing the consulates of Greece in the island of Crete. The army reserves of 1890 and 1892 have been called out for active service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 21.—The report that Lord Salisbury, the British prime minister, had sent a circular note to the powers favoring the granting of autonomy to Crete, with a prince of Greece to administer the affairs of the island, is confirmed.

ATHENS, Feb. 22.—King George, in an interview with a diplomat, explained the attitude of himself and the government on the Cretan question. His majesty declared that he had decided to annex Crete to the Greek dominions, and had ordered the army of occupation not to abandon the island. The king requested the diplomat to communicate this decision to his colleagues in Athens.

CANEA, Feb. 22.—Col. Vassos, commanding the Greek military forces in Crete, has proclaimed at Retimo and Heraklion the formal occupation of Crete by Greece. The Greeks have occupied two Turkish towers at Fort Agia, spiked their guns and returned to Canea. With the exception of three towns, the Greeks are now masters of all Crete.

FROM THRONE OF GREECE.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Explains His Cause of Action.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—In response to a cable message to his majesty the king of Greece, the New York World has received the following from Skouzes, minister of foreign affairs: "After six months of waiting, the reforms imposed upon Turkey by the great powers are not put into execution. The Turks oppose the organization of the gendarmerie (constabulary). On February 3 the Turkish troops began the massacres. The Christian quarters at Canea were burned. About 150,000 women and children are refugees to-day in Greece. The Cretans, in despair, proclaimed their indepence and union with Greece. The Hellenic government sent a small army to occupy Crete in order to restore order and peace. Five great powers occupy the towns of Canea, Rethymmo, Candea and Sitia. All the remainder of the island is in the possession of the Christians. The expressions of sympathy from the great American people and the Hellenes residents in America are a precious support to us in the work for the independence of Crete, and we thank them sincerely."

MURDERED IN HIS CELL.

American Dentist Slain by Spaniards While Confined at Guanabocoa.

HAVANA, Feb. 21.—Dr. Richard Ruis, a naturalized American citizen, was found dead in his cell in the Guanabocoa jail. There is little doubt that he was beaten to death by his jailers at Fondaviela's orders. Dr. Ruiz, who studied and practiced dentistry in Philadelphia for many years, was arrested some ten days ago and charged with having helped Arangueren's band to derail a train several weeks ago, when two Spanish officers were captured. In defiance of law and treaty stipulations the Spanish authorities held Ruiz, confined in a noisome cell without a window, for 300 hours, and then murdered him. Consul General Lee is investigating.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Secretary Olney has called the attention of Senor de Lome, the Spanish minister, to the Ruiz affair, and requested that he communicate with the Spanish government that treaty rights must be shown to Consul General Lee in his investigation.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 22.—Consul General Lee has requested in urgent terms that the United States government send warships to Cuba because of the attitude of the Spanish authorities in relation to the alleged murder of Dr. Ruiz, an American dentist, in the Guanabacoa prison.

OUTWITTED BY COMEZ.

Insurgent Leader Slips Through the Lines and Captures a Stronghold.

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 20.—General Gomez has succeeded in sliding by General Weyler, and is now between him and Havana. General Gomez gave the command for an advance, with strict orders that any man that struck a match or smoked would be court-martialed. He then advanced on the Moron trocha in the eastern end of the island with 5,000 cavalry and 10,000 infantry. He advanced on the fort at midnight, and when he saw he was discovered by the Spanish, who fired on him, he ordered the cavalry to charge. They swooped down on the fort and captured it, and the whole army went through the trocha. All of the arms and ammunition of the fort were captured. The army then continued the march. His order in taking the fort was to use the machete only.

Kyle Elected.

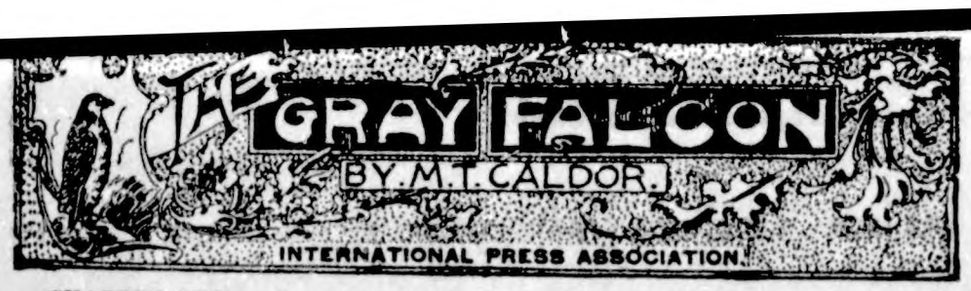
PIERRE, S. D., Feb. 19.—Kyle has been elected United States senator by the solid republican vote and a few populists who stood by him. Most of the populists deserted him, but enough remained to give him the required number to elect.

J. A. Gary in the Cabinet.

CANTON, O., Feb. 20.—Hon. J. A. Gary, of Baltimore, after a visit to Major McKinley announced that he had been tendered and had accepted a cabinet position, but said the portfolio had not yet been decided upon.

BREVITIES.

At Union, Mo., recently Dr. Arthur Duestrow, the St. Louis millionaire, who, February 16, 1894, shot and killed his wife and child in that city, was hanged in the courtyard of the county jail. Not until he arose after a broken night's rest and saw through the window of the jail for the first time the gallows on which he was to die, did he show any sign of realization of his fate. Turning from the window he sobbed like a child. He put away all semblance of insanity, which he carried out so long, and groaned: "I know I've got to die; I killed my wife and child, but it was not my fault. Something within me made me do it. I was not myself."



CHAPTER XVI.—(CONTINUED.)

Emile, without a moment's hesitation stood up in a cart, and began a furious harangue, somewhat after the fashion of his old club addresses. Inwardly he was stricken with remorse, remembering that those old appeals had lost their power. He had claimed equality, the power of rising by worth of character, the right to be men, the haughty refusal to bend the neck of slaves; but now the wild heart of lawlessness asked for nothing but revenge and triumph, blood and crime. His words were eloquent, and he took care to refrain from appeals to their brutality, but he dwelt adroitly on the watch-cry, "Equality, liberty," and all around applauded heartily as he descended.

"You are just the man we want!" cried M. Pierre, coming forward with outstretched hands.

Emile could scarcely control his shudder of disgust, but he shook hands heartily and answered with the most apparent delight:

"I am ready for the work. The whole people must come forward—and behold! France is free! Might you be the loyal worker for the people my comrade has been speaking of—are you citizen Pierre?"

"The very one; and I am proud to meet the Gray Falcon." Arm in arm M. Pierre and Emile walked into a restaurant for breakfast. "I'm on the scent of a nice brace of aristocrats," said the former confidentially, as he disposed of one huge morsel after another; "they escaped when the chateau was burnt in the most infernally mysterious way, but I shall have them yet. I shall expect much help from your sagacity. You people in Paris must have got well trained by this time. How go affairs?"

"Prosperously; there is not the slightest doubt Louis will be beheaded, and the Austrian wife will follow. There is one danger. We may get the tide so strong it may sweep some of its helpers away, too. The Mountain Party and the Jacobins are fighting each other. I promised to start the flame here, but you seem to have it well performed, and I see not but I can speedily return. Why can't you go back with me, citizen Pierre?"

"Willingly, brave Falcon, if I have caught my birds, but otherwise I must stick to this spot. I know they are still about the place and I must watch my nets."

"You seem to have great interest in succeeding?"

"To be sure. I have double motives—gain and revenge. I haven't told you there is a girl in the case, have I, that gives extra zest to the adventure?"

Emile swallowed his disgust and ire as best he might, and with some trivial excuse, left M. Pierre to finish his breakfast. It seemed to him he should stifle if he breathed the same air with the villain any longer.

He found himself the object of awe and reverence. One who had passed through so many Parisian tragedies, and whose reputation as a revolutionary orator was so widespread, might well draw the attention of all.

It was a sore trial for him to speak now. The terrible perversion of his former efforts made his heart heavy under similar attempts. He had seen for himself what revolution meant, and he was almost ready to accept the old evils patiently, in lieu of the maddened convulsion, whatever purification might eventually come from it.

But he had set his task before him, and Emile had all his life been used to self-sacrifices and self-struggling. He was not the man to blanch or falter.

He became the lion of Frejus, and M. Pierre was almost ready to be jealous of his popularity.

The days wore on from a week to a month, and still Emile found himself hampered on all sides, and bound hand and foot by the press of circumstances.

His heart sickened as he thought of the long delay, the torture of watching and waiting in that underground retreat. He was nearly frantic with alarm as he heard M. Pierre confidently broaching the plan of hunting for caves or burrows in the forest, declaring he would dig it all over before he gave up his search.

And still no plan for their escape had occurred to him. His very popularity increased the difficulty; he had no privileges, every movement he made was noted; he gave out notice that he was sent for to Paris, and made ostensible preparations for departure.

That very day came M. Pierre, jubilant and sanguine.

"Wait a little, Falcon, and I can go with you, after I catch my prey."

"You have remarkable faith, citizen, to hold so firmly to the belief that the Little Forest contains fugitives. I confess I should have given it up long ago."

"Oh, no, not if your faculties were sharpened with the thirst for revenge. At last I am rewarded. The watchers last night detected a man stealing toward the spring of water in the center of the forest. One caught him fairly, but he wrestled with him, escaped and in the same strange way vanished. It has happened twice before. They are foxes. I give them due credit, but I shall discover their burrow yet. I have sent for tools, and I'll dig over the whole ground and cut down every tree, but I will unearth them."

"Success to you, citizen," answered Emile, but he longed to leap upon him and throttle the exultant villain.

Left alone, Emile sat a long time with his head drooping in his hands.

Something must be done, and that right speedily. He sprang up at length with a brightened face, and began examining his pistols.

After that he went out to find his coadjutor.

CHAPTER XVII.

LEFT alone, the day after Emile's departure to the town, the young people were rather gloomy, but each endeavored to cheer the other.

"I know what an insignificant protector I must seem to you in comparison with Monsieur Emile, dear Chlotilde," said Jules; "but, indeed, he is a paragon. And now that my strength has returned, and something of my own spirits, I assure you I shall be of better service than you imagine."

"Nay, dear Jules, I have all possible confidence in you, and so has my uncle. He told me about your generous and heroic interference for the poor old priest in Paris. I have been sad because I could not throw off the depression the lack of his cheerful encouragement was likely enough to induce, and I have been haunted with a fear of some danger befalling him. He is so thoroughly acquainted with the forest, and so accurately informed of the revolutionary movements, his loss to us would be certain destruction."

"It would indeed be irreparable. I am overwhelmed with gratitude and admiration for him. What a wonderful man he is! No king could seem half so grand to me."

"And you know not the half. I only wonder that he has ever been one of the revolutionists."

"Nay, that is the least of my wonderment. With his talents, his varied information, his heroic nature and great heart, I cannot blame him for rising up against the oppression, for the laws of France were horribly grinding upon the under classes; and that such as he should be insulted and down trodden by a titled ignoramus would indeed be shameful."

"Yet I am sure he is troubled and remorseful for the part he has taken."

"Yes, his sensitive nature is shocked by the bloody issue of events. Had such heroic, magnanimous natures as his held entire control, we should have seen quite another form of revolution. There is General LaFayette, I know that he believed in the overthrow of the throne, and the establishment of a republic, similar to that of his favorite United States. He is woefully made aware that he who touched the straw with fire cannot hope to control the flame."

"And your sympathies, Jules, you have not told me which way they turn?" asked the girl.

"Indeed, both ways, I may say. I do not blame the people for declaring in favor of equality. I cannot bear to see the nobility massacred. At present because of this last sentiment I am hunted down like a wolf, and grievously hated by the people's party. I suppose therefore I might be called an aristocrat."

"You do not seem like one of the people," observed Felicie, thoughtfully.

"I may reiterate the remark concerning you, Chlotilde. I never saw duchess or marchioness more thoroughly aristocratic in appearance."

She blushed and answered hastily:

"My associates have all been nobly born people."

"I should know it. It is the same with your uncle. It all goes to prove the much vaunted aristocracy of blood is all moonshine. Educate one of the common people into the refinements of wealth, and they are far nobler than nobility, take them at their best."

Felicie recalled some similar remark of her mother's and a sorrowful expression came over her face, and she sat a long time in silence, her head drooping on her arm.

Jules, perceiving it, hastened to find an interesting book, and read aloud. After which he playfully proposed he should serve her to a lunch, and to divert her mind, assumed the manners of an Arab host, and actually brought a merry smile to her lips by his quaint language, as he brought forward some figs and dates from the generous store Emile had taken from the chateau.

So passed the time, each endeavoring to add to the other's cheerfulness and divert the approach of melancholy. Every evening they went up to the higher room, carefully examined the vicinity, and then in utter silence stepped out to breathe the delicious freshness of the outer air. But as the days wore on into weeks, apprehension and anxiety seized either mind, though each endeavored to conceal it from the other.

They still practiced their little innocent arts for diversion and entertainment, but the blank smile, the absent look, revealed that their cheerfulness was all pretense.

They discovered, too, the watch in the forest had been more closely enforced, for Jules had taken Emile's place in the upper room and several times heard the conversation of the men.

He came down one night and found Felicie weeping bitterly.

"Dear, dear Chlotilde, take heart, I beseech you," cried he; "do not despair; all will yet be well."

She tried vainly to repress her grief, and then burst forth piteously.

"Emile is gone; they have killed him! my noble, generous friend is lost. Oh, I am all alone—all alone in this cruel, pitiless world!"

Jules knelt down before her, and drew the drooping head to his breast.

"Chlotilde, dearest, that is ungenerous. Here is one who is ready to sacrifice everything, even life itself, in your defense. You force from me the secret I meant to declare to your uncle before I breathed it in your ear—that I love you, dearest one, with a love purer and truer and more fervent than I had dared to hope should brighten my desolated life; that I would choose you, though I were a king in the land, before the proudest lady, the most royal princess—you, a peerless daughter of the people."

"Is it possible, Jules?" stammered she.

"Ah, you are angry, you are vexed, you have no love in response," said Jules, in a troubled voice.

She had drawn herself away as if startled by her own discoveries; her face was half averted, her beautiful eyes downcast, a rich rose slowly flushed her cheeks.

"I am astonished, I am perplexed, but angry, ah, no, indeed, Jules. I am rather grateful."

"But you have no love for me in return; alas! why should I have ventured to hope so?"

She turned her face toward him slowly. What a sweet hope lighted up the lovely features!

"I am cruel to withhold the truth. I will not be outdone in generosity. What I could not say to a marquis I can answer to you, Jules, I do love you; yet, you must forget that I have said it until we see Emile, or learn that something has befallen him."

Jules was kissing her hand in the extravagance of delight.

"Now is the world a paradise, though I am a hunted refugee, and know not how many hours of security are left to me."

Felicie ran away to her little retreat as soon as possible, and sat down there in a perfect bewilderment of mingling emotions.

Half horrified at herself for being capable of this feeling of joy, quite frightened at the words she had spoken, it was long ere a feeling of peace and serenity returned to her.

Then it almost seemed her mother's spirit returned to her and breathed upon her a saintly benediction, as in approval of her course.

It is true she scarcely dared to think of her father; she shuddered as she put aside the thought of his anger and horror of the betrothal of a Languedoc to the humble Jules, a representative of the class the count had looked down upon with such aristocratic scorn.

But her mother had been her guide and oracle in life; it was not likely her sentiments should be held less sacred now that death had made her memory saintly.

This little love episode gave new interest and life to their flagging spirits. But as the fourth week crept on, the pair began to distrust sorrowfully the likelihood of Emile's death, or imprisonment.

Jules grew grave and careworn, feeling the responsibility resting upon him acutely; and his fair companion though she sedulously avoided any expression of despair, showed plainly by her paling cheek and heavy eye the anxiety which oppressed her.

Woodcock Eggs in Sweden.

Owing to the inhabitants of Sweden being very partial to the eggs of the woodcock it is more than probable that the breed will be greatly diminished, if not at last totally extirpated. The eggs of the above species are to be seen for sale in large numbers in the various markets in Stockholm.

The Cherre Pongee gourd, which grows in India, increases its length three times daily for thirty-four days.

LOST AND FOUND.

THE STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL'S TRIALS.

(From the News-Tribune, Muscatine, Iowa.)

Miss Mae Gatten, living near Muscatine, Iowa, has had a remarkable experience. Three years ago last spring Miss Gatten's parents and many friends noticed a peculiar change in her. She was not the pleasant, wide-awake girl of old. Her mother was not alarmed at first, thinking that after the March winds and April storms were over, the color would return to her cheeks. But May, June and July passed and Mae's cheeks were only growing more thin and pale every day. One part of her work after another was given up. Her flower garden, in which previously she had taken great delight, was neglected. Then, too, her irregular attendance at church made it necessary for her to give up her Sunday School class.

When coming from town one day her father met her music teacher, Miss Jones, in tears, going slowly from the house. He spoke to her as usual and then inquired of Mae's progress, when to his great astonishment Miss Jones told him that Mae had not been able to take a full lesson for weeks. This seemed to awaken Mr. Gatten to the real state of affairs, and he hastily sent for the family physician.

With the chilling winds of autumn Mae grew much worse. The doctor pronounced it bronchial trouble, with serious female weakness. During the following winter they changed doctors, and as their beloved daughter grew worse from day to day, they consulted the best medical talent to be had in that section. Thus matters went on during the entire winter.

The next spring a young lady relative of the family made them an extended visit. She had been wonderfully helped by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and always carried some with her. She was so enthusiastic that she soon had Miss Gatten trying them, and insisted on her giving them a fair trial. She finished one box and said she felt some better. Her father was pleased and purchased more.

One cannot imagine the complete surprise and delight of that glad father and mother when they found their daughter kept on improving. Six boxes were used and Miss Gatten was able to walk around, a pleasant, happy girl of eighteen summers. Two more boxes and she declared herself perfectly well, cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, over-work or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

REV. MARY A. HILLIS.

In a letter just received from the noted evangelist, Rev. Mary A. Hillis, she writes: "I gladly give my testimony to the healing properties of Dr. Kay's Lung Balm. My son has had a terrible cough every winter for five years and he took dozens of bottles of the leading cough medicines, but nothing seemed to help him or quiet his cough. But two 25c. boxes of Dr. Kay's Lung Balm has cured him, and it has been a great relief to other members of my family when afflicted with colds."

We know there never has been a medicine to equal it for the lungs, throat or catarrh. WE GUARANTEE IT to cure even if all other remedies and doctors have failed. Why not try it now? THE RECORD BROKEN.

C., B. & Q. ACCOMPLISHES A GREAT FEAT.

Special Train of the Burlington Route Runs from Chicago to Denver, 1,025 Miles, at an Average Speed of Nearly 58 Miles an Hour.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad has just accomplished the greatest feat the world has ever known for long-distance fast running.

It was made in a race against death to carry Henry J. Mayham of New York to the bedside of his dying son in Denver.

The distance from Chicago to Denver, 1,025 miles, was covered in exactly 1,069 minutes' actual running time. This is only a small fraction less than one mile a minute for the longest continuous run ever made by any railroad in the world.

It was a run made in the ordinary course of business. No special preparation whatever had been contemplated for the trip. In exactly forty-four minutes from the time the order for the train was received the throttle of the engine was pulled open and the train glided out of the Union Depot on a race which surprised railroad men the world over.

The engine which took the train on the first run out of Chicago to Galesburg had just come in from Aurora pulling a regular passenger train. No time was spent in cleaning up, but it was quickly turned around, attached to the special train and manned by the same engineer who had brought it to Chicago. Not more than a half dozen officials or employes of the road knew the trip was to be made. This fact is the most important in the history of the great feat, as it demonstrates the superb physical condition of the road and the perfect management which enables such remarkable time to be maintained for more than a thousand miles.

The time made by the record-breaking train is as follows, including all stops:

From Chicago	Miles.	Time.
To Galesburg	163	2h. 56m.
To Burlington	206	3h. 48m.
To Pacific Jct.....	482	9h. 5m.
To Lincoln	541	10h. 11m.
To Hastings	638	12h. 3m.
To McCook	770	14h. 15m.
To Denver	1,025	18h. 53m.

Average time, including stops, 54.3 miles per hour.

The first stop made by the train after leaving Chicago was at Sixteenth street for supplies, where four minutes were consumed. At Aurora the traveling engineer took one minute to look the engine over and the train ran without a stop until Mendota was reached, when three minutes more were consumed for the same purpose. A total of twenty-one stops was made between Chicago and Denver, consuming in all sixty-four minutes. The longest stop was made at Red Oak, Ia., where engines were changed on account of a hot truck. At this point the fastest run of the trip was made. Soon after leaving Creston it was discovered that a box on one of the engine trucks was heating, but in spite of this fact the run of thirty-six miles was made in thirty-four minutes. At Villisca a fresh engine was substituted and the run to Red Oak, fifteen miles, was made in as many minutes.

Over long stretches of road between McCook and Denver the train made more than a mile a minute for distances of forty to sixty miles. Six engineers took the train from Chicago to Denver, making an average of 170 miles to each run.

Mr. Mayham left New York Sunday morning at 10 o'clock on Pennsylvania Limited in response to repeated messages that his son, William B. Mayham, was lying at the point of death at Denver. At Fort Wayne Mr. Mayham became convinced that the ordinary trains would not take him to the bedside of his son in time to close his eyes in death, and he promptly wired the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road to have in readiness a special train to carry him through to Denver in the shortest possible time.

The Pennsylvania arrived in Chicago ten minutes late and thirty minutes making necessary preparations for the were consumed by Mr. Mayham in journey.

The train left the Union Depot at exactly 10 o'clock Monday morning. The Burlington road had agreed to make the trip to Denver "inside of twenty-four hours." The feat was accomplished in three minutes less than nineteen hours, or more than five hours under the stipulated time.

Children's Letters.

Children should be encouraged to write letters. It gives them facility in write letters. It gies them facility in expressing their ideas, and if the habit is established in childhood, it is less difficult in after life. When they leave the old home a regular correspondence is a source of the greatest comfort to both parents and children, and frequent letters help to keep the fraternal tie strong between brothers and sisters.

From the Cedar Rapids Rep.

Goodell, Feb. 20.—Special: Last evening a tramp stopped at Nick Steffens', living one mile south of this place, and asked for supper and lodging. This was readily granted to him by Mr. Steffen, as he never turns anyone from his door, but when morning came it was found that "wandering Willie" had concluded not to wait for breakfast, but had appropriated a new suit of tailor made cloths, belonging to the hired man, including a pair of new shoes and overs, and also a good Buffalo over coat belonging to Mr Steffen, and skipped to parts unknown. It was at once reported to the officers, who are making a hunt for the gentleman. Mr. Steffen declares that he is not keeping open house for that class of strangers any longer.

Topeka., Feb. 22.—When Congressman "Jerry" Simpson appears in the extra session of congress next month, he will for the first time in his life wear a tailor made suit of clothes.

This suit of clothes came to him here yesterday by express from a Chicago tailor, and tucked away in the bundle was a pair of silk half hose, sent with the compliments of the tailor.

Simpson will wear these hose with his new suit of clothes. He has also bought a pair of tan leather shoes and a silk hat of the latest block. He has adorned the latter with a half mourning band. Last night he appeared at the Bryan meeting wearing the entire outfit.

Hay Rates.

The farmers in northern Iowa are making bitter complaint against the ruling of the railroad commission with reference to rates on hay. The increase of of rates is due to the change in classification, and the effect of it has been to shut the hay growers out of the southern Iowa market and compel them to ship their hay to Chicago. The real effect has been to advance the rates, say from Britt to Oskaloosa, which are typical points, from $1.67 to $2.97 per ton and to force the hay dealers in northern Iowa to ship their hay to Chicago instead of Iowa markets. This advance will, therefore, work injury both to the hay dealers and the railroads; the hay shippers do not get the markets and the railroads do not get the local freight. It is part of the policy which is now pursued by most of the roads to haul everything out of Iowa instead of from point to point in it, thus decreasing the state business, building up terminal points and allowing interior points to go into a decline. The first evidence we have of a reversal of this policy and an attempt at state building is the adoption of feeding in transit rates by three or four of the lines of road.—Wallaces' Farmer.

From the Text: "And Some Are Broken Pieces from the Ship" — Acts, Chapter XLVII, Verse 44 — Saving the Wrecked on Life's Tempestuous Sea.

NEVER off Goodwin Sands, or the Skerries, or Cape Hatteras, was a ship in worse predicament than, in the Mediterranean hurricane, was the grain ship on which two hundred and seventy-six passengers were driven on the coast of Malta, five miles from the metropolis of that island, called Citta Vecchia. After a two-weeks' tempest, when the ship was entirely disabled, and captain and crew had become completely demoralized, an old missionary took command of the vessel. He was small, crooked-backed and sore-eyed, according to tradition. It was Paul, the only unscared man aboard. He was no more afraid of a Euroclydon tossing the Mediterranean sea, now up to the gates of heaven and now sinking it to the gates of hell, than he was afraid of a kitten playing with a string. He ordered them all down to take their rations, first asking for them a blessing. Then he insured all their lives, telling them they would be rescued, and, so far from losing their heads, they would not lose so much of their hair as you could cut off with one click of the scissors: nay, not a thread of it, whether it were gray with age or golden with youth. "There shall not a hair fall from the head of any of you."

Knowing that they can never get to the desired port, they make the sea on the fourteenth night black with overthrown cargo, so that when the ship strikes it will not strike so heavily. At daybreak they saw a creek, and in their exigency resolved to make for it. And so they cut the cables, took in the two paddles they had on those old boats, and hoisted the mainsail so that they might come with such force as to be driven high up on the beach by some fortunate billow. There she goes—tumbling toward the rocks, now prow foremost, now stern foremost, now rolling over to the starboard, now over to the larboard, now a wave dashes clear over the deck, and it seems as if the old craft has gone forever. But up she comes again. Paul's arms around a mast, he cries: "All is well, God has given me all those that sail with me." Crash! went the prow, with such force that it broke off the mast. Crash! went the timbers, till the seas rushed through from side to side of the vessel. She parts amidships, and into a thousand fragments the vessel goes, and into the waves two hundred and seventy-six immortals are precipitated. Some of them had been brought up on the seashore, and had learned to swim and with their chins just above the waves and by the strokes of both arms and propulsion of both feet, they put out for the beach, and reach it. But alas for those others! They have never learned to swim, or they were wounded by the falling of the mast, or the nervous shock was too great for them. And others had been weakened by long sea-sickness.

Oh, what will become of them? "Take that piece of a rudder," says Paul to one. "Take that fragment of a spar," says Paul to another. "Take that image of Castor and Pollux." "Take that plank from the lifeboat." "Take anything, and head for the beach." What a struggle for life in the breakers! Oh, the merciless waters, how they sweep over the heads of men, women and children! Hold on there! Almost ashore; keep up your courage. Remember what Paul told you. There, the receding wave on the beach leaves in the sand a whole family. There crawls up out of the surf the centurion. There, another plank comes in, with a life clinging fast to it. There, another piece of the shattered vessel, with its freightage of an immortal soul. They must by this time all be saved. Yes; there comes in last of all, for he had been overseeing the rest, the old missionary, who wrings the water from his gray beard and cries out: "Thank God, all are here!"

I believe in both the Heidelberg and Westminster Catechisms, and I wish you all did; but you may believe in nothing they contain except the one idea, that Christ came to save sinners, and that you are one of them, and you are instantly rescued. If you can come in on the grand old ship, I would rather have you get aboard, but if you can only find a piece of wood as long as the human body, or a piece as wide as the outspread human arms, and either of them is a piece of the cross, come in on that piece. Tens of thousands of people are today kept out of the kingdom of God because they cannot believe everything.

I am talking with a man thoughtful about his soul who has lately traveled through New England and passed the night at Andover. He says to me: "I you? Don't you realize that the man who waits for another chance after death when he has a good chance before death is a stark fool? Had not you better take the plank that is thrown to you now and head for shore, rather than wait for a plank that may by invisible hands be thrown to you after you are dead? Do as you please, but as for myself, with pardon for all my sins offered me now, and all the joys of time and eternity offered me now, I instantly take them, rather than run the risk of such other chance as wise men think they can peel off or twist out of a Scripture passage that has for all the Christian centuries been interpreted another way." You say: "I do not like Princeton theology, or New Haven theology, or Andover theology." I do not ask you on board either of these great men-of-war, their portholes filled with the great siege-guns of ecclesiastical battle. But I do ask you to take the one plank of the Gospel that you do believe in and strike out for the pearl-strung beach of heaven.

Says some other man: "I would attend to religion if I was quite sure about the doctrine of election and free agency, but that mixes me all up." Those things used to bother me, but I have no more perplexity about them; for I say to myself: "If I love Christ and live a good, honest, useful life, I am elected to be saved; and if I do not love Christ, and live a bad life, I will be damned, and all the the theological seminaries of the universe cannot make it any different." I floundered along while in the sea of sin and doubt, and it was as rough as the Mediterranean on the fourteenth night, when they threw the grain overboard, but I saw there was mercy for a sinner, and that plank I took, and I have been warming myself by the bright fire on the shore ever since.

While I am talking to another man about his soul he tells me: "I do not become a Christian because I do not believe there is any hell at all." Ah! don't you? Do all the people of all beliefs and no belief at all, of good morals and bad morals go straight to a happy heaven? Do the holy and the debauched have the same destination? At midnight, in a hallway, the owner of a house and a burglar meet; they both fire, and both are wounded, but the burglar dies in five minutes and the owner of the house lives a week after; will the burglar be at the gate of heaven, waiting, when the house-owner comes in? Will the debauchee and the libertine go right in among the families of heaven? I wonder if Herod is playing on the banks of the river of life with the children he massacred: I wonder if Charles Guiteau and John Wilkes Booth are up there shooting at a mark. I do not now controvert it, although I must say that for such a miserable heaven I have no admiration. But the Bible does not say: "Believe in perdition and be saved." Because all are saved, according to your theory, that ought not to keep you from loving and serving Christ. Do not refuse to come ashore because all the others, according to your theory, are going to get ashore. You may have a different theory about chemistry, about astronomy, about the atmosphere from that which others adopt, but you are not, therefore, hindered from action. Because your theory of light is different from others, do not refuse to open your eyes. Because your theory of air is different you do not refuse to breathe. Because your theory about the stellar system is different, you do not refuse to acknowledge the north star. Why should the fact that your theological theories are different hinder you from acting upon what you know? If you have not a whole ship fastened in the theological drydocks to bring you to wharfage, you have at least a plank. "Some on broken pieces of the ship."

"But I don't believe in revivals!" Then go to your room, and all alone, with your door locked, give your heart to God, and join some church where the thermometer never gets higher than fifty in the shade.

"But I do not believe in baptism!" Come in without it and settle that matter afterward. "But there are so many inconsistent Christians!" Then come in and show them by a good example how professors should act. "But I don't believe in the Old Testament!" Then come in on the New. "But I don't like the Book of Romans." Then come in on Matthew or Luke. Refusing to come to Christ, whom you admit to be the Savior of the lost, because you cannot admit other things, you are like a man out there in that Mediterranean tempest, and tossed in the Melita breakers, refusing to come ashore until he can mend the pieces of the broken ship. I hear him say: "I won't go in on any of these planks until I know in what part of the ship they belong. When I can get the windlass in the right place, and the sails set, and that keel-piece where it belongs, and that floor-timber right, and these ropes untangled, I will go ashore. I am an old sailor, and know all about ships for forty years, and as soon as I can get ship reconstructed. Better do as I am doing. I know nothing about ships, and never saw one before I came on board this, and I cannot swim a stroke, but I am going ashore on this shivered timber." The man in the offing, while trying to mend his ship goes down. The man who trusted to the plank is saved. O my brother, let your smashed up system of theology go to the bottom, while you come in on a splintered spar! "Some on broken pieces of the ship."

You may get all your difficulties settled as Garibaldi, the magnetic Italian, got his gardens made. When the war between Austria and Sardinia broke out he was living at Caprera, a very rough and uncultivated island home. But he went forth with his sword to achieve the liberation of Naples and Sicily, and gave nine million people free government, under Victor Emmanuel. Garibaldi, after being absent two years from Caprera, returned, and, when he approached it, he found that his home had, by Victor Emmanuel, as a surprise, been Edenized. Trimmed shrubbery had taken the place of thorny thickets, gardens the place of barrenness, and the old rookery in which he once lived had given way to a pictured mansion. And I tell you if you will come and enlist under the banner of our Victor Emmanuel, and follow him through thick and thin, and fight his battles, and endure his sacrifices, you will find after awhile that he has changed your heart from a jungle of thorny scepticisms into a garden all abloom with luxuriant joy that you have never dreamt of. From a tangled Caprera of sadness into a paradise of God.

If you can believe nothing else, you certainly believe in vicarious suffering, for you se it almost every day in some shape. The steamship Knickerbocker, of the Cromwell line, running between New Orleans and New York, was in great storms, and the captain and crew saw the schooner Mary D. Cranmer, of Philadelphia, in distress. The weather cold, the waves mountain high, the first officer of the steamship and four men put out in a lifeboat to save the crew of the schooner, and reached the vessel and towed it out of danger, the wind shifting so that the schooner was saved. But the five men of the steamship coming back, their boat capsized, yet righted again and came on, the sailors coated with ice. The boat capsized again, and three times upset and was righted, and a line thrown the poor fellows, but their hands were frozen so they could not grasp it, and a great wave rolled over them, and they went down, never to rise again till the sea gives up its dead. Appreciate that heroism and self-sacrifice of the brave fellows all who can, and can we not appreciate the Christ who put out into a more biting cold and into a more overwhelming surge, to bring us out of infinite peril into everlasting safety? The wave of human hate rolled over him from one side and the wave of hellish fury rolled over him on the other side. Oh, the thickness of the night and the thunder of the tempest into which Christ plunged for our rescue!

You admit you are all broken up, one decade of your life gone by, two decades, three decades, four decades, a half-century, perhaps three-quarters of a century gone. The hour hand and the minute hand of your clock of life are almost parallel, and soon it will be twelve and your day ended. Clear discouraged are you? I admit it is a sad thing to give all our lives that are worth anything to sin and the devil, and then at last make God a present of a first-rate corpse. But the past you cannot recover. Get on board that old ship you never will. Have you only one more year left, one more month, one more week, one more day, one more hour—come in on that. Perhaps if you get to heaven God may let you go out on some great mission to some other world, where you can somewhat atone for your lack of service in this.

From many a deathbed I have seen the hands thrown up in deploration something like this: "My life has been wasted. I had good mental faculties and fine social position and great opportunity, but through worldliness and neglect all has gone to waste save these few remaining hours. I now accept of Christ and shall enter heaven through his mercy; but alas, alas! that when I might have entered the haven of eternal rest with a full cargo, and been greeted by the waving hands of a multitude in whose salvation I had borne a blessed part, I must confess I now enter the harbor of heaven on broken pieces of the ship."

Theory About Quinine.

It is claimed that the tree from the bark of which quinine is obtained furnishes no quinine except in malarial regions. If the tree is planted in a malarial district it will produce quinine; if it is planted in a non-malarial district it will not produce quinine. It is, therefore, inferred that quinine is a malarial poison, drawn from the soil and stored up in the bark of this tree.

on providing that all special charter cities and their officers be relieved of any responsibility whatever for the enforcement of mulct law in those cities. Consideration of election bill was resumed, but no important change in old law was made.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 16.—The election law was again under consideration. Amendment was adopted providing that polls shall open at 8 o'clock in all cases except in cities where registration is required. Amendment doing away with publication of ballot in newspapers was reconsidered and lost. Pay for printing ballot was made 40 cents per square. Printing of sample ballots was done away with. The legal rates for printing were reduced from $1 per square for first insertion and 60 cents per square for subsequent insertions to 75 cents and 37½ cents. The senate refused to rescind the vote taken last week by which the present law to permit women to vote on the issuance of school and municipal bonds was re-enacted. The Australian ballot law was immeasurably simplified by the law being amended so there are but two ways of voting.

HOUSE.

The house spent most of the forenoon in considering the bill in relation to crimes and punishment. It covers fifty-eight pages of the revised code, and when the reading was deferred at 11.45 not more than one-half of the bill had been gone over.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb, 17.—The bill amending mulct law to make it applicable to cities under special charters was taken up. Hipwell moved to amend by making the liquor traffic legal, but this was voted down, 10 to 39. The bill then passed. Election laws came up and an amendment to cover cities under special charters was adopted. The senate refused to reconsider the amendment prohibiting the placing of a candidate's name on more than one ticket. Bills relating to practice of dentistry and submission of constitutional amendments passed.

HOUSE.

Consideration of bill relating to crimes and punishments was resumed. Abandonment of wife and neglect to support her, and abandonment of a child under 12 years of age, were made misdemeanors.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 18.—The entire forenoon session of the senate was devoted to that section of the election law which was recently adopted prohibiting the name of a candidate from appearing more than once upon the official ballot at an election. The question was an engrossment of the the election bill as completed. Many republicans protested against the section but the bill was finally engrossed, 31 to 17. Bill relating to state veterinary surgeon, bill relating to weights and measures and bill in relation to tender were passed. The latter was amended so that a tender of money may be made only in gold or silver coin.

HOUSE.

Bill in relation to crimes and punishments and bill appropriating $112,900 for the institution for feeble minded at Glenwood were passed. Bill in relation to rights of property was then taken up and passed, as was also the bill in relation to construction and operation of railways.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 19.—Five bills were passed in the senate. They related to the subjects of the school fund, limited partnership, money of account and interest, private seals and tenders. The house bill on tenders was substituted for the senate bill passed yesterday. Bill relating to taking of private property for works of internal improvement was under consideration at the time of adjournment.

HOUSE.

Bill relating to veterinary surgeons passed. The railroad bill was taken up and an amendment making roads carry bicycles free as baggage was voted down. The bill was still under consideration at time of adjournment.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 20.—House bill relating to taking private property for internal improvement was passed. Bill revising and amending the statutes relating to the State University, house bill relating to Agricultural College, house bill relating to State Normal School and the bill relating to the Institution for Feeble Minded Children were passed.

HOUSE.

Reed introduced a memorial to congress proposing that such evidence as is competent in civil cases shall be sufficient in the case of applicants before boards of pension examiners. Railroad bill was taken up and an amendment was adopted providing that in claims for damages no contract entered into with the road shall constitute a bar for damages. The bill passed. Senate joint resolution providing for a committee to investigate state institutions was laid on the table after a hot debate.

Wolcott Encouraged.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—United States Senator Wolcott has returned to London after a visit to Paris and Berlin. In an interview prior to his departure for America he said: "I wish you to say to those interested in the United States that I return entirely encouraged with the result of my mission. I have good reason to believe that it will have some of the results hoped for. The exact objects for which I came over here have been largely misstated by the press of all countries, and their very nature made impossible any premature discussion, which could only have thwarted the whole object of my trip. I am, therefore, unable to contradict them or issue a statement on the subject. I am satisfied to abide by the result when all will be known."

"What does it cost to go to one of the parties?"

"Twenty-five cents."

"WORN OUT."

A COMMON EXPRESSION USED BY AMERICAN WOMEN.

Many do not Realize the Full Significance of Those Two Words.

When a woman is nervous and irritable, head and back ache, feels tired all the time, loses sleep and appetite, has pains in groins, bearing-down sensation, whites and irregularities, she is not "worn out," but feels as if she were. Such symptoms tell her that a womb trouble is imminent, and she cannot act too promptly if she values her future comfort and happiness.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America, go to prove beyond a question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition. If in doubt, write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., as thousands of women do.

Here is a lady who says:—

"Let me add my name to your list of testimonials. For years I suffered with such a weakness of the back I could not stand straight. I had terrible pains in my womb. The doctor said an operation must be performed, as there was no other way to be cured. I was afraid to have the operation performed, and kept trying the medicines that I saw advertised. At last I tried yours. After taking three bottles I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to every woman, and cannot praise it enough, for it saved me from the surgeon's knife."—MRS. MARK BUCH, Dolgeville, N. Y.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Morgan called up his resolution for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Sherman raised several points of order against Morgan and was sustained by the vice-president, but the senate, on a vote, decided to proceed with the resolution. In executive session Morgan made a speech in favor of his resolution. In open session the bankruptcy bill was read, but no action taken.

HOUSE.

The sundry civil appropriation bill, carrying $581,644,743, was passed without amendment. Contested election case of Benoit vs. Boatner, from Louisiana, was decided in favor of Boatner, the sitting member. Bill to exchange rifles of the national guard for Springfield rifles of 45 calibre passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Chandler made a vigorous speech in favor of his resolution urging bimetallism. Hoar spoke in favor of the bankruptcy bill.

HOUSE.

The day was devoted to the consideration of private pensions bills and thirty-nine were passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Allen spoke on his resolution relating to dismissals at the post-office at South Omaha, and declared the civil service law a fraud. Conference report on the immigration bill was agreed to.

HOUSE.

A bill passed opening to use and occupation under the right of way act of 1891 all the reservation sites reserved by the geological survey. Hopkins-Kendal election contest was debated, but no action taken.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 18.—In executive session the senate voted to take up consideration of nominations in preference to the arbitration treaty. C. F. Amidon was confirmed as district judge of North Dakota.

HOUSE.

The house, by a vote of 197 to 91, reversed the finding of a majority of the elections committee and decided the contested election case of Hopkins vs. Kendall, from the Tenth Kentucky district, in favor of the republican contestant.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 19.—In executive session the senate voted down Nelson's motion to postpone further consideration of the arbitration treaty until March 5. Sherman made repeated efforts to secure a vote on the ratification, but was defeated.

HOUSE.

House took up the general deficiency bill, but its consideration was not completed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 20.—A resolution by Cameron extending sympathy to the government of Greece in its intervention to free the people of Crete "from the tyranny of foreign oppressors and to restore peace with the blessing of Christian civilization to that distressed land," was adopted. Indian appropriation bill came up. An amendment making temporary provision for contract or denominational schools for Indian pupils, caused a long discussion, and a vote was not reached.

HOUSE.

The house spent the day in discussing the general deficiency appropriation bill and it was not completed.

OWES THE STATE MUCH.

Settlement With Nebraska's ex-State Treasurer Cannot Be Effected.

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 19.—Governor Holcomb transmitted a special message to the legislature, in which he urges the appointment of a committee to investigate the state treasury. The governor recounts the fact that while over a month has elapsed since the change in state officers, a settlement has not yet been effected with ex-Treasurer Bartley, and he finds that the sum of $537,000 due the state is as yet unaccounted for. The facts do not warrant the charge that the ex-treasurer is short this amount, nor does the governor so claim; but he insists that there has been unwarranted losses to the state through failures of banks which he declined to approve as depositories.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Feb. 19.—In the revised rules of practice in the United States patent office bearing date of February 9, 1897, occurs the following: "It is the design of the constitution and the patent laws to secure to the inventor not that which is a matter of common right, nor the property of another, but what he has himself created. The duty of the office is to grant nothing which already belongs to the domain of the public, but, on the other hand, not to withhold from the inventor any portion of the full benefit of his invention. Its function is to draw the line with even justice between the two." A patent for an invention is synonymous with a patent or deed for land. The latter fixes the meter and bounds of the land so the owner knows where it is relative to adjoining land. A patent for an invention points out and distinguishes it from other inventions and subject matter relating to the same art to which it belongs. Surveyors sometimes vary in fixing corners and litigation results. The scope of a claim to a patent is sometimes disputed in court. But there is much less litigation in regard to titles to inventions than there is about real estate. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

Smouldering fires of old disease

lurk in the blood of many a man, who fancies himself good health. Let a slight sickness seize him, and the old enemy breaks out anew. The fault is the taking of medicines that suppress, instead of curing disease. You can eradicate disease and purify your blood, if you use the standard remedy of the world,

"Your Ruling Planet Discovered By Astrology" is the title of Prof. G. W. Cunningham's latest work on this ancient science. Written in plain, comprehensive language. Every page sparkles with gems of information. Every reader will acquire amazing and startling knowledge of this mystical science. Price, postpaid, 25c, 50c and $1.00, according to binding.

THE ASTROLOGER'S CORNER.

Some slight changes necessitated using less space for this department. Prof Cunningham is daily receiving flattering testimonials of his genius and marvelous power in reading the language of the signs and planets. His horoscope life readings with chart are daily convincing people of the great and VALUABLE INFORMATION to be had through his wonderful knowledge of astrology. He receives letters from every state and territory and his fame has extended into foreign lands.

Under no circumstances will names of correspondents be published, but the following are extracts from recent letters: "I received my horoscope, am much pleased with it. It is as near right as is possible to make it." Another writes: "I am surprised at its correctness."

Prof. Cunningham now proposes to tell your ruling planet and send a test reading ABSOLUTELY FREE to the applicants whose letters happen to be the First, Third, Ninth and Twelfth opened from each day's mail. All aspirants for these FREE READINGS must send: sex, race or nationality, place, year, month, date, hour and minute of birth, A. M. or P. M., as near as possible. Applicants entitled to FREE READINGS will receive them by return mail with their 24 cents refunded less 2 cents postage. All applicants must send 24 cents to pay for their reading in case they do not win FREE reading. DO NOT DELAY; send at once; you are just as apt to win as anybody, and if you do not, you will receive a valuable test by astrology for the small sum of 24 cents. Those not knowing their time of birth should send 4 cents for further instructions. Address:

PROF. G. W. CUNNINGHAM,

Dept. 4, 194 S. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE FOLLOWING ARE SOME READINGS FOR THIS WEEK:

Miss E. B., Kokomo, Ind. According to the data furnished, the Zodiacal Sign Gemini, which Mercury rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Mercury is your ruling planet or significator.

You are above medium height; straight, slender figure; dark complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes have a peculiar sparkle, sharp sight and quick, restless movement. You belong to that class of people from which comes our most brilliant scholars, teachers, lawyers, writers, etc.; your horoscope is of a kind that shows a life of considerable struggle and anything that you wish to do that will bring you financial returns would require great effort and the success, when reched, would be after disappointments and annoyances. You are not appreciated to the extent your ability should command. Marriage is not more than average fortunate.

Pansy D. Morrow. According to the data furnished the Zodiacal Sign Virgo, which Mercury ruled, was rising at your birth, therefore Mercury is your ruling planet or significator.

You are above medium height; slender figure, but well proportioned; medium to dark complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes are quite expressive and have a quick, restless movement and appearance. You are much inclined to intellectual pursuits and prefer those kind of topics in your usual conversation. You are very skeptical, yet take delight in investigating the occult and mysterious in order to know the truth. You are ambitious, industrious and a leader in anything you become interested in. The last half of life will be more successful than the first. You did not get the finished education such as you were capable of taking, there was always something to prevent it. You will soon be under an evil transit of Mars, a few months later a fortunate transit of Jupiter.

We think as a rule our readers who are conducting a general farming operations and keep a herd of dairy cows will find it more profitable to sell milk to a good creamery, providing one is within reasonable distance, than to make up the butter at home. Those, however, who have but a small piece of land which is mostly needed for pasture for the cows and who consequently can give the major part of their time to the dairy proper, can build up a very profitable business by making their own butter and working up a retail market for it.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Never send a man out to ask favors unless he is given power to make pledges.

Things that people do not know concerning themselves are generally the most important.

Nearly all of the aldermen in Louisville, Ky., have been arrested. They are charged with being too prosperous.

Next to an ungreased wheelbarrow there are few noises more excruciating than the wail of a man who has lost his grip.

Fifty per cent of the non-supported wives of New York were married in their teens. The showing is not encouraging for early marriages.

Edison has made a new discovery by the use of which a surgeon can see all of the organs and tissues of the human body. We will soon know just what ails us.

The liability of an express company is thus stated in a recent decision of the New York Supreme court, appellate term: No limitation of liability for negligence contained in a shipping contract can affect an express company's liability for the full value of goods lost to the consignee by the affirmative wrongful act of the agent intrusted with them.

The government has to pay a large sum of money for a single discharge of one of the immense guns now being placed in coast defences. There might be a contingency when it would be far more expensive not to fire the gun; while no one could well estimate the possible cost of having no guns to fire. A coast thoroughly protected means also an interior well guarded.

A noted newspaper man who died in St. Louis a few weeks ago, in the prime of life, was sometimes called the inventor of the newspaper interview. Certainly he was the first to make a feature of that form of news. Rightly used, the interview is an effective way of getting, and an interesting way of presenting, facts and opinions; but no other device of journalism has been more abused.

In a published letter describing his shipwreck, Stephen Crane, the novelist, has thrown school teachers into spasms with this piece of bad English: "Being an inexperienced filibuster, the writer had undergone considerable mental excitement since the starting of the ship, and consequently he had not been to sleep, and so I went to the first mate's bunk to indulge myself in all the physical delights of holding oneself in bed."

Mixed farming as a principle has been impressed on the people of Florida by the freeze of two years ago. If they take the lesson to heart, the disaster will not have been in vain. A correspondent of a Chicago paper, writing from Florida, says: Thoughtful people now agree that "the great freeze of '95" was a good thing for Florida—a blessing in disguise. It was a costly lesson, however. A hundred thousand citizens, more or less, paid $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 to find out that the "frost line" that had been recognized since the "cold winter of '32" was not permanent and was likely to be changed, like railway time-tables, without previous notice. They were taught that it was not good policy to put all their eggs in one basket, and that the single-crop plan of farming was a failure. Many were discouraged and left the state. Those who had more courage and wisdom remained, and while they were resuscitating their frozen groves they discovered they could make money by truck farming—by raising peas, beans, cabbages, cauliflower, lettuce, celery, onions, cucumbers, potatoes, strawberries and other fruits and vegetables for the northern winter markets. The demand for this sort of produce during the winter months is practically unlimited, and the prices unnaturally large. It costs no more to raise a bushel of potatoes in this warm, sandy soil in December than in July. The supply of unseasonable vegetables formerly came from Bermuda and the Bahamas. "The great freeze" taught the farmers of Florida that they could have a monopoly from December to March, when the early crops of southern Georgia are ready for market. So the wise ones stopped boasting about profits of $2,500 an acre from orange groves. They stopped telling the familiar story about "$1 a box for oranges on the plantation, twenty-five boxes to the tree and 100 trees to the acre—all clear gain," and began to plant and weed vegetables, which are not so profitable as oranges, but are reasonably certain of paying.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

SUIT AGAINST THE MILWAUKEE

Council Bluffs Firm Sues the Company for $150,000 Damages.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Feb. 25.—Trial notice has been filed in the federal court in the case of Deere, Wells & Co. against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company. The railroad company is one of the defendants in a damage suit brought by Deere, Wells & Co. for destruction of their warehouses by fire two years ago. The implement company alleges that the fire was started through the carelessness of some of the employes of the railway company while burning a lot of waste paper on their premises on the opposite side of the street. It was a very windy evening, and it is contended that the railway employes permitted the wind to carry blazing paper across the street, lodge beneath the platform of the plaintiff's building and start a fire that destroyed nearly $150,000 worth of property. The suit agalnst the company includes nearly all of the losses paid by the insurance companies. The case will be tried at the March term of court.

CLAIMS A PART OF THE ESTATE

Cordelia M. Holmes Trying to Break A. L. Connable's Will.

KEOKUK, Feb. 27.—Cordelia M. Holmes, of Batavia, has filed a claim in probate for $70,000, or one-fourth of the estate of the late Albert Lee Connable, of Keokuk. Suit is brought against William Ballinger and A. J. Mathis as executors. She claims that in 1856, when she was 9 years old, Mr. Connable made a contract with her that if she would enter his family as one of his children and would obey and serve him she would fare as one of them and that he would give her at his death a share in his estate equally with them. This agreement, she says, has been broken by his making a will which ignores her. Deceased left three sons and she would be entitled under contract to one-fourth of the estate. She asks that the will be set aside and modified so as to give her an interest of one-fourth. Connable was one of Keokuk's wealthiest citizens.

NEW TRIAL ASKED.

Motion Made in the Case of Chris Eckerlebe, Convicted of Murder.

CLINTON, Feb. 26.—At the last moment possible a motion for a new trial for Chris Eckerlebe, convicted of the murder of Mina Kiel and condemned to death, was filed. The motion is based upon the statement that the verdict is contrary to law and evidence, alleged errors in admission of evidence, misconduct on part of counsel for the state, and alleged misconduct on the part of the jury. Judge Wolfe has deferred sentence, and the motion will be argued in a few days.

SUES THE STATE.

Proprietor of Okoboji Mills Wants the New Dam Removed.

MILFORD, Feb. 28.—Dan Guthrie, proprietor of the Okoboji mills, has commenced suit against the state to remove the dam that has just been completed at the outlet of the Okoboji lake, claiming that it stops the natural flow of water from the mills.

More Than a Mile a Minute.

WEBSTER CITY, Feb. 27.—While out on his run on the Lake City branch of the Northwestern, Engineer Bates, of Lake City, received word by wire at Onawa that his wife, who had been ill, while in a fit of mental aberration had thrown herself into the cistern and was dead. The division superintendant, upon learning, of it promptly gave Bates the pivilege of cutting his engine loose from the freight train he was pulling and making the best possible time home. The distance is eighty-five miles and he made the trip in seventy-minutes.

Indicted for Bigamy.

DES MOINES, Feb. 28.—J. E. Colgan has been indicted on a charge of bigamy. He came to Des Moines a little over a month ago and brought with him his wife. Shortly after his arrival he commenced calling on May Anderson, a girl who resided on Elm street, and in the latter part of January he was married to her. When he discovered his wife knew the facts and was after him, he made his escape for the time being, but was finally located in Omaha and returned to Des Moines to stand trial.

Rival Iowa Orators.

OSKALOOSA, Feb. 25.—The Iowa Intercollegiate Oratorical contest was held here. Miss Alice Starbuck of Penn college, won the first place; Thos. Osborn, of Wesleyan college, second, and Sydney Heald, of Cornell, third.

Manufacturing Bill May Pass.

DES MOINES, Feb. 26.—The house committee for the suppression of intemperance, by a vote of 10 to 5, decided to recommend for passage a bill legalizing the manufacture of intoxicating liquors in Iowa.

MURDER AT PAYNE.

Ernest Hern Fatally Shot by a Neighbor, Don Chapman.

OMAHA, March 1.—At Payne, Ia., a small town on the banks of the Missouri river forty miles below Omaha, Ernest Hern, a nephew of Millionaire Moses U. Payne, whose extensive ranch he was managing, was killed by a farmer named Don Chapman who made a slighting remark concerning a school teacher with whom Hern was keeping company. Hern demanded an apology, but Chapman reiterated his statement. Hern reached for his revolver, but Chapman shot first, killing Hern almost immediately. Chapman surrendered to the authorities.

A SERIOUS FIRE AT GRAVITY.

Four Business Houses Destroyed at a Loss of $20,000.

VAN WERT, Feb. 27.—The town of Gravity, on the Humeston & Shenandoah railway, was visited by fire at 2:15 a. m., and before the flames could be subdued, four store buildings, aggregating a value of $20,000, were totally destroyed. T. J. McColm's drug store and J. Baldwin's grocery store were completely destroyed. The fire is said to have originated in a back room. Fully three-fourths of the loss is covered by insurance.

Swapped Partners.

OSKALOOSA, Feb. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stafford and Mr. and Mrs. David Barnes, who lived near Carbondale, came to Oskaloosa in one wagon and by default secured divorces on the ground of adultery. Immediately afterwards Mr. Barnes and Mrs. Stafford were married, Stafford swearing to the affidavit. It is understood that Mr. Stafford and Mrs. Barnes are also to be married.

Verdict for $1,000.

ATLANTIC, Feb. 27.—In the malpractice case of Richard Henderson vs. Dr. Rope, of Anita, in which the plaintiff asked for $2,000 damages, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, allowing him $1,000. The case will no doubt be carried to the supreme court.

Judge Cole Guilty.

DES MOINES, Feb. 25.—Judge C. C. Cole has been found guilty in police court of cruelty to animals in checking his horse too high. He will appeal.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Des Moines will bring suit against several ex-city officials to recover money alleged to have been misappropriated by them.

Gov. Drake has appointed a commission to take charge of the work of soliciting relief for the starving and plague stricken poor of India.

At Ft. Madison recently James Scott, who fired four loads of shot into the person of Frank Milmeier, had a preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $1,000. Milmeier is still in a dangerous condition.

At Newton recently J. H. Jordan, who was cashier of the Jordan bank of Baxter, which made an assignment last spring, and who was indicted on three charges, two of fraudulent banking and one of obtaining money under false pretenses, changed his plea of not guilty to guilty of fraudulent banking before Judge A. R. Dewey. Jordan was sentenced to six months in jail.

Des Moines dispatch: It is quietly given out that one of the most sensational features of the legislative session can be looked for soon. It is the introduction of an amendment to the penal statutes, by which it will be made a crime for any state officer, supreme or district judge, member of the legislature, or attache of the legislature to ask, solicit, or receive any railway mileage, pass, ticket or other free transportation; or any telegraph or express franks or other favors at the hands of corporations of public character. This is in substance the New York law. On both sides of the pit a good deal of sentiment has been worked up in favor of it, in a quiet way, and members of both houses have agreed to support it.

Judge Thomas, of Humboldt county, has decided the famous Owl Lake case in favor of George R. Pearsons, who drained the lake and received title from the county. Attorney General Remley intervened in a private suit to assert the claim of the state to the land or the lake as it was. The court holds that inasmuch as the state applied to the secretary of the interior, submitted proofs and had the land patented to the state as a swamp, it cannot now deny that it was swamp and claim it in its sovereign capacity, as it seeks to do. The land was patented to the state and by it to the county, which made a contract with Pearsons, by which he drained it and received several thousand acres of land in payment. The object of the state's intervention is to protect the lakes of the state for the use of the people. Judge Thomas intimates in his opinion that there may be an appeal from the decision of the secretary of the interior in the federal courts. Attorney General Remley says he will appeal to the state and United States supreme courts.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

CANEA, Feb. 22.—The powers have again taken action against the Grecian policy. Yesterday morning the Cretan insurgents began a galling fire upon the Turkish forts. The latter returned the compliment and the fighting became fast and furious. The representatives of the powers whose vessels lay in the harbor warned the insurgents that unless they ceased firing the guns of the combined fleets would be turned upon them. The insurgents only increased their activity. Soon thereafter a shot came from an Austrian gunboat. The firing from the boats of the other powers followed shortly. The effect was withering and the insurgents took flight. Later the admirals issued a warning to Colonel Vassos, who leads the Grecian invaders, that if he should attempt to advance to the interior of the island the powers will attack his troops.

BERLIN, Feb. 23.—The Lokal Anzeiger is authority for the statement that the king of Greece has sent a telegram to Christian IX, king of Denmark, to the effect that he had decided to sail for Crete to take command of the Greek forces there.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—A dispatch to the Chronicle says. "It is believed it has been decided to call out three more classes of the reserves. It is impossible for the king of Greece to draw back. If he should do so, there would be neither crown nor government within twenty-four hours."

PARIS, Feb. 23. -A dispatch from Athens says that Greece has declared that if the bombardment of insurgents' positions in the island of Crete is repeated, she will break off diplomatic relations with the powers. It is also stated that the Turkish minister at Athens threatens that Turkey will break off her relations unless the Greek troops are withdrawn from Crete.

CANEA, Feb. 25.—The governor's palace, with all the archives, has been burned. The fire is believed to have started from an accident. The burning of the palace destroys the last vestige of the machinery of the Turkish government. Whatever may be the future of the government a process akin to the sponging of a slate and starting afresh must be resorted to.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Discontent is rapidly growing among the masses in respect to the policy of the government toward Crete. The liberals are furious and their newspapers are making violent appeals to the passions of the people. The Daily Chronicle strongly urges the masses to agitate at all lengths against the government, and Jerome K. Jerome's paper, To-day, says that the Marquis of Salisbury is no Englishman.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—In the house of lords Lord Salisbury announced that a telegram had been sent to the British representative at the capital of each of the combined European powers, the phraseology of which was as follows:

Inform the government to which you are accredited that her majesty's government propose to make the following declaration of the policy they intend to pursue, which they believe to be in accordance with that of their allies: First, the establishment of administrative autonomy in Crete is necessary to the termination of international occupation of that island. Second, that subject to such system of administrative autonomy, Crete ought to remain a portion of the Turkish empire. Third, that the government of Greece ought to be informed of this resolution. Fourth, that if either Turkey or Greece should persist in a refusal when required to withdraw her naval and military forces from the island, the powers should impose their decision by force.

SALONICA, Feb. 27.—The massing of Turkish troops and munitions of war on the frontier is proceeding with feverish haste. All soldiers on a furlough have been recalled. Eleven batteries of artillery, a regiment of cavalry and two battalions of infantry have gone to Elassona. Two additional battalions of infantry have reached Katerina. Redifs from Smyrna, Brusa, Trebizonde and elsewhere in Anatolia are on the way here and to the frontier, where a total of six divisions will be formed, with headquarters at Ellassona.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Athens correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Prime Minister Delyannis has informed him that Greece's decision to maintain her army in Crete is irrevocable, but that the troops will abstain from the offensive. They will only protect the Christians. Greece will not declare war against Turkey unless the Turks invade Thessaly or the powers render the position of the Greek troops in Crete unbearable.

PARIS, March 1.—The following semi-official statement has been issued: "All the powers have instructed their representatives at Constantinople and at Athens to agree upon the terms of a note to be sent to the two governments, based upon Russia's and the marquis of Salisbury's proposals."

PARIS, March 1.—Reports are current here and elsewhere in Europe that if the powers insist on Greece evacuating Crete, King George will abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Constantine.

SPAIN BROUGHT TO TIME.

Sufficient Pressure Brought on the Dr. Ruiz Case.

HAVANA, Feb. 25.—General Lee referred the Ruiz case to Secretary Olney, with his suggestions, and what he had learned. It is reported that Secretary Olney told him that he was right, and to go ahead. This he did with a persistence that won him the day. Spanish officials allowed the body to be taken up, the remains were taken to Guanabacoa, and it is understood the post-mortem was performed in the office of Major Frondeveilla, Weyler's "assistant butcher," as he is called by the Cubans. General Lee and several others connected with the consulate were present, and a dozen Spanish officers. An American physician was in attendance, but he was not permitted to do any of the work. The post-mortem did not show or prove any murder, but it did not prove that Dr. Ruiz committed suicide; in fact, all the suppositions were against it. But the Spanish officers hurried it through and thought that Lee would be satisfied. It is stated that the conversation between Lee and the Spanish officers was not at all times up to the "polite" limit, as General Lee was greatly vexed over their indifference. He told them what he thought of the matter, and they parted not on the best of terms. When he arrived at Havana it is said that Gen. Lee wired Secretary Olney that there are many Americans in Cuban prisons who cannot secure a fair trial and that the United States should act promptly in demanding their release. It is said that he politely informed the secretary that unless his ideas could receive endorsement he would resign.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Secretary Olney received a cable from Consul General Lee saying that Sanguilly has been released.

M'COOK DECLINES.

Will Not Accept a Place in McKinley's Cabinet.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A dispatch from Canton, O., says: "There is no longer any question that Col. J. J. McCook, of New York, has absolutely declined to accept any position in the cabinet except attorney general. It was the impression that New York would not be represented in the cabinet, but influential republicans have been telegraphing recommending A. B. Hepburn for secretary of the interior." Mr. Hepburn was formerly comptroller of the currency and is now president of the Third National bank.

MEXICAN MINING HORROR.

Nearly Two Hundred Men Thought to Have Perished.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 1.—A terrible mining catastrophe occurred at Sombrerete mine at Zacecas, occasioned by the breaking out of fire in the working of the company's mines, in which 175 miners were employed at the time of the fire. Every effort has been made to save the men, and fresh air is being forced into all the workings by great steam ventilators and water has been turned down the mine shaft in torrents, but it is believed that every miner is dead.

CUBA ANSWERS.

Will Not Accept Autonomy, But Would Purchase Freedom.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Advices from Cuba are to the effect that the Cubans in arms have in reply to Spain's offer of autonomy, declined positively to accept anything else than absolute independence. Refusing this, they are still willing to enter upon negotiations for the purchase of the island and suggest that the United States intervene as arbitrator or extend their friendly offices toward the proposed negotiations. These statements are signed by Gomez and bear the seal of the republic of Cuba.

GOMEZ IS ADVANCING.

Marching Into Matanzas With View to Giving Battle to the Spanish.

HAVANA, Feb. 27.—It is reported that Gomez, after successfully crossing Weyler's lines near Sancti Spiritus, was last heard from passing near Manicaraqua, south of Santa Clara city, with 4,000 men marching west. It is presumed that he will gather more force in that province previous to invading Matanzas. After attacking all the sugar estates which have been grinding against his will, it is expected that he will force the Spaniards to an attack on his chosen ground.

BREVITIES.

Washington dispatch: President Cleveland has issued thirteen executive proclamations, establishing thirteen additional forest reservations, containing an aggregate area of 21,379,840 acres. The proclamations except lands which may have been, prior to their date, embraced in any legal entry, or covered by any lawful filing duly of record in the proper United States land office, or upon which any valid settlement has been made pursuant to law. The reservations are located in South Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, California and Utah.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"WINGS OF SERAPHIM" LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text: "With Twain He Covered His Face, With Twain He Covered His Feet, and with Twain He Did Fly"—Isaiah 6:2.

IN A hospital of leprosy good King Uzziah had died, and the whole land was shadowed with solemnity, and theological and prophetic Isaiah was thinking about religious things, as one is apt to do in time of great national bereavement, and forgetting the presence of his wife and two sons who made up his family, he has a dream, not like the dreams of ordinary character, which generally come from indigestion, but a vision most instructive, and under the touch of the hand of the Almighty.

The place, the ancient temple: building grand, awful, majestic. Within that temple a throne higher and grander than that occupied by any czar or sultan or emperor. On that throne, the eternal Christ. In lines surrounding that throne, the brightest celestials, not the cherubim, but higher than they, the most exquisite and radiant of the heavenly inhabitants: the seraphim. They are called burners because they look like fire. Lips of fire, eyes of fire, feet of fire. In addition to the features and the limbs which suggest a human being, there are pinions, which suggest the lithest, the swiftest, the most buoyant and the most aspiring of all unintelligent creation—a bird. Each seraph had six wings, each two of the wings for a different purpose. Isaiah's dream quivers and flashes with these pinions. Now folded, now spread, now beaten in locomotion. "With twain he covered his feet, with twain he covered his face, and with twain he did fly."

The probability is that these wings were not all used at once. The seraph standing there near the throne overwhelmed at the insignificance of the paths his feet had trodden as compared with the paths trodden by the feet of God, and with the lameness of his locomotion amounting almost to decrepitude as compared with the divine velocity, with feathery veil of angelic modesty hides the feet. "With twain he did cover the feet."

Standing there overpowered by the overmatching splendors of God's glory, and unable longer with the eyes to look upon them, and wishing those eyes shaded from the insufferable glory, the pinions gather over the countenance. "With twain he did cover the face." Then as God tells this seraph to go to the farthest outpost of immensity on message of light and love and joy, and get back before the first anthem, it does not take the seraph a great while to spread himself upon the air with unimagined celerity, one stroke of the wing equal to ten thousand leagues of air. "With twain he did fly."

The most practical and useful lesson for you and me—when we see the seraph spreading his wings over the feet, is the lesson of humility at imperfection. The brightest angels of God are so far beneath God that he charges them with folly. The seraph so far beneath God, and we so far beneath the seraph in service we ought to be plunged in humility, utter and complete. Our feet, how laggard they have been in the divine service. Our feet, how many missteps they have taken. Our feet, in how many paths of worldliness and folly they have walked.

Neither God nor seraph intended to put any dishonor upon that which is one of the masterpieces of Almighty God—the human foot. Physiologist and anatomist are overwhelmed at the wonders of its organization. The Bridgewater Treatise, written by Sir Charles Bell, on the wisdom and goodness of God as illustrated in the human hand, was a result of the $40,000 bequeathed in the last will and testament of the Earl of Bridgewater for the encouragement of Christian literature. The world could afford to forgive his eccentricities, though he had two dogs seated at his table, and though he put six dogs alone in an equipage drawn by four horses and attended by two footmen. With his large bequest inducing Sir Charles Bell to write so valuable a book on the wisdom of God in the structure of the human hand, the world could afford to forgive his oddities. And the world could now afford to have another Earl of Bridgewater, however idiosyncratic, if he would induce some other Sir Charles Bell to write a book on the wisdom and goodness of God in the construction of the human foot. The articulation of its bones, the lubrication of its joints, the gracefulness of its lines, the ingenuity of its cartilages, the delicacy of its veins, the rapidity of its muscular contraction, the sensitiveness of its nerves.

I sound the praises of the human foot. With that we halt or climb or march. It is the foundation of the physical fabric. It is the base of a God-poised column. With it the warrior braces himself for battle. With it the orator plants himself for eulogium. With it the toiler reaches his work. With it the outraged stamps his indignation. Its loss an irreparable disaster. Its health an invaluable equipment. If you want to know its value, ask the man whose foot paralysis hath shriveled, or machinery hath crushed, or surgeon's knife hath amputated. The Bible honors it. Especial care: "Lest thou dash thy foot against a stone;" "he will not suffer thy foot to be moved;" "thy feet shall not stumble." Especial charge: "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God." Especial peril: "Their feet shall slide in due time." Connected with the world's dissolution: "He shall set one foot on the sea and the other on the earth."

Give me the history of your foot, and I will give you the history of your lifetime. Tell me up what steps it hath gone, down what declivities, and in what roads and in what directions, and I will know more about you than I want to know. None of us could endure the scrutiny. Our feet not always in paths of God. Sometimes in paths of worldliness. Our feet, a divine and glorious machinery for usefulness and work, so often making missteps, so often going in the wrong direction. God knowing every step, the patriarch saying, "Thou settest a print on the heels of my feet." Crimes of the hand, crimes of the tongue, crimes of the eye, crimes of the ear not worse than crimes of the foot. Oh, we want the wings of humility to cover the feet. Ought we not to go into self-abnegation before the all-searching, all-scrutinizing, all-trying eye of God? The seraphs do. How much more we? "With twain he covered the feet."

All this talk about the dignity of human nature is braggadocio and sin. Our nature started at the hand of God regal, but it has been pauperized. There is a well in Belgium which once had very pure water, and it was stoutly masoned with stone and brick; but that well afterward became the center of the battle of Waterloo. At the opening of the battle the soldiers with their sabers compelled the gardener, William Von Kylsom, to draw water out of the well for them, and it was very pure water. But the battle raged, and three hundred dead and half dead were flung into the well for quick and easy burial; so that the well of refreshment became the well of death, and long after, people looked down into the well and they saw the bleached skulls but no water. So the human soul was a well of good, but the armies of sin have fought around it, and fought across it and been slain, and it has become a well of skeletons. Dead hopes, dead resolutions, dead opportunities, dead ambitions. An abandoned well unless Christ shall reopen and purify and fill it as the well of Belgium never was. Unclean, unclean.

Another seraphic posture in the text: "With twain he covered the face." That means reverence Godward. Never so much irreverence abroad in the world as to-day. You see it in the defaced statuary, in the cutting out of figures from fine paintings, in the chipping of monuments for a memento, in the fact that military guard must stand at the grave of Lincoln and Garfield, and that old shade trees must be cut down for firewood, though fifty George P. Morrises beg the woodmen to spare the tree, and that calls a corpse a cadaver, and that speaks of death as going over to the majority, and substitutes for the reverent terms father and mother, "the old man" and "the old woman," and finds nothing impressive in the ruins of Baalbec or the columns of Karnac, and sees no difference in the Sabbath from other days except it allows more dissipation, and reads the Bible in what is called higher criticism, making it not the Word of God but a good book with some fine things in it. Irreverence never so much abroad. How many take the name of God in vain, how many trivial things said about the Almighty. Not willing to have God in the world, they roll up an idea of sentimentality and humanitarianism and impudence and imbecility, and call it God. No wings of reverence over the face, no taking off of shoes on holy ground. You can tell from the way they talk they could have made a better world than this, and that the God of the Bible shocks every sense of propriety. They talk of the love of God in a way that shows you they believe it does not make any difference how bad a man is here, he will come in at the shining gate. They talk of the love of God in a way which shows you they think it is a general jail delivery for all the abandoned and the scoundrelly of the universe. No punishment hereafter for any wrong done here.

The Bible gives two descriptions of God, and they are just opposite, and they are both true. In one place the Bible says God is love. In another place the Bible says God is a consuming fire. The explanation is plain as plain can be. God through Christ is love. God out of Christ is fire. To win the one and to escape the other we have only to throw ourselves body, mind and soul into Christ's keeping. "No," says Irreverence, "I want no atonement, I want no pardon, I want no intervention; I will go up and face God, and I will challenge him, and will defy him, and I will ask him what he wants to do with me." So the finite confronts the infinite, so a tack hammer tries to break a thunder bolt, so the breath of human nostril defies the everlasting God, while the hierarchs of heaven bow the head and bend the knee as the King's chariot goes by, and the archangel turns away because he cannot endure the splendor and the chorus of all the empires of heaven comes in with full diapason "Holy, holy, holy!"

Reverence for sham, reverence for the old merely because it is old, reverence for stupidity, however learned reverence for incapacity however finely inaugurated, I have none. But we want more reverence for God, more reverence for the sacraments, more reverence for the Bible, more reverence for the pure, more reverence for the good. Reverence a characteristic of all great natures. You hear it in the roll of the master oratorios. You see it in the Raphaels and Titians and Ghirlandajos. You study it in the architecture of the Aholiabs and Christopher Wrens. Do not be flippant about God. Do not joke about death. Do not make fun of the Bible. Do not deride the Eternal. The brightest and mightiest seraph cannot look unabashed upon him. Involuntarily the wings come up. "With twain he covered his face." * * *

As you take a pinch of salt or powder between your thumb and two fingers, so Isaiah indicates God takes up the earth. He measures the dust of the earth, the original there indicating that God takes all the dust of all the continents between the thumb and two fingers. You wrap around your hand a blue ribbon five times, ten times. You say it is five hand-breadths, or it is ten hand-breadths. So indicates the prophet God winds the blue ribbon of the sky around his hand. "He meteth out the heavens with a span." You know that balances are made of a beam suspended in the middle with two basins at the extremity of equal heft. In that way what a vast heft has been weighed. But what are all the balances of earthly manipulation compared with the balances that Isaiah saw suspended when he saw God putting into the scales the Alps and the Appenines and Mount Washington and the Sierre Nevadas. You see the earth had to be ballasted. It would not do to have too much weight in Europe, or too much weight in Asia, or too much weight in Africa, or in America; so when God made the mountains he weighed them. The Bible distinctly says so. God knows the weight of the great ranges that cross the continents, the tons, the pounds avoirdupois, the ounces, the grains, the millegrammes—just how much they weighed then, and just how much they weigh now. "He weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance."

See that eagle in the mountain nest. It looks so sick, so ragged-feathered, so worn-out and so half asleep. Is that eagle dying? No. The ornithologist will tell you it is the moulting season with that bird. Not dying, but moulting. You see that Christian sick and weary and worn-out and seeming about to expire on what is called his death-bed. The world says he is dying. I say it is the moulting season for his soul—the body dropping away, the celestial pinions coming on. Not dying, but moulting. Moulting out of darkness and sin and struggle into glory and into God. Why do you not shout? Why do you sit shivering at the thought of death and trying to hold back and wishing you could stay here forever, and speak of departure as though the subject were filled with skeletons and the varnish of coffins, and as though you preferred lame foot to swift wing?

O people of God, let us stop playing the fool and prepare for rapturous flight. When your soul stands on the verge of this life, and there are vast precipices beneath, and sapphired domes above, which way will you fly? Will you swoop or will you soar? Will you fly downward or will you fly upward? Everything on the wing this day bidding us aspire. Holy Spirit on the wing. Angel of the New Covenant on the wing. Time on the wing, flying away from us. Eternity on the wing, flying toward us. Wings, wings, wings!

Live so near to Christ that when you are dead, people standing by your lifeless body will not soliloquize, saying: "What a disappointment life was to him; how averse he was to departure; what a pity it was he had to die; what an awful calamity." Rather standing there may they see a sign more vivid on your still face than the vestiges of pain, something that will indicate that it was a happy exit—the clearance from oppressive quarantine, the cast-off chrysalid, the moulting of the faded and the useless, and the ascent from malarial valleys to bright, shining mountain-tops, and be led to say, as they stand there contemplating your humility and your reverence in life, and your happiness in death: "With twain he covered the feet, with twain he covered the face, with twain he did fly." Wings! Wings! Wings!

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 22.—Rowen introduced a resolution providing for a committee of three to investigate sugar beet culture and furnish information to the general assembly and the press of the state. Carney introduced a resolution for a committee of five senators to investigate state institutions. House bill relating to mines and mining, and bill in regard to procedure to reverse, vacate or modify judgments passed. House resolution urging railroad commissioners to secure reduced rates for transporting corn to market passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 24.—Carney's resolution for a committee to investigate state institutions passed. Sugar beet resolution was referred to committee on agriculture. Bill relating to general assembly came up and house amendments reducing salaries of employes of senate were adopted and the bill passed. Bill relating to sovereignty and jurisdiction of the state also passed. Bill relating to justices of the peace and bill relating to warehouse owners, carriers, etc., passed. Carroll, Alexander, Healy, Craig and Bonson were named as the investigating committee.

HOUSE.

Bill relating to county and township government came up and senate amendment to give cities larger representation on boards of supervisors was defeated. Tax on dogs was doubled. A committee to investigate cost of printing code was authorized.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 24.—Lieutenant-governor named Alexander and Lothrop to act on investigating committee instead of Harriman and Healy. Senate spent some time in consideration of title relating to attachments, garnishments and supplementary proceeding. The Ellis curative bill excepting from penalties special charter cities having complied with mulct law was passed.

HOUSE.

Consideration of bill relating to county and township governments was resumed. An amendment limiting time for which county bonds may run to fifteen years was adopted. Sheriff's compensation in counties of more than 28,000 and less than 45,000 was fixed at $2,000 and in counties of more than 45,000, at $2,500. He shall also be allowed to retain mileage collected in civil cases if the receipts exceed $1,500. Sheriffs in counties of less than 28,000 will receive $1,500. An amendment was adopted requiring weekly reports to supervisors by county treasurers. Bill relating to educational board of examiners passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 25.—Bill providing for establishment of a bureau of labor statistics and bill relating to soldiers' home passed. Bill relating to judicial department up and amendment making office of supreme court reporter appointive after January, 1899, instead of elective was adopted. Bill in relation to attachments, garnishments and supplementary proceedings passed. A motion was filed to reconsider vote by which labor commissioner bill passed. House bill relating to judicial department came up and amendment adopted fixing attorney-general's salary at $4,000.

HOUSE.

Salary of the director of the weather bureau was reduced from $1,500 to $1,200 a year. The Ellis curative act passed. Memorial to congress to pass a law making evidence of any court competent in the case of an application for pension passed. Motion to reconsider resolution from a committee to inyestigate state institutions prevailed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—Senate resumed consideration of the bill in relation to the judicial department. At the morning session no important change was made. Motion to reconsider vote by which labor commissioner bill passed was withdrawn. Salary of the attorney-general's assistant was fixed at $1,200.

HOUSE.

Committee on suppression of intemperance reported an amendment to the mulct liquor law permitting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors. An amendment by Scott relieving manufacturers from the mulct tax, and legalizing the liquor business was defeated. An amendment that the formula of ingredients used in manufacture of liquor be placed on the package passed, 44 to 26. The first section of the bill passed, 50 to 46. The Carney resolution for a committee to investigate state institutions passed, 54 to 41. Consideration of the mulct liquor law was resumed. An amendment was adopted imposing a penalty for each offense where an assessor neglects wilfully to assess the mulct tax against any person who should pay it. Another amendment makes the provisions of the law apply to cities under special charters. The law was also amended so that the board of supervisors must publicly canvass petitions of consent and ascertain their sufficiency, and only one petition may be canvassed in each year. The mulct bill, the first section of which provides for manufacture of liquors, was then passed, 52 to 44.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Feb. 27.—House bill relating to care of insane came up and an amendment cutting the support of the inmates of the asylums from $16 to $14 per capita was adopted. An amendment by Funk making maximum limit of the salary of superintendents of asylums $2,500 per year carried. A bill by Blanchard relative to counties bonding themselves for debts passed. A new section was added to the bill relative to dairy commissioner and imitation dairy products. It provides for reports of milk dealers to the commissioner and the compilation of statistics authorized by the chapter. Adjourned to 2 p. m. Tuesday.

HOUSE.

Bill in relation to notes and bills was taken up and Weaver offered as a substitute for several of its provisions the recommendations of the code uniformity commission of the United States. A vote was not reached. Evans, Hayes and Dowell were appointed a committee to investigate the cost of printing the code. Adjourned to 2 p. m. Tuesday.

The Wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub.

A New Botanical Discovery.—Of Special Interest to Sufferers from Diseases of the Kidneys or Bladder, Rheumatism, etc.—A Blessing to Humanity.

A Free Gift of Great Value to You.

Our readers will be glad to know that the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, from the wonderful Kava-Kava shrub has proved an assured cure for all diseases caused by Uric acid in the blood, or by disordered action of the Kidneys or urinary organs. The Kava-Kava Shrub, or as botanists call it, Piper Methysticum, grows on the banks of the Ganges river, East India, and probably was used for centuries by the natives before its extraordinary properties became known to civilization through Christian missionaries. In this respect it resembles the discovery of quinine from the peruvian bark, made known by the Indians to the early Jesuit missionaries in South America, and by them brought to civilized man. It is a wonderful discovery, with a record of 1200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly upon the blood and kidneys, and is a true specific, just as quinine is in malaria. We have the strongest testimony of many ministers of the gospel, well-known doctors and business men cured by Alkavis, when all other remedies had failed.

THE KAVA-KAVA SHRUB (Piper Methysticum.)

In the New York Weekly World of Sept. 10th, the testimony of Rev. W. B. Moore, D. D., of Washington, D. C., was given, describing his years of suffering from Kidney disease and Rheumatism, and his rapid cure by Alkavis. Rev. Thomas Smith, the Methodist minister at Cobden, Illinois, passed nearly one hundred gravel stones after two weeks' use of Alkavis. Rev. John H. Watson, of Sunset, Texas, a minister of the gospel of thirty years' service, was struck down at his post of duty by Kidney disease. After hovering between life and death for two months, and all his doctors having failed, he took Alkavis, and was completely restored to health and strength, and is fulfilling his duties as minister of the gospel. Mr. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorney of Lowell, Indiana, was cured of Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder disease of ten years standing, by Alkavis. Mr. Wood describes himself as being in constant misery, often compelled to rise ten times during the night on account of weakness of the bladder. He was treated by all his home physicians without the least benefit and finally completely cured in a few weeks by Alkavis. The testimony is undoubted and really wonderful. Mrs. James Young, of Kent, Ohio, writes that she had tried six doctors in vain, that she was about to give up in despair, when she found Alkavis and was promptly cured of kidney disease and restored to health. Many other ladies also testify to the wonderful curative powers of Alkavis in the various disorders peculiar to womanhood.

So far the Church Kidney Cure Company, No. 422 Fourth Avenue, New York, are the only importers of this new remedy, and they are so anxious to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of this paper who is a Sufferer from any form of Kidney or Bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affliction due to improper action of the Kidneys or Urinary Organs. We advise all Sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

Many cases of "Grippe" have lately been cured by One Minute Cough Cure. This preparation seems especially adapted to the cure of this desease. It acts quickly thus preventing serious complications and bad effects in which this disease often leaves the patient. Harr.

DANGERS OF THE GRIP.

The greatest danger from La Grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and chamberlain's cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for La Grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25c and 50c sizes for sale by Harr.

Keeping Cholera In Stock.

Last year we warned our farmers that there was very great danger that choleras would be kept in stock from 1895 and be ready to lay waste and destroy the crop of pigs of 1896. Our warning was entirely unheeded in many cases and the result was that during the summer months the disease developed and destroyed the crop of pigs of 1896, leaving the pigs that passed through the cholera on the farm still unharmed. Worse than all it set up a source of infection to the herds of the whole neighborhood.

There in no necessity whatever for keeping the cholera in stock. The last year has given us enough of that and certainly we have suffered enough to have learned wisdom. Cholera can be kept in stock wherever straw stacks. logs, brush and rubbish generally are allowed to remain in the yard and around which hogs have died of the desease. Straw stacks should be torn apart and allowed to become thoroughly rotted and hauled to the field, or, where it can be safely burned. There is no purifier equal to fire. The same treatment should be given old brush heaps. Logs and rubbish should be burned and the yards cleaned up. It would be far better to tear down an old feeding place clean out the manure thoroughly from under it, and allow sun light, which is the best of all disinfectants, to have free access to every part. The boards should be scrubbed with diluted sulphuric or carbolic acid or some other disinfectant, and where this can not be done the floor should be covered with freshly slacked lime and over this might be sprinkled carbolic acid. All dead hogs should be burned, and in fact, every precaution taken to get rid of the germs and start in 1897 with a clean bill of health.

The family physician will very gladly suggest to any one the cheapest disinfactants and germ destroyers and the best methods of cleaning up the yards.

CHAPTER XVIII.

HE came to Jules one day with a trembling lip:

"Jules the last water cask is empty. I supposed it was full. It must have leaked out long ago."

"How much is there left?" asked Jules.

Her voice shook.

"Not 'twice can the ewer be filled. Oh, Jules!"

"Nay, dear one, I can fill it up to-night. Do you know the exact locality of the spring?"

"I remember visiting it once or twice. I must pause a moment before I can tell you its direction from this spot. But it frightens me to think of your attempting such a dangerous feat."

"It is vitally necessary, if we remain here, which seems the best thing left us, until our provisions fail us, or we are convinced there is no hope of Emile's appearance."

"If it must be I consent; but upon one condition—I shall accompany you, Jules."

"My precious Chlotilde, not for the world."

"I insist upon it. Whatever happens to you I must share it with you; besides, I can recognize the spring at once, and you might search a long time for it."

"My beloved one, let me brave this little danger alone. What would Emile say to me if he knew I allowed you to venture out so far?"

"It does not matter; you shall allow it; you yield to it because there is no help for it. I should follow at all events."

"But it is not immediately necessary. We will be as prudent as possible, and Emile may yet arrive," replied Jules, resolved to sally forth secretly.

Lady Felicie put the vessel of water carefully aside, saying wistfully:

"It must not be before us to tempt us. How perverse in me! I was never so thirsty in my life!"

Jules deliberately poured out a glass and held it toward her.

"You shall not deny yourself while there is so much left to us."

She sipped it slowly.

"If we were to have no more, how much more precious than our pearls and diamonds would be the tiniest drop," said she, and handed it back only half empty.

"Now I must return to my post, and learn how near the sentinels approach us. Can it be possible for them to hear our voices when above us!"

"I think not, or Emile would have warned us."

"Oh, invaluable, allwise Emile! what detains him!" groaned Jules, as he clambered up the stairway.

No sign came of any human presence throughout the day, and much emboldened by the circumstance, Jules took a pitcher and small pail and started forth as soon as evening came.

Lady Felicie followed silently behind him, notwithstanding his entreaty to the contrary.

They passed along softly, with the utmost caution, pausing every few steps to listen for any sound of alarm.

All was profound stillness, save that now and then a dry leaf dropped from a bough, or a bird with heavy wing thurred through the branches.

The spring was just a little way from the trodden pathway. It lay in its mossy bed like an inky mirror, with just one ripple of silver where a star beam from above slid through the canopy of leaves and gave it a tender kiss.

The trembling pair gave a sigh of relief. Jules hastily knelt down and dipped the pitcher into it. He turned and held it up to Chlotilde's lips. Draught of nectar from the very cup of Titania was outrivaled by the refreshing coolness of the water.

Neither ventured to speak, but their hearts beat with joyful relief. Jules filled the pail to the brim and Chlotilde took the pitcher. She tripped lightly before him to open the door.

He spoke suddenly and sharply.

"Hurry, Chlotilde! go at once!"

She obeyed with a quick rush of terror, for she also caught the sound of hurrying steps, and gaining the tree, stood waiting his approach.

There came to her from the gloom of the shadowed pathway a fierce oath, a scuffle, and shout for help.

Setting down the pitcher hastily, the girl bent out of the tree with white lips and horror-stricken eyes.

A quick rush of frantic steps—but whose? the companion of her hidden home of refuge, or the cruel spy? She could not stir, but stood paralyzed.

It was Jules. He dashed up to her, thrust her into the little room with impetuous haste, and closed the door.

The movement upset the pitcher, the precious water was lost, not a drop remained; for in his struggle with the man who had pounced upon him, Jules had dropped the bucket.

Then shivering and repressing the very sound of breathing, the pair listened to the eager talk going on outside, as a group of the sentinels gathered together in bewildered astonishment.

"This is certainly witchcraft!" ejaculated one.

"He was here a moment ago, and now he has gone. Peste! has he wings like a bird, or legs like a squirrel? It is always here, in this spot, that the villain disappears. Captain Pierre must hear of this. What a wise man he is; in spite of all our doubts he declared they were in this forest, and so I venture to declare we shall find it."

"Beat up the bushes over there!" cried out another; "let's drag him out to-night, and earn the reward."

They went tramping all about the spot, and one struck his heavy pike against the tree trunk, making the girl spring back wildly.

Jules took her hand in both his, and held it firmly; the darkness concealed his quivering lip and flashing eye.

But presently the men were tired hunting over the vacant ground, and they dispersed to their separate stations.

Jules led his silent companion down to the lower room. She turned and threw herself into his arms with a sob of anguish.

"Jules, Jules, we shall perish together! there is a little comfort in that thought."

His breast was heaving. Too well he knew how little hope there was, even of such a melancholy end. He had learned enough from Emile, to feel convinced that she would be torn away from him at once.

"Yes, they will certainly mark the spot well. They will dig for traces of a secret passage; you heard them sounding the tree. Oh, that we had remained quiet. We have not even a glass of water to atone for the mishap."

They said nothing more concerning their apprehensions, but made no attempt at cheerfulness, and sat hand clasped in hand in utter silence.

Slowly and sadly wore away the night, and the next day. Neither could touch food, but their feverish thirst seemed to increase, as the precious water disappeared. By another nightfall there remained but a single wineglass full.

"Drink it, Chlotilde!" exclaimed Jules, bitterly, as he saw her eyes dwell upon it wistfully; "by another day it will be of no consequence. That Pierre has been examining the place himself; he has ordered them to commence felling the trees by the morning light."

Lady Felicie clasped her hands, and her white lips moved prayerfully—then she said tremulously:

"M. Pierre! oh, Jules! shoot me with your pistol before you allow me to fall into his hands."

"Chlotilde, let us try to escape from the forest to-night, rather than be dragged forth by their triumphant hands."

"But whither shall we go?" asked she, sorrowfully.

He groaned in anguish.

"Whither, indeed! oh, Emile, Monsieur Emile, what has become of you?"

The words had hardly passed his lips ere a step was heard on the rude stairs leading to the secret door above.

They sprang up with cheeks growing still more ashy white, and turned wild glances to the aperture. Had their persevering enemy at last discovered the secret passage to them?

Hastily came the intruder downward—the lofty head stooped to clear the beam and then—oh, joy! oh, transport! they beheld the pale, excited, but triumphant face of Emile!

With a glad cry, Felicie fell down at his feet. His tears mingled with hers, as he raised her in his arms.

"My child, my beloved one! you are safe; I feared to find you completely prostrated, if yet alive."

Jules seized his hand in a transport of delight.

He gave them a few moments to relieve their excitement, then produced from the bundle he had brought, two disguises, both for peasants of the humblest class.

"Do not delay a second beyond what is absolutely necessary, but put them on at once, and take every valuable that you can conceal. The diamonds I will secrete on my own person."

Neither asked him a single question; but trusting him implicitly, gave thought only to thorough obedience.

In a few moments they were ready.

Emile quietly took a powder from his pocket and rubbed it over the pale faces and hands; he gave to Jules a different shade of hair by a powerful liquid, and concealed the silky tresses of Felicie by a most unbecoming mantle twisted in turban fashion.

"Come now," said he, taking them each by the hand.

Still though their hearts beat anxiously, neither asked a single question. This implicit trust moved Emile, deeply; but he closed the door of the faithful tree which had protected them so long, and led them on in silence.

Jules looked around him with a wistful glance. Where were the sentinels? At least no sign of them was visible.

Unmolested they gained the outskirts. Emile pausing a moment, gazed all around him.

"It is well," murmured he; "Jean has not failed me. Now let us move swiftly, nor lose the propitious moment."

"The sentinels are removed!" exclaimed Jules, in utter astonishment.

"They are lying senseless on the ground," replied Emile, "a faithful fellow has carried them wine well drugged, and has taken it himself, to remove suspicion of his instrumentality in the affair. M. Pierre is welcome to dig to-morrow; we, I trust, shall be well on our way to Paris. I have the papers for the passage of the Gray Falcon and his cousins Jules and Chlotilde; I hope we will meet with no molestation. I started with the twain and left them just below the forest; they are to make their way to the next town on foot. The spies on the road will not know but I have still the identical pair—the driver of the cart waiting for us is faithful to me. Give yourselves no uneasiness, dear children. All will be well."

"We do not fear, so long as it is you who plans," answered Chlotilde.

"May your generous trust be rewarded," responded he, fervently.

They were stopped many and many a time before they reached the desired haven; but the Gray Falcon's name was enough to give them safe passport, nor were they overtaken by messengers of M. Pierre, the event most dreaded by all.

The horrors had deepened in Paris. The unfortunate Louis had been led to the block, and the trial of the queen was already under consideration. The utmost lawlessness and blood-thirstiness prevailed everywhere.

The Gray Falcon was welcomed back with enthusiasm. He lodged his pretended relatives with an acquaintance, and went at once to his old club. Notwithstanding the abhorrence he felt for the sentiments which now reigned triumphant there, he felt that it was vitally necessary for him to seem to participate in them, and accordingly he delivered to them one of his old harangues — somewhat disappointing them, to be sure, with the moderation of his views.

Having thus established himself safe from suspicion, he proceeded to look up a little plot of ground and small cottage, at a safe distance from the city, and thither he conveyed his friends.

A little garden gave ostensible employment to Jules, and his fair companion made up bouquets, and sent them to the city regularly by a peasant boy, who was the unconscious bearer of dispatches between Emile and his disguised wards; for a bouquet, especially marked, was sent twice a week to Emile, and its fragrant blossoms concealed a guarded statement of present security.

And thus amidst the frightful carnage going on almost within sound of their voices, the pair dwelt in peaceful security. They had almost ceased to fear molestation, and Lady Felicie, growing quite accustomed to the light tasks which devolved upon her, had almost put away the old identity, and believed herself the humble Chlotilde of the cottage, when suddenly and harshly came to her the reminder of her former existence.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A BELLE AT EIGHTY.

Had a Lovely Neck and Arms and Wore Decollete Gowns.

Some years ago there was an old lady in one of the southern capitals who not only wore decollete ball dresses at 80, but actually possessed the lovely neck and arms which they require, says the New York Ledger. She was most innocently vain; and no wonder, for she was immensely flattered and her townspeople valued her charms far above those of her young and more beautiful rivals. She had a curious way of preparing for a ball, which our modern fashionable women, with their multitudinous engagements would find difficult to emulate. The morning before she proposed appearing in full regalia she would take a brisk walk and return in time for a midday dinner, after which she remained quiet with her work until about 3 or 4 o'clock, when she would retire to her bed, take a very hot ptisan to induce perspiration, and remain in bed (partaking of some light refreshment at the tea hour) until it was time to dress for her ball. Thn she would get up, take a bath and make the most elaborate toilet. All the household regarded these preparations in the light of solemn rites, and would never have dreamed of laughing at them or interfering with them in any way. Her appearance was a triumph, never failing to excite the greatest admiration and adulation.

MONKS ARE GOOD FARMERS.

The Trappists Are the Most Successful in Canada.

Undoubtedly the most successful farmers in Canada are Trappist monks, says a Montreal letter in the Providence Journal. At Tracadie in the east, at Oka in Quebec and at St. Norbert on the Red river, in the west, they have changed unpromising tracts of land into fertile farms. To the latest of their settlements—that at St. Norbert—I paid a visit recently during a brief holiday trip out west. This great farm is an object lesson that would show to the dullest capacity what perseverance and industry can do with vast regions of untilled or semi-tilled loam lands out there.

Three years ago, I learned, a little company of Trappist brothers came out to Canada from France and built a monastery on a farm of 1,500 acres that had been presented to them by a priest named Richot, who had taken a leading part in the efforts that for years had been made to settle our great west. Immediately upon their arrival they set to work on the ground. They cleared it of its scrub, laid out a garden and began what is called "breaking." What progress has been made since then may be judged from the fact that this year they will harvest 12,000 bushels of grain. And their garden is a sight worth seeing, with the marvelous abundance and variety of vegetables, enough, apparently, to support a good-sized town. For cattle and for horses they have put up stables of the most approved modern type. They have a creamery, a hennery, with hundreds of fowls, a piggery of what is said to be the "proper kind," and they are building a large granary. The father superior, who is a French gentleman of distinguished family, was working in the garden. He saluted us politely and told us to make ourselves at home. We were afterward told that he is the humblest and the hardest working of all the brethren. It is well known that the rules of the order of La Trappe are of the strictest kind. They are, however, somewhat modified in Canada. Here the daily life of a clerical member of the order is regulated as follows: Six hours, from 8:30 p. m. to 2:30 a. m., for sleep; six hours for devotions; six hours for manual labor, and six hours for the reading room and for private work. The lay members of the order give eight to ten hours to manual labor. No Trappist, clerical or lay, is permitted to eat fish or flesh food. All are strict vegetarians. Yet they all appear to be physically strong, clear-eyed and clean-limbed. There are fifteen members in the monastery at present—twelve French and three Canadians. The work of the whole establishment is done with military precision, without the slightest appearance of stiffness or restraint. There is implicit obedience, but, as it is based on religion, it has all the appearance of freedom. They sleep on plank beds in narrow cells and never speak to visitors, nor, for that matter, to each other. The father superior and the guest master do what talking there is to be done. Their conversation is confined to a salutation, which they exclaim when passing each other and which is "Mon frere, il faut mourir!" ("Brother, we must die!") When a brother dies he is buried in the order's churchyard and a rude piece of wood bearing his Christian name merely is placed at the head of the grave. The Trappist is truly the man who, the world forgetting, is "by the world forgot."

What to Say About the Baby.

The average man is apt to feel a little at loss when a fond father or mother holds up before him a mite of a red-faced baby. Somthing must be said, of course, and if possible, something pretty. Well, here is a list of remarks, compiled by a benevolent contributor to an English magazine, any one of which will do in such an emergency, if nothing more original suggests itself:

"Isn't he sweet! He looks just like you!"

"I think he is going to look just like his father!"

"Oh, what dear little fingers! Do let me see his dear little toes!"

"Isn't he large!"

"Isn't he a tiny darling!"

"How bright he seems!"

"Did you ever see such a sweet little mouth!"

"The dear little darling! I never saw so young a baby look so intelligent!"

"Do, please, let me hold him just a minute."

The first of the above remarks has the advantage of killing two birds with one stone, so to speak. The last is put forth with some misgivings. Awkward bachelors are advised to think twice before making use of it.—New York Telegram.

$200.00 Reward in Gold! Well Worth Trying For.

In the word BEAUTIFUL are nine letters. You are smart enough to make fourteen words, we feel sure; and if you do you will receive a reward. Do not use a letter more times than it occurs in the word BEAUTIFUL. Use only English words. The Household Publishing and Printing Co., proprietors of The Household Companion, will pay $50.00 in gold to the person able to make the longest list of English words from the letters in the word BEAUTIFUL; $30.00 for the second longest; $20.00 for the third; $10.00 each for the next five, and $5.00 each for the next ten longest lists. The above rewards are given free, and solely for the purpose of attracting attention to our handsome ladies' magazine, THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION, containing forty-eight pages finely illustrated, Latest Fashions, articles on Floriculture, Cycling, Cookery, General Household Hints, etc., and stories by the best standard authors; published monthly, price 50 cents per year, making it the lowest-priced magazine in America. In order to enter the contest it is necessary for you to send with your list of words FOURTEEN 2-cent stamps, or 25 cents in silver, which will entitle you to a half-year's subscription to THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION. In addition to the above prizes we will give to everyone sending us a list of fourteen or more words a handsome silver souvenir spoon. Lists should be sent as soon as possible, and not later than April 3d, 1897, so that the names of successful contestants may be published in the April issue of THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION. We refer you to any mercantile agency as to our standing.

BRYAN'S PAPER.

The Editor Again Restored to Health.

Mr. George W. Hervey, editor of the Weekly Omaha World-Herald, is a perfect picture of health and looks more like the Hervey of other days. To see him now, one can hardly believe that he has been such a great sufferer. He writes of his failing health and re-recovery in his characteristic way as follows:

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion so severe as to make it impossible to take more than two meals a day without intense suffering. I grew worse gradually until, July, 1895, I was suddenly attacked with increased pain and soreness over the pit of my stomach and sharp pains in my right side, which rapidly increased until I could scarcely get my breath. A physician was called for immediate relief and hypodermic injections of morphine were resorted to for relief. I was able to be out in about a week, but had a second attack the following August, more intense than before. I was reduced from 156 to 134 lbs. in nine days and left wholly unable to take any nourishment. I lived on lime water and a very little milk for several days after. For one year I carried morphine pellets in my pockets ready for an emergency. All this time my stomach was sore and very sensitive. I discovered that what would agree with my stomach this week would probably not next week, and that I was getting nearer and nearer to a final collapse. I consulted three of the best physicians in the state and two agreed fully as to my ailment, but failed to give me relief. Having utterly failed to obtain relief, I finally made arrangements to go to Chicago to be treated when my little boy chanced to get a sample package of Dr. Kay's Renovator, which he brought to me. I was induced to try it, not having the least faith in its virtues. I thought this sample relieved me, and I purchased a 25-cent box. Before it was all used I had so improved that I was taking three meals a day, which I had not done for years. I then used one package of the large Dr. Kay's Renovator and one more of the small size. It is eight months since I commenced using Dr. Kay's Renovator and I now have no symptoms whatever of my old trouble. I have recommended it to many of my friends for stomach trouble and I think all have reported relief." George W. Hervey, Omaha, Neb., Feb. 17, 1897. Dr. Kay's Renovator is sold by druggists or sent by mail for 25 cents and $1. Booklet free. Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., Omaha, Neb.

Extenuating Circumstances.

She—They caught that burglar at Brown's last night.

He—Yes, poor fellow, I suppose he'll get ten years.

She—Why are you so sympathetic?

He—He poisoned the dog.

She—No.

He—Then I guess we may venture out.

ASKING QUESTIONS.

It Is a Woman's Prerogative and She Uses It.

Timely Questions and Prompt Answers Have Resulted in Great Satisfaction to Many Women.

Sensitive women hate to ask their physicians those delicate questions that only a woman understands, and therefore write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., as she has ever proved their most accurate adviser, and knowing that their letters will be read and answered by one of their own sex. Thousands of such letters have been received within a few months from those afflicted with the various forms of female diseases, and it is needless to say the answers have brought comfort and relief.

That sense of dragging in the groin, dull pains in small of back, retention, suppression of menses, bearing-down pains, headache, nervousness, blues, etc., are symptoms that require prompt measures.

The cure is, in most cases, rapid. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be promptly taken, and Mrs. Pinkham will furnish any advice required, free. Following is another letter of thanks:—

"Please accept my thanks for the little book which you have sent me. It has opened my eyes, and told me that there is a remedy for suffering women. There is no need for women to suffer, if they will only take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for years with painful menstruation, thinking there was no remedy for it; but after reading your little pamphlet, I thought I would give your medicine a trial, and it is wonderful how quickly it relieved me. I recommend it for all women who suffer with painful menstruation."

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Senate took up Indian appropriation bill. Clause directing temporary contracts with sectarian schools was agreed to. The bill is still under consideration.

HOUSE.

The house passed the general deficiency appropriation bill and began consideration of the last of the money bills, that providing for the naval establishment.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The senate made slow progress on the Indian appropriation bill, disposing of only one item. A resolution by Mills, of Texas, was adopted asking the president for information as to the death of Dr. Ruiz, at Guanabacoa, Cuba.

HOUSE.

The naval appropriation bill was finished and sent to the senate. A bill to permit governors of territories to appoint certain officers without consent of executive councils caused a debate on civil service, and Grosvenor denounced the civil service law as a fraud. Republicans applauded liberally. The bill passed.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Allen offered a resolution declaring it the sense of the senate that the president should act promptly to protect Americans in Cuba. A resolution by Hill calling on secretary of state for correspondence relating to Americans in Cuban prisons was adopted. Morgan, for the committee on foreign relations, presented a resolution demanding the immediate and unconditional release of Jules Sanguilly, an American imprisoned in Cuba. Sherman said it was agreed to unanimously by the committee. Morgan gave notice that he would call it up tomorrow. Senate took up the Indian appropriation bill but consideration was not completed. Bill providing indemnity up to $10 for loss of registered mail matter passed.

HOUSE.

Most of the day was devoted to District of Columbia business. W. J. Bryan visited the house during the day and met with a hearty welcome by his old colleagues.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Allen's Cuban resolution came up and Allen argued for its passage. Referred to committee on foreign affairs. Morgan's resolution demanding release of Jules Sanguilly came up in committee of the whole and after consideration, by a vote of 40 to 27 was reported to the senate. When the time for consideration of the Indian appropriation bill arrived the senate by a vote of 40 to 27 voted to proceed with the Cuban resolution. Sherman advocated the passage of the resolution. At the evening session the Indian appropriation bill was considered.

HOUSE.

Bill passed to clothe postoffice inspectors with power to make arrests. Bill to authorize national banks to take out circulation to the par value of bonds deposited passed, 144 to 46. A resolution calling for all correspondence of state department relative to American prisoners in Cuba was adopted.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The Indian appropriation bill occupied the time till 1 o'clock, when the senate began discussion of the pardon of Sanguilly and its effect. Call introduced a resolution calling for information on the death of Dr. Ruiz. The Sanguilly resolution went to the calendar. Later the Indian appropriation bill passed and consideration of the post-office appropriation bill was begun.

HOUSE.

After a vigorous debate of two hours the house passed the senate international monetary conference bill. The vote was 279 to 3.

SENATE.

Washington, Feb. 28.—The senate spent the entire day yesterday in consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. At midnight consideration was completed and the bill passed. The sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up and considered until 2:50 this morning, at which time a recess was taken until 3 p. m.

HOUSE.

The house, after five hours' struggle, passed the anti-railroad ticket scalping bill by a vote of 142 to 51. The bill refers to interstate transportation only.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

Des Moines, Feb. 26.—A. M. L., of Bertrand, Nebraska, asks: "What is meant by a limited degree of invention?" Answer:—This is a common phrase in patent office parlance and the question can be best answered by giving an example. After using blunt screws for centuries and gimlets to bore holes for them in wood, a gimlet pointed screw was invented and the labor of making holes in wood for the reception of screws was dispensed with. After using gimlet pointed screws for half a century and cutting away wood with a reaming tool to countersink the head of a screw, the slot across the conical head was extended down at the side to produce a cutting edge so that the rotating screw would cut away wood and the reaming tool made unnecessary. Both these examples show limited degrees of invention, in view of the fact that so little change was made in the art as first represented by a screw having a blunt end. Such simple changes were of limited degree in comparison with the great improvements made in steamboats since one of the crude originals was destroyed by a mob in 1695. But notwithstanding the simplicity of the improvements in screws and the limited degree of invention illustrated thereby, such improvements are of vast importance. A limited degree of invention, when a new or improved result is produced thereby, is a patentable invention and in many instances valuable. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

THE ASTROLOGER'S CORNER.

Some slight changes necessitated using less space for this department. Prof. Cunningham is daily receiving flattering testimonials of his genius and marvelous power in reading the language of the signs and planets. His horoscope life readings with chart are daily convincing people of the great and VALUABLE INFORMATION to be had through his wonderful knowledge of astrology. He receives letters from every state and territory and his fame has extended into foreign lands.

Under no circumstances will names of correspondents be published, but the following are extracts from recent letters: "I recived my horoscope, am much pleased with it. It is as near right as is possible to make it." Another writes: "I am surprised at its correctness."

Prof. Cunningham now proposes to tell your ruling planet and send a test reading ABSOLUTELY FREE to the applicants whose letters happen to be the First, Third, Ninth and Twelfth opened from each day's mail. All aspirants for FREE READINGS must send Sex, race or nationality, place, year, month, date, hour and minute of birth, A.M. or P.M. as nearly as possible. Applicants entitled to FREE READINGS will receive them by return mail with their 24 cents refunded less 2 cents postage. All applicants must send 24 cents to pay for their reading in case they do not win FREE reading. DO NOT DELAY; send at once; you are just as apt to win as anybody, and if you do not you will receive a valuable test by astrology for the small sum of 24 cents. Those not knowing their time of birth should send 4 cents for further instructions. Address:

The following are some readings for this week

Miss Marie, Grand Rapids, Wis. According to data furnished the sign Cancer which the Moon rules, was rising at your birth, therefore the Moon is your ruling planet or significator. Venus is co-ruler.

You are medium height; plump figure, clear complexion; medium to dark hair and eyes; if you was born a few minutes earlier the eyes are very dark, with a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight. You are quite, cheerful, jovial, kind and obliging; you very much dislike storm and bluster about anything; you are changeable in your nature and like to be on the go; you are very fond of amusements, parties, dances, etc., also art and art work. You are very intuitive and naturally know many things without ever having had to study to learn them. You are very popular with the gentlemen.

Miss M. E., Ottawa, Kansas. According to data furnished the sign Sagittarius, which Jupiter rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Jupiter is your ruling planet or significator. Venus and Mercury are co-significators.

You are medium height or above; plump figure; medium clear complexion; the hair near a chestnut color; the eyes medium to dark. You have a happy, cheerful, generous and charitable disposition, are gifted in the fine arts and a lover of everything connected with art, music, poetry, etc. You are also very fond of a fine driving horse. You will make an able writer on almost any subject with which you are familiar. You have the same testimony as the lady with the other reading, that is, you are very popular with the gentlemen.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Committee on ways and means reported the revenue bill for passage. It was made a special order for March 10. Consideration of bill relating to charitable institutions was resumed. An amendment was adopted providing for the removal of non-resident insane when their proper residence is known, but for the payment of expenses at asylum by the state when residence is unknown. Estates of insane persons and persons legally bound for this support are to be liable to the county for reasonable expense for their support. The mulct bill was received from the house and referred to the committee on intemperance.

HOUSE.

Bill relating to statute on roads, bridges and ferries was taken up and a proposition to substitute five mills for road purposes, which when collected should be expended under the direction of the township trustees caused a long debate. It was finally voted down.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 3.—Senate spent most of the day in consideration of the judicial and railroad bills. A question of fixing county clerks' salaries was referred to a special committee.

HOUSE.

The bill in relation to roads and highways required the whole forenoon to consider and pass. An amendment by Morrison, of Keokuk, to increase the tax levy from four to five mills was lost. The county road tax of one mill remains, but it is required that that part of the tax raised in cities and towns must be expended in or adjacent to said cities and towns. Under the law as passed township trustees may throw whole townships in a single road district. Speaker called attention of members to slow work of the session and said at the present rate adjournment could not be reached before June.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 4.—The senate devoted its time to cutting down salaries and providing for the investigation of state institutions. By a large majority the salary of railroad commissioners was cut from $3,000 to $2,500. At the afternoon session bills relating to the poor and lost goods were passed.

HOUSE.

Amendments to the Carney resolution for investigation of state institutions were concurred in except the one calling for an inquiry into the Agricultural college loss of $30,000 through the defalcation of ex-State Treasurer Rankin. The salaries of the superintendents of the hospitals for the insane were cut to $2,500 uniformly, the motion to reconsider being lost, 24 to 24. The new law on notes and bills which Representative Weaver and the fifth code committee have championed, was adopted, 52 to 30. The house also passed the bill relating to telegraph, telephone and express companies and bill in relation to practice of dentistry. A resolution pledging hearty support to the new administration was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 5.—The senate discussed the bill in regard to the rights of decedents and made one radical change in the present law. It provided that where a man makes a direct bequest to his wife it shall be considered in lieu of dowry, or the one-third of all his property, to which she is entitled under the law, unless otherwise specified by the decedent. The law now is that where a man makes a particular bequest to his wife she is entitled to her third in addition unless otherwise named in the will.

HOUSE.

The house concurred in the senate amendments to the Carney resolution for an investigation of state institution and spent considerable time in discussing the senate bill in regard to courts of original jurisdiction.

An amendment making the per diem of juries a part of the costs was adopted. Another amendment clothing the court with authority to limit argument of attorneys to one hour except in cases where a felony was involved was also adopted, and the bill then passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 6.—An amendment was adopted fixing salaries of clerks of district courts, the scale running from $1,100 in counties of less than 10,000 inhabitants to $2,200 in counties of 45,000 and over. Boards of supervisors may authorize clerks to retain $300 additional in fees. Salary of commandant of soldiers' home was fixed at $1,800.

HOUSE.

Morrison introduced a resolution for a committee to investigate the amount embezzled out of the agricultural fund by ex-State Treasurer Rankin. Laid over. Merriam and Porter were named as members of the committee to investigate state institutions. Speaker announced that absenteeism would not be permitted in the future. Two bills, one relating to drains and levies and the others to the geological survey, passed.

A CUBAN VICTORY.

Two Hundred Spaniards Killed, While Cubans Lose Fifty.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Dispatches from Havana report an engagement between some of Gen. Rodriguez's forces and a large Spanish column. The scene of the battle was the Garminez sugar plantation, south of Jaruco. The Cubans numbered 500 and the Spaniards 900. The Cubans were at first victorious, but Spanish reinforcements arrived from Casiqua and the Cubans withdrew into the woods. Nearly two hundred Spanish were killed, among them five officers The Cubans lost about fifty killed.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

A SUGAR FACTORY.

Definite Proposition Made for Its Location in Des Moines.

DES MOINES, March 5.—Louis Fuhrman, superintendent of the Nebraska beet sugar factories, is here in the interest of an English syndicate which has a very large sum for investment in the sugar business in the west, believing that it is a splendid opportunity for a return on their money and that the sugar can be made in Iowa and Nebraska with which to supply the United States. He announces that he has just closed the contract for a factory at Omaha, which will be put up at once and will have a daily capacity to consume 300 tons of beets, and that his company will build several factories at points in the west with big refineries at several points. His proposition to the Des Moines men interested in the project is that the company will build a factory in Des Moines that will cost $250,000 at the lowest figure, with refinery attachment and a daily capacity to consume 500 tons of beets, if contracts are secured with farmers in the surrounding country guaranteeing to supply the factory with beets sufficient to run it for a period of ten years, at $4 per ton.

GOV. DRAKE INJURED.

Thrown From His Chair in His Private Car While En Route.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Governor Drake, of Iowa, who is here attending the inauguration, was thrown from a chair in his private car while en route to Washington, as the result of a slight railway accident, and sustained a painful injury to his spine. He was ordered to bed by a physician as soon as he reached his hotel in Washington. Despite this advice, however, the governor participated in the parade, remaining in the saddle over five hours.

FEARFUL BOILER EXPLOSION.

Two Men Killed and a Mill Demolished.

OTTUMWA, March 6.—A boiler exploded in Dunn & Johnson's flour mill at Drakeville. Samuel Miller, a workman, was left with the boiler and let it fill with water. Miller was killed, and John Tice, the miller, cannot live. The mill was demolished.

Road Taxes in Cities and Towns.

DES MOINES, March 7.—The county is making a vigorous fight against the Rock Island road in its effort to escape the payment of road taxes on assessments within the limits of incorporated cities and towns, and to this end has appealed the case to the supreme court. It has also sought to enlist the sympathies of other counties and their support in fighting the case, and in accordance with this decision a circular letter has been sent to all the boards in the state by Supervisor Nelson, chairman of the Polk county board, asking them to contribute toward the cost of carrying the case to the supreme court.

Suicide of a Prosperous Farmer.

KEOKUK, March 6.—Shapley Moore, a pioneer of the Hawkeye state and a prosperous farmer, aged 66, committed suicide at his home in Charleston township. He went out to the barn to do the morning work, and did not return. His son found his body some time afterwards. He had killed himself with a shotgun, placing the muzzle against his breast and touching the trigger with a lath. His clothes were burning when discovered. It is supposed that he was temporarily insane.

Fatal Accident in a Shoe Factory.

KEOKUK, March 6.—Andrew Carlson, aged 14, met almost instant death while operating a machine in the Huiskamp shoe factory. The belt caught in some inexplicable manner, tearing the heavy machine, weighing 600 pounds, from its fastening, lifted it and threw it over on the boy, chrushing his life out. The is the first serious accident that has happened in this house during the forty years it has been in business.

Counterfeiters Captured.

DES MOINES, March 6.—The branch of the United States secret service located in this city has captured a gang of counterfeiters who had their plant at Centerville and who were turning out what might be called a pretty fair counterfeit dollar. The gang consists of Sam Stille, "Biff" Benson and Ed Searcy. They have all been placed in jail to await the action of the federal court at Council Bluffs.

Elevator Man Crushed.

OTTUMWA, March 3.—Gottlieb Borstadt, janitor of the Hoffman office building, was found crushed to death under the elevator. It is supposed that he was oiling the machinery and the elevator started.

Sentenced to the Penitentiary.

BURLINGTON, March 6.—Karl Vinton, a young man of good family, who was convicted of attempting to hold up and rob ex-Mayor Buttles, was sentenced to the penitentiary for four years.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE market boy stood at the gateway with his square basket, and Jules had brought out the tray of bouquets, one clear, bright morning, while Chlotilde's white fingers arranged them in the most tempting show; when the three were startled by the sudden appearance of a man who, throwing open the folds of his cloak, which had concealed his face, stepped forward from a hidden nook, and spoke gaily:

"Good day, my fair gardener! Sell me one of your bouquets, I pray you."

Jules saw the deadly pallor which overspread his companion's face, and dextrously bending between them, himself singled out a bouquet and held it toward the stranger.

The sharp, keen eye of the latter roved over his features triumphantly; but without remark, he accepted the bouquet, and again turning to the girl he inquired the price.

She had summoned resolution enough to answer without sign of trepidation.

He hunted up the money, took his bouquet, and marched away, never once turning to glance behind.

Chlotilde—as he called her—seized Jules' arm, and drawing him aside, she whispered:

"We must fly! not an hour, not a moment, not a second can be lost. It was M. Pierre; he knew me beyond a doubt; I read his malignant triumph on his face. Oh, Jules! let us get to Emile—somehow, as speedily as possible."

Jules perceived at once the dangerous emergency.

"Get your hat and cloak, Chlotilde; we will go with the boy to find Emile. What can we find to fill our baskets, to give us excuse for reaching him?"

Chlotilde pointed to her plants. Without another word, Jules hastened to dig them up, and set them in the basket; while she entered the cottage for the few articles she dared take with her.

Side by side they followed, breathlessly, the lead of the wondering peasant boy, and went on into the crowd and stir of the city. They were too excited and eager to be aware of the dark browed, villainous looking man, who followed stealthily in their steps never losing sight of them for a moment.

The streets were alive with a dense throng of people, and it was evident some great event was at hand, by the gleaming eyes, violent gesticulations, and set faces of the multitude, who all seemed surging in one direction.

The guide, in spite of the remonstrance of Jules, joined the living tide, with the careless explanation:

"We shall be sure to find citizen Emile at the square; the Gray Falcon is always at hand when such sport is going on. It has something to do with the Austrian woman; maybe they are to take off her head to-day. You're in luck to be in to see the sight."

Lady Felicie strove to hide the shudder which ran through her frame at these words, and glanced apprehensively at her companion.

Jules had turned deadly pale, his lips were set, his eyes gleamed fiercely as he answered:

"Tell me where we can find the Gray Falcon's usual resort, and then you may go your way. We have no time to waste now."

The boy laughed coarsely, as the crowd growing more and more dense took them along with it.

"You have no other choice," said he; "and there be those in Paris who would take you up right smartly for calling it a waste of time to see the neck of tyranny broken on the shrine of freedom."

Jules took the rebuke mildly. The horrors of witnessing the terrible scene his imagination presented, had quite overpowered his fears for personal safety, but now once again returned the remembrance of their own danger.

"We shall sell nothing here, Chlotilde," said he; "if we could only see the Gray Falcon, we might return again to witness the brave sights."

A broad shouldered, red-faced virago, one of a crowd of fiercely gesticulating Amazons, overheard his words, and answered jestingly:

"What do you expect to do with the flowers, white face? You had better throw them away and take up a pike. There are no fine lords to buy your bouquets now; why do you bring them here?"

"Are the fine lords the only ones to enjoy flowers?" answered Jules. "I thought we citizens were to be allowed to enjoy them now. They are nature's jewels, she puts them around the cottage more plentifully than before the palace. Take a bunch, citizens, and see how pretty it will make you look; so young and gay, you know."

The woman laughed coarsely, thrust out her horny hand for a bouquet, and fastened it at her breast.

"Well, well, at the best, I can make use of it, for when the proud Austrian lays her dainty head on the block, I'll fling it in her face. She's used to bouquets, you know, and will appreciate the compliment."

Jules echoed her laugh, though his heart was frozen at the brutality of the creature, but his companion turned her wild eyes into the woman's face with an expression of utter horror which it was impossible to misunderstand.

The virago perceived it, and exclaimed angrily:

"What ails that simpleton? does she dare to sympathize with the proud tyrants? She's an aristocrat, I'll swear!"

Jules hastily pressed her arm in warning, and began to rail angrily.

"Yes, yes; she's a silly thing. She's been sick and lost all her sense. She was always afraid of blood; I'm in hopes to teach her yet the difference betwixt aristocratic blood, which deserves to be spilt, and the honest tide of the people's pulse."

"She looks like one of 'em. Stand out, here, wench, and let us make sure; that's too doll-like a face to belong to a citizen's daughter. And she shows her guilt; I'll swear she's one of them."

She cleared a little space around them as she spoke, and dragged Felicie forward.

The poor girl, white as any statue, turned her eyes appealingly to Jules, as the iron fingers left their cruel print upon her tender arms.

"Nay, nay; she's a good girl, citizeness, only for being so frightened," cried Jules; "let her go, I beg of you."

By this time other attention was drawn to the scene, and the hurrying crowd paused to gather around the group, and question the cause of their agitation.

"An aristocrat; she would save the Austrian woman!" cried the Amazon, with her grasp still tightening on the arm of the terrified girl.

"Away with her then; to the prison with her!" shouted a dozen fierce voices, as the angry eyes glared upon her.

Not a word came from Lady Felicie. The soft, dark eyes, in their wild affright appealed for mercy and pity, but the white, frozen lips were dumb.

"Leave her to me!" exclaimed Jules, pressing forward to her side. "I shall punish her well for this silly terror."

"Make her look on and see the haughty queen's proud head rolling in the dust," shouted another.

"Bid her shout with us, Death to the aristocrats! Liberty and equality forever!"

"She can do that. Come, Chlotilde, shout with me!" cried Jules, swinging his cap and sending up a cheery huzza for "Freedom and equality forever!"

A man in the crowd stepped forward and looked eagerly and scrutinizingly into the pallid, but handsome, clear-cut features of the youth.

"I'll swear to that face!" muttered he, "it's him, and no mistake."

Jules himself caught that searching glance, and though his face gave no sign, his heart sank in despair.

"Let's take them along," said the man; "we'll see for ourselves how the pair enjoy jubilee day."

He who had so persistently tracked them all the way from the cottage, added his voice now.

"Yes, yes; show them how Marie Antoinette finds a necklace sharper than diamonds, the free gift of the people. There'll be some one here, anon, who can tell their true names."

"What! is the man suspected, also?" asked the woman who had cuased the whole detention.

The last speaker nodded acquiescence. Whereupon the whole crowd around took up a fiendish yell, more like the cry of a blood-thirsty, wild beast than the voice of human beings, and began hustling the pair along toward the spot where the hapless queen was expected to appear.

Jules flung his arm around his companion to steady her steps, and shield her from the rude jostling of the crowd.

"It is only a jest, Chlotilde," said he, in as cheerful a voice as he could force himself to assume; "they will discover our innocence, and let us go. Perhaps some friend will appear to give assurance of our good behavior and loyal sentiments."

She knew what he meant; it was indeed her last desperate hope. If Emile would appear to save them! And yet, how was it possible for any one to save? She asked this question dreamily, as her eye ran along the sea of faces around her, and found no pitying eye, no gentle expression of mercy—only flaming, infuriated, revengeful countenances.

The peasant boy who had acted as guide, after hearing the first words of the crowd darted away. Young as he was, he knew the danger of falling under the displeasure of these lawless mobs; or of seeming to hold acquaintance with any one suspected of the obnoxious aristocracy.

And almost lifted from their feet amidst jeers and threats, and bitter taunts, Jules and his fair companion were borne toward the fatal guillotine where Louis had already laid down his life.

The Place De La Revolution was already thronged and there was scarcely standing room left. Horrible jests, violent imprecautions, demoniac rejoicings were tossed to and fro from mouth to mouth.

CHAPTER XX.

THESE two sensitive, refined natures, transfixed with utter loathing and horror, could give no outward sign of their detestation of the scene. A dozen pitiless eyes were watching every shade upon their faces.

They had each other's icy hands, and sternly bore it with all the heroism they could master. It was not possible for either to behold their beautiful queen led forward to the block. Despite the scrutiny bent upon them, both instinctively closed their eyes, and held their breath through the last terrible moments.

The wild shout that broke upon the deathly stillness told when the spirit of Marie Antoinette joined that of her murdered husband. At the same moment Felicie fell fainting against Jules' shoulder. The struggling mass of people shut out the air, and almost crushed her unconscious form.

He looked around him imploringly for a single trace of humanity, but found none. Supporting her as well as he could with one arm, he chafed with the free hand her icy fingers and marbly stiff arms.

The same virago whose attention had interrupted their progress in the commencement, elbowed her way to him.

"You think more of the dainty minx than you pretend, sirrah," she said, angrily; "she's an aristocrat beyond doubt. She must go to the trial, and will take her turn at the axe yonder, I doubt not. Why must she swoon away, when France is made free! Nothing, no queen now. Liberty and equality forever! Death to the aristocrats!"

"She is a young creature, and has no strength; such as she cannot look calmly upon bloodshed, be it friend or foe. Let her go now, I beseech you. She is the niece of the Gray Falcon; she is no aristocrat, I will vouch for it," exclaimed Jules imploringly.

"No aristocrat, with those lady features? and look at her hands! pshaw! citizen."

"And do you deny that we may find such lovely faces, and delicate frames among the people?" cried Jules, still more eagerly; "nay, beauty has no partiality for nobility. This maiden is of humble birth, and yet no princess was ever more lovely in person or character. I assure you she is of the people."

Felicie had slowly revived. As he said these words a strong shudder shook her frame.

"Perhaps you are right," said the woman, slowly; "but if the Gray Falcon is her uncle, he should teach her a little of his spirit. I should like to see some one else who knows her."

"Here comes the very one you wish to see, citizeness," said a smooth voice, whose first accent made the Lady Felicie spring wildly to her feet. "I am well acquainted with the girl; she will tell you so; I will take care of her."

Jules knew, without asking, who it was that spoke. M. Pierre had arrived to complete their despair.

He advanced eagerly and laid his hand upon the girl's shoulder, while he said significantly:

"You have nothing to fear now from the people—if you come with me peaceably. I have been looking for you a long time; but as you remember of old, I never grow weary of working to secure my object."

Lady Felicie shrank back and clung to the arm of Jules.

The brow of M. Pierre darkened, and bending closely to her ear, he said in a savage whisper:

"Your life is not worth a straw, not safe an hour, if I do not save you. They will tear you limb from limb; beware then how you refuse my aid, how you reject my friendship. Will you come?"

All the strength which till now had seemed entirely lost, came back to the girl with the tide of indignation and abhorrence which throbbed in every pulse.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY TO THE PEOPLE OF THE NATION.

Upon Taking the Reins of Government He Discusses Various Subjects of Importance—Favors a Peace Treaty and International Bimetallism.

President McKinley's inaugural address, delivered immediately after he had taken the oath of office, is as follows:

Fellow Citizens:—In obedience to the will of the people and in their presence, by the authority vested in me by this oath, I assume the arduous and responsible duties of President of the United States, relying on the support of my countrymen and invoking the guidance of Almighty God. Our faith teaches that there is no safer reliance than upon the God of our fathers, who has so singularly favored the American people in every national trial and who will not forsake us so long as we obey His commandments and walk humbly in His footsteps.

The responsibilities of the high trust to which I have been called—always of grave importance—are augmented by the prevailing business conditions, entailing idleness upon willing labor and loss to useful enterprises. The country is suffering from industrial disturbances from which speedy relief must be had. Our financial system needs some revision; our money is all good now, but its value must not further be threatened. It should all be put upon an enduring basis, not subject to easy attack, nor its stability to doubt or dispute. Our currency should continue under the supervision of the government. The several forms of our paper money offer, in my judgment, a constant embarrassment to the government and a safe balance in the treasury. Therefore, I believe it necessary to devise a system which, without diminishing the circulating medium or offering a premium for its contraction, will present a remedy for these arrangements, which, temporary in their nature, might well in the years of our prosperity have been displaced by wiser provisions.

With adequate revenue secured, but not until then, can we enter upon such changes in our fiscal laws as will, while insuring safety and volume to our money, no longer impose upon the government the necessity of maintaining so large a gold reserve, with its attendant and inevitable temptations to speculation. Most of our financial laws are the outgrowth of experience and trial and should not be amended without investigation and demonstration of the wisdom of the proposed changes. We must be sure we are right and "make haste slowly."

If, therefore, congress in its wisdom shall deem it expedient to create a commission to take under early consideration the revision of our coinage, banking and currency laws, and give them that exhaustive, careful and dispassionate examination that their importance demands, I shall cordially concur in such action. If such power is vested in the President it is my purpose to appoint a commission of prominent, well-informed citizens of different parties who will command public confidence, both on account of their ability and special fitness for the work. Business experience and public training may thus be combined and the patriotic zeal of the friends of the country be so directed that such a report will be made as to receive the support of all parties and our finances cease to be the subject of mere partisan contention. The experiment is, at all events, worth a trial, and, in my opinion, it can but prove beneficial to the entire country.

International Bimetallism.

The question of international bimetallism will have early and earnest attention. It will be my constant endeavor to secure it by co-operation with the other great commercial powers of the world. Until that condition is realized when the parity between our gold and silver money springs from and is supported by the relative value of the two metals the value of the silver already coined and of that which may hereafter be coined must be kept constantly at par with gold by every resource at our command. The credit of the government, the integrity of its currency and the inviolability of its obligations must be preserved. This was the commanding verdict of the people, and it will not be unheeded.

Economy is demanded in every branch of the government at all times, but especially in periods like the present depression of business and distress among the people. The severest economy must be observed in all public expenditures, and extravagance stopped wherever it is found and prevented wherever in the future it may be developed. If the revenues are to remain as now, the only relief that can come must be from decreased expenditures. But the present must not become the permanent condition of the government. It has been our uniform practice to retire, not increase, our outstanding obligations, and this policy must again be resumed and vigorously enforced. Our revenues should always be large enough to meet with ease and promptness not only our current needs and the principal and interest of the public debt, but to make proper and liberal provisions for that most deserving body of public creditors, the soldiers and sailors, and the widows and orphans who are the pensioners of the United States.

The government should not be permitted to run behind, or increase its debt, in times like the present. Suitably to provide against this is the mandate of duty; the certain and easy remedy for most of our financial difficulties. A deficiency is inevitable so long as the expenditures of the government exceeds its receipts. It can only be met by loans or an increased revenue. While a large annual surplus of revenue may invite waste and extravagance, inadequate revenue creates distrust and undermines public and private credit. Neither should be encouraged. Between more loans and more revenue, there ought to be but one opinion. We should have more revenue, and that without delay, hindrance or postponement. A surplus in the treasury created by loans is not a permanent or safe reliance. It will suffice while it lasts, but it cannot last long while the outlays of the government are greater than its receipts, as has been the case during the last two years. Nor must it be forgotten that however much such loans may temporarily relieve the situation the government is still indebted for the amount of the surplus thus accrued, which it must ultimately pay, while its ability to pay is not strengthened, but weakened, by a continued deficit. Loans are imperative in great emergencies to preserve the government or its credit, but a failure to supply needed revenue in time of peace for the maintenance of either has no justification

The best way for the government to maintain its credit is to pay as it goes—not by resorting to loans, but by keeping out of debt—through an adequate income secured by a system of taxation, external or internal, or both. It is the settled policy of the government, pursued from the beginning and practiced by all parties and administrations, to raise the bulk of our revenue from taxes upon foreign productions entering the United States for sale and consumption—and avoiding for the most part every form of direct taxation, except in time of war. The country is clearly opposed to any needless additions to the subjects of internal taxation, and is committed by its latest popular utterance to the system of tariff taxation.

There can be no misunderstanding, either, about the principle upon which this tariff taxation shall be levied. Nothing has ever been made plainer at a general election than that the controlling principle in the raising of revenue on imports is zealous care for the American interests and American labor. The people have declared that such legislation should be had as will give ample protection and encouragement to the industries and the development of our country. It is, therefore, earnestly hoped and expected that congress will, at the earliest practicable moment, enact revenue legislation that shall be fair, reasonable, conservative, and just, and which, while supplying sufficient revenue for public purposes, will still be signally beneficial and helpful to every section and every enterprise of the people.

To this policy we are all, of whatever party, firmly bound by the voice of the people—a power vastly more potential than the expression of any political platform. The paramount duty of congress is to stop deficiencies by the restoration of that protective legislation which has always been the firmest prop of the treasury. The passage of such a law or laws would strengthen the credit of the government both at home and abroad, and go far toward stopping the drain upon the gold reserve held for the redemption of our currency which has been heavy and well-nigh constant for several years.

Reciprocity.

In the revision of the tariff especial attention should be given to the re-enactment and extension of the reciprocity principle of the law of 1890, under which so great a stimulus was given to our foreign trade in new and advantageous markets, for our surplus agricultural and manufactured products. The brief trial given this legislation amply justifies a further experiment and additional discretionary power in the making of commercial treaties, the end in view always to be the opening up of new markets for the products of our country by granting concessions to the products of other lands that we need and cannot produce ourselves, and which do not involve any loss of labor to our own people, but tend to increase their employment.

The depression of the last four years has fallen with especial severity upon the great body of the country, and upon none more than the holders of small farms. Agriculture has languished and labor suffered. The revival of manufacturing will be a relief to both. No portion of our population is more devoted to the institutions of free government nor more loyal in their support, while none bears more cheerfully or fully its proper share in the maintenance of the government or is better entitled to its wise and liberal care and protection. Legislation helpful to the producer is beneficial to all. The depressed condition of industry on the farm and in the mine and factory has lessened the ability of the people to meet the demands upon them, and they rightfully expect that not only a system of revenue shall be established that will secure the largest income with the least burden, but that every means will be taken to decrease rather than increase our public expenditures. Business conditions are not the most promising.

It will take time to restore the prosperity of former years. If we cannot promptly attain it, we can resolutely turn our faces in that direction and aid its return by friendly legislation. However troublesome the situation may apepar, congress will not, I am sure, be found lacking in disposition or ability to relieve it, so far as legislation can do so. The restoration of confidence and the revival of business, which men of all parties so much desire, depend more largely upon the prompt, energetic and intelligent action of congress than upon any other single agency affecting the situation.

Duties of Citizenship.

It is inspiring, too, to remember that no great emergency in the one hundred and eight years of our eventful national life has ever arisen that has not been met with wisdom and courage by the American people, with fidelity to their best interests and highest destiny and to the honor of the American name. These years of glorious history have exalted mankind and advanced the cause of freedom throughout the world and immeasurably strengthened the precious free institutions which we enjoy. The people love and will sustain these institutions. The great essential to our happiness and prosperity is that we adhere to the principles upon which the government was established and insist upon their faithful observance. Equality of rights must prevail and our laws be always and everywhere respected and obeyed. We may have failed in the discharge of our full duty as citizens of the great republic, but it is consoling and encouraging to realize that free speech, a free press, free thought, free schools, the free and unmolested right of religious liberty and worship and free and fair elections are dearer and more universally enjoyed today than ever before.

These guaranties must be sacredly preserved and wisely strengthened. The constituted authorities must be cheerfully and vigorously upheld. Lynchings must not be tolerated in a great and civilized country like the United States; courts—not mobs—must execute the penalties of the law. The preservation of public order, the right of discussion, the integrity of courts and the orderly administration of justice must continue forever the rock of safety upon which our government securely rests.

One of the lessons taught by the late election, which all can rejoice in, is that the citizens of the United States are both law-respecting and law-abiding people, not easily swerved from the path of patriotism and honor. This is in entire accord with the genius of our institutions, and but emphasizes the advantages of inculcating even a greater love for law and order in the future. Immunity should be granted to none who violates the laws, whether individuals, corporations or communities; and as the constitution imposes upon the President the duty of both its own execution and of the statutes enacted in pursuance of its provisions, I shall endeavor carefully to carry them into effect.

The declaration of the party now restored to power has been in the past that of "opposition to all combinations of capital organized in trusts or otherwise to control arbitrarily the condition of trade among our citizens," and it has supported "such legislation as will prevent the execution of all schemes to oppress the people by undue charges on their supplies or by unjust rates for the transportation of their products to market." This purpose will be steadily pursued, both by the enforcement of the laws now in existence and the recommendation and support of such statutes as may be necessary to carry it into effect.

Naturalization and Immigration.

Our naturalization and immigration laws should be further improved to the constant promotion of a safer, a better and a higher citizenship. A grave peril to the republic would be a citizenship too ignorant to understand or too vicious to appreciate the great value and benefit of our constitutions and laws—and against all who come here to make war upon them our gates must be promptly and tightly closed. Nor must we be unmindful of the need of improvement among our citizens, but with the zeal of our forefathers encourage the spread of knowledge and free education. Illiteracy must be banished from the land if we shall attain that high destiny as the foremost of the enlightened nations of the world, which, under Providence, we ought to achieve.

Reforms in the civil service must go on, but the change should be real and genuine, not perfunctory or prompted by a zeal in behalf of any party, simply because it happens to be in power. As a member of congress I voted and spoke in favor of the present law, and I shall attempt its enforcement in the spirit in which it was enacted. The purpose in view was to secure the most efficient service of the best men who would accept appointment under the government, retaining faithful and devoted public servants in office, but shielding none under the authority of any rule or custom who is inefficient, incompetent or unworthy. The best interests of the country demand this, and the people heartily approve the law wherever and whenever it has been thus administered.

Congress should give prompt attention to the restoration of our American merchant marine, once the pride of the seas in all the great ocean highways of commerce. To my mind, few more important subjects so imperatively demand its intelligent consideration. The United States has progressed with marvelous rapidity in every field of enterprise and endeavor, until we have become foremost in nearly all the great lines of inland trade, commerce and industry. Yet, while this is true, our American merchant marine has been steadily declining until it is now lower, both in the percentage of tonnage and the number of vessels employed, than it was prior to the civil war.

Commendable progress has been made of late years in the upbuilding of the American navy, but we must supplement these efforts by providing as a proper consort for it a merchant marine amply sufficient for our carrying trade to foreign countries. The question is one that appeals both to our business necessities and the patriotic aspirations of a great people.

Foreign Policy.

It has been the policy of the United States since the foundation of the government to cultivate relations of peace and amity with all the nations of the world, and this accords with my conception of our duty now. We have cherished the policy of non-interference with the affairs of foreign governments, wisely inaugurated by Washington, keeping ourselves free from entanglement either as allies or foes, content to leave undisturbed with them the settlement of their own domestic concerns. It will be our aim to pursue a firm and dignified foreign policy, which shall be just, impartial, ever watchful of our national honor and always insisting upon the enforcement of the lawful rights of American citizens everywhere. Our diplomacy should seek nothing more and accept nothing less; we must avoid the temptation of territorial aggression. War should never be entered upon until every agency of peace has failed; peace is preferable to war in almost every contingency.

Arbitration is the true method of settlement of international as well as local or individual difference. It was recognized as the best means of adjustment of differences between employers and employes by the forty-ninth congress, in 1886, and its application was extended to our diplomatic relations by the unanimous concurrence of the senate and house of the fifty-first congress, in 1890. The latter resolution was accepted as the basis of negotiations with us by the British house of commons in 1893, and upon our invitation a treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain was signed at Washington and transmitted to the senate for its ratification in January last. Since this treaty is clearly the result of our own initiative; since it has been recognized as the leading feature of our foreign policy throughout our entire national history—the adjustment of difficulties by judicial methods rather than by force of arms—and since it presents to the world the glorious example of reason and peace, not passion and war, controlling the relations between two of the greatest nations of the world, an example certain to be followed by others, I respectfully urge the early action of the senate thereon, not merely as a matter of policy, but as a duty to mankind.

The importance and moral influence of the ratification of such a treaty can hardly be overestimated in the cause of advancing civilization. It may well engage the best thought of the statesmen and people and every country, and I cannot but consider it fortunate that it was reserved to the United States to have the leadership in so grand a work.

Extra Session of Congress.

It has been the uniform practice of each President to avoid, so far as possible, the convening of congress in extraordinary session. It is an example which, under orsdinary circumstances and in the absence of a public necessity, is to be commended. But a failure to convene the representatives of the people in congress in extra session when it involves neglect of a public duty places the responsibility of such neglect upon the executive himself. The condition of the public treasury, as has been indicated, demands the immediate consideration of congress. It alone has the power to provide revenues for the government. Not to convene it under such circumstances I can view in no other sense than the neglect of a plain duty.

I do not sympathize with the sentiment that congress in session is dangerous to our general business interests. Its members are the agents of the people, and their presence at the seat of government in the execution of the sovereign will should not operate as an injury, but a benefit. There could be no better time to put the government upon a sound financial and economic basis than now. The people have only recently voted that this should be done, and nothing is more binding upon the agents of their will than the obligation of immediate action.

It has always seemed to me that the postponement of the meeting of congress until more than a year after it has been chosen deprives congress too often of the inspiration of the popular will and the country of the corresponding benefits. It is evident, therefore, that to postpone action in the presence of so great a necessity would be unwise on the part of the executive because unjust to the interests of the people. Our actions now will be freer from mere partisan consideration that if the question of tariff revision was postponed until the regular session of congress. We are nearly two years from a congressional election, and politics cannot so greatly distract us as if such contest was immediately pending. We can approach the problem calmly and patriotically, without fearing its effect upon an early election. Our fellow citizens who may disagree with us upon the character of this legislation prefer to have the question settled now, even against their preconceived views—and perhaps settled so reasonably, as I trust and believe it will be, as to insure great permanence—than to have further uncertainty menacing the vast and varied business interests of the United States. Again, whatever action congress may take will be given a fair opportunity for trial before the people are called to pass judgment upon it, and this I consider a great essential to the rightful and lasting settlement of the question.

In view of these considerations I shall deem it my duty as President to convene congress in extraordinary session on Monday, the 15th day of March, 1897.

In conclusion, I congratulate the country upon the fraternal spirit of the people and the manifestation of good will everywhere so apparent. The recent election not only most fortunately demonstrated the obliteration of sectional or geographical lines, but to some extent also the prejudices which for years have distracted our councils and marred our true greatness as a nation. The triumph of the people, whose verdict is carried into effect today, is not the triumph of one section, nor wholly of one party, but of all sections and all the people. The north and south no longer divide on the old lines, but upon principles and policies; and in this fact surely every lover of the country can find cause for true felicitation. Let us rejoice in and cultivate this spirit; it is ennobling and will be both a gain and blessing to our beloved country.

It will be my constant aim to do nothing and permit nothing to be done that will arrest or disturb this growing sentiment of unity and co-operation, this revival of esteem and affiliation which now animates so many thousands in both the old and the antagonistic sections, but I shall cheerfully do everything possible to promote and increase it.

Let me again repeat the words of the oath administered by the chief justice, which, in their respective spheres, so far as applicable, I would have all my countrymen observe:

"I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

This is the obligation I have reverently taken before the Lord most high. To keep it will be my single purpose; my constant prayer—and I shall confidently rely upon the forbearance and assistance of all the people in the discharge of my solemn responsibilities.

SHATTERED.

THE PRECARIOUS CONDITION OF PROF. A. H. NYE.

A Prominent Iowa Educator's Painful Experience as Related by Him to a Newspaper Man.

From the Gazette, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

The la grippe, that dread disease that had such a run throughout this country three or four years since, left many who were previously in robust health, with shattered constitutions and seemingly confirmed invalids.

Prof. A. H. Nye, living at No. 2500 Olive Street, Cedar Falls, Iowa, was among the number left in a precarious condition by the disease. No strength, feet and limbs badly swollen, in fact, almost helpless. Prof. Nye is a native of New York State, having come west in 1886—a healthy, robust man. He is a school teacher by profession, having served as county superintendent of schools of (Black Hawk) county several terms, and he has the respect of all with whom he comes in content. His helpless condition called forth the sympathy of the entire community. He tried the best medical skill procurable, and spent most of his ready means in the vain endeavor to recover his health, and had about given up completely discouraged. He stopped taking medicine, being fully convinced in his own mind that that there was no help for him, and that he would have to spend the balance of his days as an invalid, a burden to family and friends. Some one who had heard of Dr. William's Pink Pills, spoke to him about them and urged to give them a trial. His poor success with eminent physicians made him skeptical and he had no faith in what was called proprietary medicine, and would not listen to this advice for some days. The friend being persistent, however, and having faith in the Pink Pills, would not let up until he had finally prevailed upon the sufferer to send for a box, which he reluctantly did, and after receiving them decided to give them a fair trial. The first box relieved him in a surprising manner; yet he was not convinced that it was the medicine that had helped him, but the weather, which had turned pleasant, and did not send for a further supply until he was again about as bad as before taking the pills. Then he concluded he would make another trial, and took three boxes, and today is nearly if not quite as well as before the attack of la grippe. It is needless to state he cannot say too much for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for people who have been left in poor health from la grippe or any other cause. Anyone wishing to test the validity of this letter can write Mr. Nye, No. 2500 Olive Street, Cedar Falls, Iowa, and he will cheerfully recommend the medicine, and state his condition before and after using.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Oats as a Nurse Crop for Clover.

I want to give the readers of your paper my experience in getting a stand of clover with oats as a nurse crop as most of the articles written on the subject have been to discourage the sowing of clover with oats. I will say on the start that I have not failed to get a stand of clover during the last seven or eight years by following this plan. I think the great trouble with most farmers is they don't sow enough of seed to the acre, with the result of only getting part of a stand and in some cases none at all. My plan is to sow the clover seed the first thing, not less than a bushel to six acres. One of my neighbors sows a bushel to four acres, "with good results," then sow my oats, two and a half bushels to the acre, and cultivate in with the disc give two good horrowings with the result of the average crop of oats of the neighborhood and and always a fair stand of clover. I don't advise the sowing of timothy with clover on this plan for you will get the timothy to deep, while the clover needs to be planted deep to stand the dry weather.

Garner, March 5.—Five men were arrested here for taking several pairs of shoes from the store of John Runtzel. It was afterwards found that they had been busily engaged during their stay in Garner, as they had numerous articles belonging to different merchants which was identified. Upon preliminary examination they all pleaded not guilty, but before the evidence could be taken, parties from Mason City were on the scene and wanted to assist the prosecution. Our officers being liberal fellows, offered them part of the outfit and they returned to Mason City with two of the gentlemen, where they will be carefully looked after. They will all have an opportunity to inspect the machinery of the grand jury.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

Corn Converted Into Soap.

The Crystal White Soap company of Des Moines, which is owned by the Mason brothers, has just completed a series of experiments in soap manufacture that bid fair to revolutionize the vegetable soap business of the country and to furnish a market for the surplus corn grown in the middle west. In short, they have discovered making soap from corn.—Ex.

THE INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT McKINLEY.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President-elect McKinley and party arrived in Washington on a special train about 11:15 o'clock Tuesday morning and were driven to the Ebbitt house, where Mr. McKinley made his home while a member of congress. In accordance with Mr. McKinley's expressed wish, there was no escort or display connected with his entry into the national capital. It had been arranged that a company of militia should receive and escort him up the avenue, but the president-elect vetoed this program. Major McKinley spent the afternoon in consultation with a number of party leaders and at 7:30 p. m. was driven to the White House, where he took dinner with President and Mrs. Cleveland.

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning Major McKinley, accompanied by Private Secretary Porter, made a brief formal call upon President Cleveland at the White House, and an hour later the president, in company with Secretary Thurber, returned the call and paid his respects to the president-elect at his apartments in the Ebbitt house.

At 10:30 this morning President-elect McKinley was driven to the White House, escorted by the senate committee appointed for that purpose, where in one of the handsome state apartments he was received and welcomed by President Cleveland and his cabinet. Then the two presidents descended the White House steps and together entered a four-horse carriage, Mr. Cleveland sitting to the right, and amid the booming of cannon, the clatter of cavalry, the deep, hoarse rumble of artillery, the measured tramp of many columns of infantry, and the blare of innumerable bands, the march to the capitol began. In another four-horse carriage following the president rode Vice-President-elect Hobart and the senators deputed to escort him to the scene of his future duties. Then in a long stream of carriages came the distinguished guests. The president's personal escort was troop A., of Cleveland, Ohio, 100 cavalrymen mounted on coal black chargers, and still more interesting a detachment of grizzled veterans from the 23d Ohio Volunteers, Major McKinley's old regiments.

Gen. Nelson Miles, commanding the United States army, and Rear Admiral George Brown, ranking officer of the navy, in full uniform, rode immediately after the presidential party. The second brigade of the first division consisted of the national guard of the District of Columbia. A more brilliant and inspiring scene than this part of the pageant could hardly be pictured.

The second division of the parade was not secondary to the first in public interest except that it lacked the presence of a president to be and a president that had been. In lieu thereof it presented to the admiring plaudits of the crowds the governors of ten great states, each escorted by a gorgeously uniformed staff and detachments from the national guards of their states.

At the head of the division, a fitting honor to the state from which the president-elect was chosen, rode Gov. Asa S. Bushnell, of Ohio, as marshal. Then followed Gov. Hastings of Pennsylvania, Gov. Lowndes of Maryland, Gov. Black of New York, Gov. Grout of Vermont, Gov. Drake of Iowa, and Gov. Schofield of Wisconsin. Each of these dignitaries was accompanied by numerous aides and most of them by regiments or companies of their state national guard. In this latter manner the states of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Virginia, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Texas and Minnesota were also well represented.

At the head of the third and last division of the military parade rode one-armed Gen. O. O. Howard, and after him marched the grizzled veterans of the G. A. R., many of whom had served under him at Gettysburg and Chattanooga.

The grand marshal of this splendid pageant was Gen. Horace Porter, formerly of the staff of Gen. Grant, and U. S. Grant, Webb C. Hayes, Harry A. Garfield, Chester A. Arthur and Russell Harrison served as special aides.

In the meantime the houses of congress were making preparations for their part in the ceremonies. The house of representatives, headed by Speaker Reed, proceeded to the senate chamber, where seats had been provided them. Vice-president Adlai E. Stevenson presided over the joint assembly, but simply till the hour should arrive when he should step down and make way for his successor. The eight justices of the supreme court of the United States, robed in silk gowns, but wearing no wigs, occupied a front row of chairs to the right of the presiding officer. Behind them, in their order of precedence, entered the diplomatic corps, all of whom, except the representatives of the Swiss and South and Central American republics, were resplendent in official uniform and adorned with the insignia of decorations conferred. Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, took precedence; he was followed by the French and German ambassadors; the Mexican and Austrian ministers, and, vividly conspicuous in their quaint silken dresses, the members of the Chinese legation came next. They were the only Orientals who wore their national costume. When promptly at noon, President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley entered the chamber, the whole assembly rose to receive them as they took the seats of honor set apart for their reception. Vice-president Stevenson, to whom the senate accorded a unanimous vote of thanks for his courtesy and ability in the chair, returned his thanks in graceful terms and declared the senate adjourned without day.

The extra session of the senate of the Fifty-fifth congress called by President Cleveland to meet at 12 noon, March 4th, then commenced. The late vice-president made way for his successor, Mr. Hobart, to whom the oath of office was administered, after which he made a brief address. He then proceeded in his turn to swear in such as were present of the thirty senators whose terms either of election or re-election began contemporaneously with that of the president. This ceremony completed, both houses of congress and many of the more privileged spectators adjourned to the eastern portico. There in the presence of an immense throng Chief Justice Fuller administered to President McKinley the brief obligation prescribed to maintain the constitution and enforce the laws of the United States.

Immediately after taking the oath of office President McKinley began his inaugural address. In reference to the financial question he said our financial system needs some revision and if congress should create a commission to take under early consideration the revision of the coinage, banking and currency law he would heartily concur in such action. He would also work constantly to secure bimetallism by cooperation with the other great commercial powers of the world. Until this is secured the value of the silver already coined must be kept constantly at par with gold by every resource at our command. He urged the severest economy in all public expenditures, and declared the paramount duty of congress was to stop deficiencies "by restoration of that protective legislation which has always been the firmest prop of the treasury." They must also give especial attention to the reenactment of extension of the reciprocity principle of the law of 1890. The constitution must be upheld and lynchings cease. The party pledge to adopt measures for the suppression of trusts and combinations must be carried out. The naturalization and immigration laws should be remodeled. Reforms in the civil service must go on. Congress should give prompt attention to the restoration of the American merchant marine. He declared in favor of arbitration and said war should never be entered into until every agency of peace has failed. The arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States should receive prompt action by the senate as a duty to mankind. The condition of the public treasury, he asserted, demands prompt action, and in response to what he considered his duty he would convene congress in extraordinary session on Monday, March 15. In conclusion President McKinley repeated the obligation administered to him by the chief justice and said: "This is the obligation I have reverently taken before the Lord Most High. To keep it will be my single purpose, my constant prayer—and I shall confidently rely upon the forbearance and assistance of all the people in the discharge of my solemn responsibilities."

Immediately after the close of his address President McKinley and ex-President Cleveland re-entered their carriages and were driven to the White House amid tumultuous cheers all along the route, this time President McKinley occupying the seat of honor to the right. The procession, re-enforced by numerous civic organizations, re-formed and marched down the avenue and past the White House, where it was reviewed by the president and his friends from a special stand erected for that purpose in front of the edifice.

The parade was more than three hours in passing the reviewing stand. It is estimated that there were twenty thousand men in line.

To-night there was an illumination and a display of fireworks in the Washington monument grounds, beginning at 7:45 o'clock. The inaugural ball was held in the pension building, the doors being opened at 8 o'clock and the ceremonies beginning at 9 o'clock.

The presidential party arrived at the ball at 9:45 o'clock. President and Mrs. McKinley were escorted by Gen. Nelson A. Miles and Gen. J. M. Wilson, of the army. After them came Vice-President Hobart and Mrs. Hobart, John Addison Porter, the president's brother, Abner McKinley, and several members of the McKinley and Hobart families.

There was a vast crowd in attendance and the decorations overshadowed anything of the kind ever seen in Washington. About $13,000 had been expended by the committee in charge of this work. At an early hour President McKinley returned to the White House.

In many respects this inauguration will go down to history as excelling all that have come before. The decorations in the city, public and private, were more elaborate and beautiful than any ever seen even in this city. The magnificent body of federal troops was more numerous than any gathered since Grant's display at the close of the war. Seventeen states had citizens in parade and over sixty civil organizations helped to swell its magnificent proportions. To witness all this display there was a mighty gathering of American people in the capital. The weather was beautiful.

Decorations Were Gorgeous.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The center of interest in the decorations of the city was Pennsylvania avenue—stretching, an unbroken sheet of asphalt 150 feet broad and a mile long, from the foot of the capitol to the foot of the treasury, and thence, after a short break at Fifteenth street, for another mile and a half past the north front of the treasury, past the White House and the senate, war and navy departments, to Washington City. There the inaugural procession turned on its backward march past the reviewing stand of the grand marshal on K. street. It is one of the most remarkable thoroughfares among the capitals of the nation, and its decoration for the American Olympiad was a matter of long thought and of expenditure of money. The great trough of buildings from the from the capitol to the treasury, one of the most magnificent vistas in the world of cities, cannot brook any cheap adornments and this year the decorations were abundant. The avenve was a wealth of bunting. There were flags of all nations waving from the windows or floating from every available flag pole. Probably every flag in the international code was represented, from the stars and stripes and the ble cross of St. George to the white elephat of Siam and the yellow dragon of China.

VICE-PRESIDENT HOBART.

The Inaugural Bible.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The bible on which Mr. McKinley took the oath of office as president of the United States is an unusually handsome copy of the testaments made especially for the occasion in Ohio, and presented by Bishop Arnett, of Wilberforce college, a colored institution in the Buckeye state, on behalf of the African Methodist Episcopal church. Its covers are of blue morocco with satin linings, white satin panels and gilt edges. A gold plate in the center will be engraved with the following inscription: "William McKinley, President of the United States of America, Inaugurated March 4, 1897."

Ex-President Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Ex-President Cleveland immediately after the inauguration and while President McKinley was reviewing the inaugural parade, left Washington at 4 o'clock on the light house tender Maple, as the guest of Captain Robley Evans and Commander Lamberton, for a ten days' trip in Currituck Sound, back of Cape Hatteras. Captain Leonard Wood, an army surgeon, accompanied the party. At 10 o'clock the cabinet ladies gathered and bade good-bye to Mrs. Cleveland. These leave takings were emphasized by evidences of regret and demonstrated the affection in which Mrs. Cleveland is held by those who know her most intimately. This afternoon Mrs. Cleveland departed for her home in Princeton, N. J.

A WONDERFUL SHRUB.

One of the latest botanical discoveries of interest to seekers for health is called Alkavis, from the Kava-Kava shrub of India. It is being imported by the Church Kidney Cure company of New York, and is a certain cure for several bodily disorders. The Kava-Kava shrub, or, as botanists call it, "Piper Methysticum," grows on the banks of the Ganges river, and probably was used for centuries by the natives before its extraordinary properties became known to civilization through Christian missionaries. In this respect it resembles the discovery of quinine from the peruvian bark, made known by the Indians to the early missionaries in South America, and by them brought to civilized man. It is a wonderful discovery, with a record of 1,200 hospital cures in thirty days. It acts directly upon the blood and kidneys, and is a true specific, just as quinine is in malaria. We have the strongest testimony of many ministers of the gospel, well known doctors and business men cured by Alkavis. So far the Church company, No. 422 Fourth avenue, New York, are the only importers of this new remedy, and they are so anxious to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of this paper who is a sufferer from any form of kidney or bladder disorder, Bright's disease, rheumatism, dropsy, gravel, pain in back, female complaints or other afflictions due to improper action of the kidneys or urinary organs. We advise all sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, March 1.—At 11 o'clock Sunday night the senate passed the sundry civil bill and then adjourned until 11 o'clock. The important act of the day was the counteracting by unanimous vote of President Cleveland's recent order withdrawing 21,000,000 of land from the public domain and establishing it as a forest reserve.

At to-day's session the District of Columbia appropriation bill passed. The naval appropriation bill caused a warm debate as to the prices to be paid for armor plate, the prices being finally reduced to $300 per ton, $100 less than the recommendations of the committee. At midnight the bill passed and the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Dull routine business occupied the time of the house until the last hour. Then bill to prohibit the transmission of detailed accounts of prize fights by mail or telegraph was taken up and debated, but no vote reached. A bill passed to provide for transmission to Washington of presidential election returns by mail. The bill abolishes the system of messengers won employed.

SENATE.

Washington, March 2.—The bill for an international monetary conference passed after two hours' debate in which Dubois and Teller spoke on the futility of the movement and declared the incoming administration would be opposed to a policy of bimetallism. Deficiency appropriation bill was passed at a late hour.

HOUSE.

House disagreed to senate amendments to naval appropriation bill, including reduction of price of armor from $560 to $300 per ton. The vote of Judge Shiras on the income tax decision came in for a warm discussion. A message was received from the president with his veto of the immigration bill. The president stated that he believed the provisions of the bill were unnecessarily harsh and oppressive and would result in harm to citizens of the United States.

SENATE.

Washington, March 3.—The postoffice and fortification bills were soon out of the way. Report on Indian appropriation bill was agreed to, as was also the report on the District of Columbia bill. In the interests of Pennsylvania armor manufacturers Quay spent the hours until adjournment filibustering against any business, with a view to bringing a reconsideraton of the provision by which the price on armor plate was reduced, declaring that he would block the sundry civil and deficiency bills if the action was insisted upon.

HOUSE.

By a vote of 193 to 37 the house passed the immigration bill over the president's veto. House agreed to provision in naval bill fixing price of armor plate at $300 per ton, and the bill was disposed of. Agreement on fortifications bill was endorsed. Senate amendments to Indian bill were accepted, as were also the conference reports on the District of Columbia bill and the sundry civil bill. A reduction of 12½ per cent on appropriations for rivers and harbors was made in the latter bill.

SENATE.

Washington, March 4.—The senate was in session all night. At 6 a. m. a recess was taken until 9 a. m., at which time the sundry civil bill was signed by the vice-president. At 9:40 the deficiency bill was agreed to and at 11 the labor commission bill was signed by the vice-president. At noon the senate adjourned sine die.

HOUSE.

Senate amendment to labor commission bill was agreed to, as was also the conference report on the deficiency bill. A vote of thanks was extended to Speaker Reed and he responded briefly, after which, at 11:55, the house adjourned without day.

SOME BILLS SIGNED, SOME NOT.

President Cleveland at the last moment signed the fortification, postoffice, District of Columbia, and naval appropriation bills, upon the assurances of of the cabinet officers, who had examined them, but insisted upon a more thorough examination of the sundry civil and Indian appropriation bills. At half past ten the president informed the cabinent that he would sign nothing else, leaving among others, the great sundry civil, Indian service, agricultural and deficiency appropriation bills to die.

SENATE.

Washington, March 5.—The credentials of Mark Hanna were presented by Foraker and Mr. Hanna was sworn in. President McKinley sent to the senate the following nominations: John Sherman, of Ohio, to be secretary of state; Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois, to be secretary of the treasury; Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, to be secretary of war; Joseph McKenna, of California, to be attorney general; James A. Gary, of Maryland, to be postmaster general; John D. Long, of Massachusetts, to be secretary of the navy; Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York, to be secretary of the interior; James Wilson, of Iowa, to be secretary of agriculture. All of these nominations were confirmed.

Strike Involves 25,000.

CHICAGO, March 6.—At a meeting of the Building Trades Council it was decided that the 4,000 union hod carriers should strike against the reduction in wages ordered by the plastering contractors' association. With the hod carriers the 25,000 members of the building trade council will go out, and building operations will practically cease. As the building trades are well organized, the contest may prove long and bitter.

Germany's Navy.

BERLIN, March 7.—The government has asked that 328,000,000 marks be appropriated by the reishctag for the purpose of replenishing the navy during the next four years. Five ironclads, ten cruisers and twenty-two torpedo boats are among the contemplated improvements.

THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

Intelligent Women Prepare for the Trying Ordeal.

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases.

The anxiety felt by women as the "change of life" draws near, is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, it is at this period likely to become active and with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden. Cancer often shows itself, and does its destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, headache, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, dizziness, etc., are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life where woman's great change may be expected. Thousands at this critical time consult Mrs. Pinkham, and conduct their habits according to her advice, and with the Vegetable Compound go through that distressing time with perfect safety and comfort. Mrs. W. L. Day, of Bettsville, Ohio, says:—

"When all else failed, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life. It carried me through the change of life all right, and I am now in good health. It also cured my husband of kidney trouble."

"Your Ruling Planet Discovered By Astrology" is the title of Prof. G. W. Cunningham's new work on this wonderful and mystical science. Written in plain, comprehensive language. Every page sparkles with gems of information. Every reader will acquire amazing and startling knowledge of the secret, ancient learning of "The Wise Men of the East." You will see at once which is your own, or your friends' ruling planet. Price, postpaid, 25c, 50c and $1.00, according to binding.

THE ASTROLOGER'S CORNER.

Some slight changes necessitated using less space for this department. Prof Cunningham is daily receiving flattering testimonials of his genius and marvelous power in reading the language of the signs and planets. His horoscope life readings with chart are daily convincing people of the great and VALUABLE INFORMATION to be had through his wonderful knowledge of astrology. He receives letters from every state and territory and his fame has extended into foreign lands.

Under no circumstances will names of correspondents be published, but the following are extracts from recent letters: "I received my horoscope, am much pleased with it. It is as near right as is possible to make it." Another writes: "I am surprised at its correctness."

Prof. Cunningham now proposes to tell your ruling planet and send a test reading ABSOLUTELY FREE to the applicants whose letters happen to be the First, Third, Ninth and Twelfth opened from each day's mail. All aspirants for these FREE READINGS must send: sex, race or nationality, place, year, month, date, hour and minute of birth, A. M. or P. M., as near as possible. Applicants entitled to FREE READINGS will receive them by return mail with their 24 cents refunded less 2 cents postage. All applicants must send 24 cents to pay for their reading in case they do not win FREE reading. DO NOT DELAY; send at once; you are just as apt to win as anybody, and if you do not, you will receive a valuable test by astrology for the small sum of 24 cents. Those not knowing their time of birth should send 4 cents for further instructions. These rules apply to all applications. No more applications for readings to be published will be received; there are more now than probably can ever be published, owing to changes that are likely to occur at any time, so all who have applied for readings to be published should enclose 24 cents in stamps and take part in the above contest. About 100 letters have been returned to me "unclaimed." All who gave fictitious names had better correct the error at once. Wonderful Horoscope Readings with Chart at from $1.00 to $5.00. Their completeness will be in accordance with amount of money sent. I will not be responsible for money sent in a letter. Send money order or stamps. Address

THE FOLLOWING ARE SOME READINGS FOR THIS WEEK:

Jamie, Walnut Springs, Texas. According to the data furnished you are a mixture of the indications of the signs Aries and Taurus, as well as the planets Mars, Venus and Neptune. You are medium height; plump form; the complexion, hair and eyes, medium to light; you are dignified in general appearance; you are endowed by nature with an industrious, ambitious, energetic disposition; you can endure but little opposition without losing self-control, however you will soon regain your normal mental status again. You are fond of the occult and mysterious and especially astrology. You are also fond of the fine arts, music, poetry, etc. You would make a good astrologer if you would study it. You had better avoid marriage.

Mrs. S. B., 2611 Capitol. According to data the zodiacal sign Leo, which the sun rules, was rising at your birth, therefore the sun is your ruling planet, or significator. You are tall, slender, muscular and wiry; the shoulders wide in proportion to the rest of the body; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; the eyes have rather a fierce expression; you are proud, dignified and commanding; endowed with great ambition, energy and will power; you are very magnetic and have the faculty of convincing people to think the same as you do; you are fond of having your own way and are a natural leader in anything you may become interested in. You always have trouble with love affairs.

Obituary.

Christopher John Gruetzmacher passed away Monday morning March 15th, 1897, at 8 o'clock, after a short illness caused by a paralytic stroke, at the home of his son George Gruetzmacher, Klemme, Iowa.

Mr. Gruetzmacher was born in Wismar Germany Nov. 2, 1824. He moved to Columbus, Wisconsin, about 42 years ago; was one of the pioneers in that part of the state, where he was widely known, loved and respected by all. He moved with his family to Hancock Co. Iowa, about 7 years ago. He united with the German Methodist Episcopal church soon after he came to America and lived a faithful, noble, every day christian life until the day of his demise. He was taken ill Wednesday night at about midnight and was unconscious until Thursday afternoon, when he recognized the Mother, his dear wife and taking her by the hand pointed toward heaven, smiled and tried to make her understand that she would soon follow him to that heavenly home. At other times flashes of consciousness would pass over his face, but not long enough for him to speak. He died unconscious of any pain whatever. He leaves a wife, the companion of his life for 44 years a noble christian, a loving wife, and a gentle loving Mother, with whom all trials and troubles have been born together in perfect harmony; six sons: John, George, Henry, Charley, Frank, all residents of Klemme and Rev. Fred C. of South Bend, Ind., tomourn his loss.

The funeral was held Wednesday at 1 o'clock, from the German M. E. Church, Rev. Haefner, conducting the services. assisted by Rev. Welemeyer and Rev. C. E. Anderson. The floral peices were very beautiful, artistic and appropriate. One a beautiful pillar of flowers with the word, Father; another a sickle with a sheaf of ripe grain, another an anchor of hope. The remains were followed by a large concourse of relatives, friends and neighbors to the Germantown cemetery, where the last sad rites were performed. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement.

Prince Hilkoff, the Russian minister of ways and communications, in an interview at Niagara Falls, N. Y., said that the present policy of the Russian government in regard to the extension of railroads is to extend trade and to furnish further outlets to tidewater, rather than to build for military purposes. Many roads are now in process of construction besides the great Transsiberian undertaking, and immediate plans for the enlargement of the Russian railway system include the building of 2,000 miles of new track. These new facilities will open up many new industries, will facilitate the development of Russian iron mines and petroleum wells, and will secure means of communication for large agricultural districts.

An amusing story is told at the expense of a military martinet in Germany, who undertook to snub a lieutenant at a ball in Berlin. The colonel noticed a large badge richly set with diamonds on the breast of the young officer's uniform. Going to the lieutenant, he inquired with a patronizing air: "Young man, what is that thing you have there?" "It is an order, colonel." "An order!" exclaimed the veteran, with a sneer. "It is not Prussian, for I don't recognize it." "It is an English order," replied the lieutenant. "Who could have given you such an order?" "My grandmother, colonel." "Your grandmother!" shouted the colonel, with a laugh. "Pray tell me her name." "Her Majesty, Victoria, Queen of England." The burly martinet did not continue the conversation, but bowed obsequiously to the lieutenant—who was Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein—and after an awkward pause retired from the scene. He had not recognized the prince, and in attempting to chaff him over the display made of a diamond-studded decoration, had unconsciously violated royal etiquette and made himself ridiculous.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

AFTER A DEFAULTER.

President of the First National Bank of Griswold Wanted by Uncle Sam.

GRISWOLD, March 12.—Federal officials are looking for Theo. H. Brown, president of the First National bank of Griswold. He left Griswold on the 27th of February, and was heard of a few days ago in Mexico. The bank is in the hands of a receiver, Mr. Hendricks, from Council Bluffs, appointed by the comptroller of the currency. The bank is in very bad shape, and the case bids fair to be worse than the Cass County bank. It has been anticipated for some time and the deposits have run down from $135,000 a year ago to about $40,000, so the local business men will not be heavy losers, except as some of them are stockholders. Ex-Governor Larrabee holds stock amounting to $5,000.

IOWA'S FEDERAL OFFICES.

Caucus of Congressional Delegation Decides the Matter.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—It is rumored that at a caucus of the Iowa congressional delegation the federal officers in Iowa were decided upon as follows: Southern district—Lewis Miles, attorney; George M. Christian, marshal; John M. Kemble, revenue collector. Northern district—H. G. McMillan, attorney; Ed. Knott, marshal; J. A. Patterson, revenue collector. If the pension office is to remain in Iowa E. F. Sperry, of Knoxville, will be the pension agent at Des Moines. It is also stated that E. H. Conger will go to Brazil if the delegation can secure his appointment.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Little Harris Larson, of Washington Prairie, Badly Mangled.

DECORAH, March 12.—A horrible accident, which resulted in the immediate death of Harris Larson, 9-year-old son of Andrew Larson, of Kongskowen, occurred at his home on Washington Prairie. Men were sawing wood on the farm with a circular saw, propelling it with horse power. The boy in some manner is supposed to have grasped the tumbling rod, which immediately jerked one arm out of the socket and apart from the rest of the body, while the other arm and side were badly crushed. The little fellow died instantly.

VERDICT OF GUILTY.

Stuart Parties Convicted of Attempted Extortion.

GUTHRIE CENTER, March 14.—The jury in the district court brought in a verdict of guilty as charged by an indictment of the grand jury against Walt Smith and George Debold of Stuart for attempting to extort $1,000 by threats of an aggravating character against G. J. Simcoke, an influential and much respected citizen of Stuart.

COURTNEY SENTENCED.

Given Eighteen Months in the Penitentiary—An Appeal Taken.

MT. PLEASANT, March 12.—Judge Roberts overruled a motion for a new trial in the Courtney case and sentenced the defendant to serve eighteen months in the penitentiary at Ft. Madison. An appeal bond for $1,500 was at once filed and also a bill of exceptions to take the case to the supreme court.

New Manufacturing Bill.

DES MOINES, March 15.—Senator Ellis, chairman of the sub-committee of the senate committee on suppression of intemperance, has prepared another substitute for the house bill which he will present to the full committee at their next meeting. The bill is substantially the same as the former substitute bill, but two sections have been added. They embody the following principles: No drinking or retailing shall be done at the place of manufacture. Manufacture shall be permissable only where the mulct is in operation. Senator Ellis believes the two additional sections will add strength to the bill.

Burlington Crook Sentenced.

BURLINGTON, March 14.—"Red" O'Brien, well known in Burlington, having been born and raised in this city, was sentenced to fourteen years in the prison at Savannah, Mo., for bank robbery, committed at St. Joseph, February 6, 1896. "Red," as he is known in Burlington, was thought to be implicated in the numerous safe robberies during Chief of Police Denny Murphy's regime, but nothing could be proven. He was also suspected of cracking the safe at Fort Madison, which contained the county funds. His mother is an estimable woman, still residing in Burlington.

Indians Call on Governor.

DES MOINES, March 13.—A delegation of Tama Indians called upon the governor and laid a complaint before him that the county authorities were building a road across their reservation, which was contrary to their contract with the state when they purchased the land. Governor Drake promised them he would investigate the matter and see that justice was done them.

IOWA BUTTER.

Great Development of the Dairy Interests During 1896.

DES MOINES, March 13.—According to the report of Dairy Commissioner Boardman, Iowa shipped 80,032,916 pounds of butter to other states in 1896, an increase of 13,535,808 pounds over 1895. Most of the Iowa made butter is marketed in New York, though Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Baltimore get large shipments. The record of butter shipped to principal markets shows that 44,264,105 pounds were so marketed. The average New York price was 18.82 cents. According to the report, there are now 810 creameries in the state. Of this number 424 are operated by individuals, 81 by stock companies and 304 by the co-operative plan, which, the report says, is the most practical and successful plan now known.

A WOMAN FATALLY BURNED.

Her Dress Caught Fire From the Stove.

BURLINGTON, March 23.—While Mrs. S. H. Woodard, living near the city, was doing the housework, her dress caught fire from the stove and she was quickly enveloped in flames. Her husband and the neighbors came to her rescue, but she was unconscious with pain when the flames were extinguished. Her entire body was roasted, and she lay in the acutest agony for two hours before a physician arrived. No hope is expressed for her recovery. Mr. Woodard's hands were seriously burned in putting out the flames.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Two burglars named Bennett and Payne touched off a burglar alarm in a store at Cooper, a few nights ago, which awoke the proprietor at his home and he dropped upon them with a shotgun. Sheriff Thompson lodged them in jail and found two skeleton keys upon them.

Oskaloosa dispatch: David Barnes and J. W. Stafford, the men who swapped wives, have been arrested on the charge of bigamy. It is not stated how the charge will hold, but it is believed certain irregularities in the divorce proceedings will be found. The fact that an understanding had been entered into before the divorces were brought, may admit the entering wedge.

Fire broke out in the restaurant of Carelton Bros., at Humeston, a few nights since and by reason of the high wind which was then raging, the following frame buildings were soon destroyed: Klopenstein's millinery. Benfield restaurant, Pearson's barber shop, Hainlain's meat market, post-office, W. A. Alexander's drug store, Hine's millinery, Collins Bros.' general store, McCullough's harness shop, Mintonia's tin shop.

While attempting to secure his son's release from jail in Sioux City, W. L. Handy of Wausau, Neb., succeeded in getting himself incarcerated. E. W. Handy, the son, was recently arrested on a charge of passing a bogus check. His father came to Sioux City to settle the difficulty. When his son's release was promised only on payment of the checks and court costs, Handy grew so abusive that he himself was locked up on a charge of compounding a felony.

Oskaloosa dispatch: The jury in the case against George Lewis returned a verdict finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter. Lewis is colored and was cooking in a restaurant in Muchakinock at the time the crime was committed. He had a quarrel with Sam Porterfield and snatched up a shotgun, as he claimed, in self-defense. Porterfield started for him and Lewis shot. The load took effect in Porterfield's leg, severing a big artery, and he died a few hours later.

At Des Moines recently George Day, a young man aged 19 years, who lived with his parents a short distance north of Highland Park, fell to the bottom of the shaft in the Lake Park mine and was instantly killed. From the landing where Day entered the shaft to the bottom was a distance of 140 feet. The whole affair was accidental. He stepped into the shaft believing that the cage was at the point where he stood, but it had been lowered.

Grinnell dispatch: Notwithstanding the denials by the parties interested, work is still being done in the way of securing names to a petition for Chet Rowe's release from Belim prison, Mexico. From reliable authority it is known that Rowe has made a definite proposition in writing that if he can be pardoned by the Mexican authorities he will make no trouble in the way of his being extradited and brought back to Montezuma, where he will stand trial and plead guilty, and thus he can change his quarters from a very undesirable Mexican prison to one of the most comfortable homes that any criminal has prepared for him, that at Anamosa. One thing is very plain, and that is that if Chet Rowe's bodily health is impaired his mind is as clear as ever. For in this letter he promises to give up to the bondsmen $10,000 in money and a good note for $5,000. He lays out the whole plan.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

ATHENS, March 9.—The reply of Greece to the powers is conciliatory in tone, fully recognizing the important objects the powers have in view, and offering to withdraw her fleet from Cretan waters. Greece, however, points to the fact that it is impossible for her to withdraw her troops from that island in view of the danger of further massacres. On the other hand, Greece offers to place her troops in Crete under the control of the powers in order that they may be available for the restoration of order. Referring to the statements made that the Cretans prefer autonomy to annexation to Greece, the government of Greece suggests that they be allowed to choose their own government. Greece, the reply adds, is convinced that autonomy will not pacify Creete, and that another chapter in the horrors of fanaticism will be added to the six periods of anarchy which have already decimated the island. The Greek government holds that order in Crete would be immediately restored if the powers would have confidence in the Greek troops and permit them to join in the work of pacifying the island.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 10.—The diplomats here have received the answer of the porte to the collective note of the powers setting forth the desires of the powers regarding the granting of autonomy to Crete under the suzerainty of Turkey. The porte assents to the terms of the powers and says it hopes that there will be a definite understanding between itself and the powers respecting the details of the autonomy to be granted.

LONDON, March 9.—In the house of commons Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt asked the government for a promise that the British forces should not be used against Greece before parliament had been consulted. Mr. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, declined to pledge the government to the course suggested by Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt, but said that they were acting with a full sense of their responsibility and in behalf of Cretan liberty and European peace.

LONDON, March 10.—It is learned in official quarters that there is not the slightest chance that the powers will tolerate the presence of Greek troops in Canea. As soon as the powers have had time to exchange views, Greece will be notified of the measures decided on for the immediate enforcement of their decision. Negotiations will not last long.

CANEA, March 11.—The insurgents shelled the town of Candamo and the Turkish troops were compelled to surrender. The insurgents took all the arms and ammunition from the troops. The powers then interfered and took the Turks to Canea.

BELGRADE, Servia, March 11.—The entire army reserve and both classes of the militia are called out in detachments. It is given out as the reason that they are to undergo maneuvers in March and April.

ATHENS, March 12.—The general opinion here is that war with Turkey is unavoidable. The gunboats Acteon and Ambracia, with the gun vessel Aphroessia, have been ordered to blockade the Gulf of Arta, in order to prevent the landing of Turkish troops. It is believed that armed bands that have been sent out by the National League to different points in Epirus and Macedonia will give the signal for the struggle, and the Greek army on the frontier will then proceed to an invasion of Turkish territory.

CANEA, March 13.—The commanders of the Greek cruisers Alphois and Pinios are still in Cretan waters and in a difficult position. Their express orders are only to retire from Canea bay under protest, but on no account to leave Cretan waters. They are ordered to "resist to the death any attack upon them, for the honor of the Greek flag and nation which reposes confidence in the sons of heroes."

LONDON, March 15.—The latest advices indicate that there will be no war in the east, but that the powers will decide upon a pacific blockade of Greece and that Greece will thus be compelled to yield.

Big Help for Cuba.

NEW YORK, March 15.—A Sun special from Key West, Fla., says: It is said that Gen. Carlos Roloff has landed in Cuba the most important expedition which has sailed from this country since the beginning of the Cuban war. It carried three cannon and two quick-firing guns, besides 5,000 rifles and a large stock of ammunition.

German Naval Estimates.

BERLIN, March 13.—The budget committee of the reichstag has approved the goverment's estimate of 20,000,000 marks for the purpose of building new battleships. It is regarded as doubtful, however, that the credits demanded by the government for the construction of two additional cruisers will be passed by the reichstag.

FLOOD DAMAGE $6,000,000.

Railroad Through-Train Service Resumed—Repairing Tracks.

Louisville, Ky., March 13.—The Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway has 1,000 men at work repairing its track. Through trains between Cincinnati and St. Louis will now be run by the way of Louisville, leaving Cincinnati on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern tracks, entering Louisville by way of the Big Four bridge, leaving for the west over the St. Louis Air Line, and resuming its own tracks at Fairfield, Ill. The Monon had fully restored its service and the Pennsylvania is also making schedule time. During the flood all these roads used the track of the Big Four in and out of Louisville. The damage to the railroads done by the floods is estimated at $3,000,000 and the damage to county and indiviuals in the flooded district is estimated to be $3,000,000 more.

Gage Strikes a Snag.

Washington, March 13.—Secretary Gage ran against his first civil-service snag when he discovered that he could not remove the superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing. The office is held by Claude M. Johnson of Kentucky and he can not be removed except on charges. The position pays $4,500 a year and is one of the most important in the department.

WEYLER IS ALARMED.

Rushing Troops to Santa Clara to Head Off An Attack.

HAVANA, March 12.—The presence in Santa Clara of the Mallorca battalion, commanded by Gen. Segura and that commanded by Col. Alsina, belonging to Weyler's brigade, seems to indicate an important movement of the rebels in that direction and that Weyler is rushing troops to that city, fearing an attack on the same. The town of Marianao, on the outskirts of Havana, was fired upon, creating great alarm.

Mississippi Continues to Rise.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 15.—The Mississippi river continues to rise at an alarming rate. It has already reached a very critical stage, and there is prospect of records being broken. The levee at Marion has given away. A dozen negro cabins were swept away. No lives were lost. Hundreds of cattle have drowned.

McKinley's Cuban Policy.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—It is understood that at the cabinet meeting the Cuban situation was discussed and that the discussion ended with the understanding that the policy hitherto pursued of strict neutrality and enforcement of our neutrality laws would be adhered to so long as the conditions remained as at present.

Live Stock Thrown Overboard.

LIVERPOOL, March 13.—The steamer Lake Winnipeg, from St. John, N. B., had a terrible voyage. It became necessary to throw 300 head of cattle, twenty-five horses and seventy-five sheep overboard on account of the scarcity of drinking water.

Against Gold Clause Mortgage.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 14.—The house passed a bill prescribing what shall be legal tender in Nebraska. The bill is intended to prevent the insertion of a gold clause in mortgages, etc.

BREVITIES.

Dispatches received recently from Rio Janeiro say the situation in Bahia, Brazil, is becoming more serious. Colonel Gastro, director of two monarchist newspapers, has been assassinated and his office pillaged and burned.

Senator William B. Allison, chairman of the republican senatorial caucus, has named the remaining members of the republican steering committee. They are as follows: Allison, chairman; Hale, Aldrich, Cullom, Davis, Sewell and Carter.

At Philadelphia recently Captain John D. Hart, owner of the Cuban filibustering steamers Laurada and Bermuda, which have landed more men and ammunition in Cuba than any other steamers, and who recently was convicted therefor, was sentenced in federal court to two years' imprisonment and a fine of $500. Hart has been for many years engaged in the tropical fruit trade. Later a writ was granted, and Hart was released upon the entry of bail in the sum of $7,000.

Washington dispatch: The statement is made that President McKinley is opposed to the use of the United States navy in pursuing filibustering crafts engaged in carrying arms to Cuba. The president holds that if any crime against the laws of neutrality is committed by such shipments it is when the arms are landed in Cuba, not when they leave the United States or are in transit on the high seas. There will be no more detective work by the officials of the United States in the interest of Spain. The Spanish government must catch its own filibusters and do its own detective work. This rule, of course, applies merely to the shipment of arms and ammunition, and not to armed expeditions of men going forth to fight against a nation with which we are at peace.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XX.—(CONTINUED.)

She held up both hands to ward him off, and answered in a low, thrilling voice:

"I can die a thousand deaths, easier than accept the treacherous aid of my mother's murderer—though in this hour of terrible need."

"Perish then!" cried M. Pierre, passionately; "and with you the romantic swain who carried you to your underground retreat in the forest. You baffled me then, but this time there is no escape. You will die a horrible death, both of you; but a single word of appeal to me can save you."

"I scorn to use it!" said Lady Felicie, her eyes gleaming resolutely from the pale, pale face.

Jules drew her to him fondly.

"We can die together, if they will it so, my Chlotilde; but we shall die innocent, and unoffending."

"So be it then," retorted M. Pierre in the hoarse, vindictive tone of revengeful passion.

"Hist, citizens. I can expose to you two refugees from justice."

"Stay!" cried the Amazon, clapping her brawny hand upon his mouth; "the little thing is showing spirit now; let us take a little sport with her, before we give her up to the mob. But what is this story about the Gray Falson? The youth declares that she is no aristocrat, but the Gray Falcon's niece."

"A pretty falsehood to cheat you; the Gray Falcon never saw her, I'll be bound. Away with her!" cried M. Pierre, fairly foamnig with rage, and seizing the girl's arm, he tore her from the side of Jules.

Suddenly above the wild din and uproar Jules heard a calm, ringing voice. Well might it sound like an angel's to him. Emile had come!

"Citizens!" thundered he; "what means this uproar, and why do you drag away the only being left to cheer the Gray Falcon's heart? What has she done to provoke your displeasure? Wherein have I failed, that you withdraw your confidence from me? Who has a charge of disloyalty to freedom to cast in the Gray Falcon's beak?"

"None, none!" cried a hundred voices, as all eyes turned to the pedastal upon which he had mounted. "The Gray Falcon forever! 'Liberty and equality,' was always the Gray Falcon's motto. He was the first to warn us; the first to lead us on. The Gray Falcon is our leader."

Emile smiled proudly, though there was a stern sparkle in his eye, which betrayed the fierceness of his smothered anger.

Leaping down, he flew swiftly to where a group supported the fainting figure of Felicie, and catching her up in his arms, demanded sternly:

"Why is this innocent girl so roughly used; can any one explain?"

The Amazon elbowed her way toward him, dragging M. Pierre.

"This man proclaimed her an aristocrat, and a refugee. It shall be his turn, if he has lied to us."

M. Pierre began a fierce retort; but Emile's blazing eyes startled him and the fierce looks of the crowd showed that the Gray Falcon held control, for the time at least.

He stood cowering and trembling.

For a moment Emile, bearing up the insensible form of Felicie, stood sternly looking into that evil face.

Across both countenances went a flash of intelligence, though neither spoke.

"So, so! now is the mysterious escape from the forest explained to me," thought M. Pierre.

"There is no chance for further disguise; he knows what is my work now," echoed within Emile's noble heart.

Then waving his hand in calm dignity, said the latter, slowly and deliberately:

"Let us wrong no man, least of all a citizen. Give him a fair investigation; take him to the guard house; keep him safely till to-morrow noon. Then there will be opportunity for proper explanations, and justice can be done to all."

While he spoke, his eyes ran questioningly along the rows of upturned faces.

CHAPTER XXI.

JULES suspected for whom he was searching, and darted to his side.

"Let me help you carry the girl, citizen," said he, guardedly.

"Nay," interposed the same man who had kept such vigilant guard over their movements; "this man is one of our enemies, most worthy Falcon. I can swear to him before the court."

"He shall be closely guarded. I shall not allow him to leave my sight—nevertheless he may carry my niece for me till I can find a carriage," replied Emile, readily, without the slightest change of countenance.

"What frightened you away from the cottage? it was a very dangerous experiment, you perceive."

"M. Pierre came thither—Chlotilde recognized him, and was frantic to reach you. That detestable woman stopped us, and they compelled us to witness the execution of the queen."

Jules was anxiously chafing the cold hands of the insensible girl.

"Poor child!" muttered Emile; "if I could only keep her thus, and yet preserve her life, how much terror and anxiety she would be spared."

"She has borne a great deal. She repulsed that wretched Pierre with the heroism of a general. It was only when fairly in the hands of the mob, that her courage failed. Oh, Monsieur, Emile, what frightful scenes we have witnessed, what demoniac passions have seized the people! What is to be the end of it all?"

"Escape for us, I trust; but I dare not speak my plans, or even my thoughts aloud. I shall take you to my business office. I am kept at work all the time now by Robespierre, now by by Danton; the two work together now, but if my judgment be not at fault, there will be an open rupture presently. I think, however, the secret feud between them will help me. Robespierre will give me free passes to Dover, if I represent that Danton opposes the idea. I have always kept such an emergency as this in view, and have laid my plan of escape long ago; it is time now to test it. I wish Chlotilde were stronger."

While he spoke a feeble fluttering at the girl's throat gave sign of returning life. They bent over her tenderly.

The dark eyelashes lifted slowly—a great shudder shook her delicate frame—and springing up with the frantic strength lent by terror, she exclaimed:

"Oh, have mercy upon me! I am but a feeble girl. I never harmed one of you in my life; let me go in peace."

"My child," said Emile, with a smile of ineffable tenderness.

"Oh, Emile, you are here—you have saved me! Again do I owe my life to you. Heaven bless you! Heaven bless you!"

Emile, softly caressing the trembling hands, which had seized his, whispered gently:

"Be calm, dearest one; your agitation may be observed. We are not yet secure."

She obeyed him as meekly as a little child would have done, and though still trembling violently, sank upon the seat beside him, and assumed an air of composure.

Jules bent forward and whispered in her ear:

"Courage, dear Chlotilde; another day, and we shall have left these horrors all behind."

She smiled, trustfully relying on his assurance, and closing her eyes, spoke no farther; though the carriage soon after drew up before the huge narrow doorway leading to the Gray Falcon's gloomy apartments, and she was led up the dark flights of stairs into the upper story.

A sickly, effeminate-looking youth was writing there. He bowed respectfully in answer to the Gray Falcon's careless nod, but though evidently surprised to see his companions, he made no remark.

Emile drew forward the rude chairs.

"Take a seat, Chlotilde; you are greatly fatigued, and you have much more to endure. Leon, bring some wine, and get a basket of bread and meat from the cafe. You need not stir again until it is time for us to start."

The youth laid down his pen and went to the nail in one corner where hung his hat and cloak.

Emile followed him to the corridor.

"Make haste, Leon," said he, in a low voice, "because I can't lose sight of the young man, and want you to watch him while I go up to the Convention hall; he's a suspected aristocrat; but I can't get along without him in the job before me."

"More work!" responded Leon, carelessly.

"Yes, to trace some escaped refugees. My niece Chlotilde can identify the woman, but the young man only can make sure of the marquis that used to be. Hurry back, so that I can go to a consultation with Robespierre."

CHAPTER XXII.

HAVING given them due instructions concerning their behavior before his clerk, Emile left the pair to discuss the contents of the basket when Leon returned from the cafe, and set forth at once for the Hall of Convention, where he was certain to meet Robespierre, who was the acknowledged head of the Mountain Party, as it was called, which held sway above the Girondists almost as threateningly as a ainst the nobility.

He found the dread ruler of those stormy days in the very mood to further his plans.

The convention had adjourned, and the members were leaving their seats when Emile appeared. Robespierre stood by himself, his brow dark as night, his hands clenched threateningly.

"Let them beware," muttered he, "do they forget the fate of Grissot and Vergnaud? That insolent Danton shall follow in their steps, if he does not change his manners shortly."

Emile bowed with the utmost respect as he advanced.

"Ha, my brave Falcon, what is the word to-day?"

"The Gray Falcon waits but the word of Robespierre to pounce upon noble prey."

He listened heedlessly. His eye was following Danton, who, conversing with a knot of men at the door, was gesticulating violently.

Emile was acute enough to understand his mood.

"Citizen Danton would fain turn me aside; he calls it an idle move; he will give me no countenance, but I hoped better things from you, Robespierre."

"Ha, what has Danton to say about affairs in Paris, or in the assembly either? What do you want, my keen-eyed Falcon?"

"I have traced two aristocrats in their flight toward Dover—the daughter of Count Languedoc and a young Parisian Marquis. I want authority to follow and seize them. I will go to the very water's edge, but I will have them."

"And would Danton hinder? He is a traitor already. You shall go; come with me for the passport—the credentials of authority from me."

Emile's dark eyes sparkled.

"Thank you, Robespierre. I knew you would see differently from the short-sighted Danton. I shall want passports also for my niece Chlotilde and a youth who can recognize the marquis in any disguise."

"It is a queer journey for your niece," observes Robespierre.

"Aye, but she lived with the count's family, and can make sure I find the right daughter."

"So, so, you are as keen-witted as ever. Well, you shall have my authority for all you need to help you off. So Danton discouraged you. We'll show him how much Robespierre values his opinion."

Danton and his party had left the hall, to Emile's extreme relief, and he followed Robespierre to his private secretary's office, and received the invaluable papers at once.

His heart leaped wildly as he received them. His plans had succeeded beyond his wildest hopes. Only one thing remained, to make sure that M. Pierre was not released until too late to harm them. He walked around to the police office, and ascertained that he was safely confined awaiting the investigation, and then flew homeward.

A single glance at his hopeful face and cheery eye was more reviving to the trembling pair than the most potent elixir.

"We start at once. I hope your fatigue is past, Chlotilde."

She sprang to her feet with a glad smile, and answered eagerly:

"Oh, yes, I am strong, and ready for anything now."

"That pale face gives assurance of remarkable strength. You must try a glass of wine, for we travel swiftly and make no pause for night," replied Emile.

"And what is to be my fate?" asked Jules, trying to hide the exhilaration produced by Emile's demeanor, and assuming a lugubrious tone.

"You will accompany us to help identify your old master. Mind, if you betray my trust, a pistol shot will avenge it."

"There is no danger; my only safety is in obedience to your wishes," replied Jules, meekly drooping his eyelids to hide the mischievous sparkle beneath.

"Leon, put this paper, this endorsement of my movement in Robespierre's own handwriting, on record. It may be valuable some time. And step down and see if the carriage has come. I ordered it at once."

The moment Leon left the room, Emile advanced to the pair with a smile which was almost dazzling.

"Be happy, my children; fear nothing. We are safe—we are safe! The bloodthirsty Robespierre little dreams how easy and certain he has made our escape."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Claret for Lawmakers.

Eighty-five hundred dollars, the whole profit for last season of the House of Commons kitchen, has been invested by the committee in claret.

Largest Horse Ever Seen.

Eighteen and one-half hands is the height of a horse owned at Plymouth, Neb. The horse is said to be the largest west of the Mississippi river.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 8.—The senate passed a special bill raising the fee for issuing notarial commissions from $1.25 to $5. It takes effect immediately. The bill met with no opposition. Resolution passed urging congress to pass a bill giving affidavits for pensions the same weight as they have in the state where they were taken. Bill relative to evidence was amended so that witnesses must testify even to the extent of incriminating themselves in gambling cases, but the evidence shall not be used against witness.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 9.—The senate will hereafter hold two sessions each day. House bill appropriating $112,900 for institution for feeble minded at Glenwood passed. A bill passed authorizing the executive council to purchase or condemn a site on which to erect a memorial hall. Considerable time was put in on a discussion of whether witnesses should be compelled to testify whether the testimony incriminated themselves or not, but the house amendment to that effect was finally stricken out. The geological survey bill passed after a scrimmage. Bill relating to school for the deaf and bill relating to state board of health passed.

HOUSE.

Senate bill relating to the bonding of county indebtedness was slightly amended and passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 10.—The revenue bill came up under a special order. The basis of valuation, one-third of cash value, was accepted without opposition. An additional definition by Ranck that cash valuation for the purpose of this act should mean the market value in the regular course of business was adopted. An amendment by Cheshire to limit the levies so that taxes should not be greater in 1898 and 1899 than in 1896 and 1897 was laid over. An amendment by Everall to strike out the section allowing exemptions for debt to the owners of moneys and credits caused a long debate, but the senate refused to adopt.

HOUSE.

Bill in relation to office of dairy commissioner was amended so that the commissioner will hereafter receive $1,200 salary instead of $1,500, and the expenses of the office were limited to $3,000, the funds to be disbursed through warrants drawn on the state treasurer. Bill in relation to state library was also amended to make the salary of the librarian $1,000 instead of $1,200 and to limit the expenses of the office to $3,000. The latter bill failed to receive a constitutional majority, and at the afternoon session the house reconsidered the dairy commissioner bill and refused to cut down the salary. Salary of oil inspector was reduced from $2,000 to $1,500. Fee for inspection shall be 10 cents per barrel, and penalty for violation $500.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 11.—The senate spent all of the forenoon session in debating the advisability of taxing shares of stock of loan and trust companies owned by parties outside of the state. Finally Ellis's amendment to exempt non-resident shareholders was defeated by a tie vote of 22 to 22. A motion to limit debate was defeated, 16 to 23. The building and loan section came in for a lengthy debate, and Junkin offered a substitute, but no action was reached.

HOUSE.

The senate bill in relation to notaries was taken up and passed. It provides that the fee to be paid the secretary of state by persons desiring notarial commission shall be $5. Consideration of the voluminous insurance was proceeded to, Chairman Early taking charge of the measure. The result of the day's work on the part of the house was the disposition of a large volume of business and the shaping of a bill embodying in all its practical features the valued policy law, which contemplates that if insurance companies consent to insure property at twice or thrice its value and accept fat premiums upon such excessive risks, they must take the other end of the bargain and pay the face of the policies. Consideration of the bill was not concluded.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 12.—The senate spent the entire forenoon session in debating the building and loan section of the revenue bill. After a whole day of debate the amendment offered by Junkin was defeated, 17 to 23, and the section was adopted.

HOUSE.

The house continued to work on insurance. One new provision allows the insured to recover back his premium from any insurance company that is proved to be in combination of any kind with any other company; another makes it unlawful to sell rate books to insurance companies; the maximum time in which suit may be brought on a policy is extended from one to two years; when payment of loss is not made within forty days the insured may recover attorney fees; agents may be punished for doing business for a company that has not complied with the law; county mutuals may issue policies when $50,000 of business has been secured, and state mutuals when $100,000 of business is at hand.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 13.—The senate spent nearly the whole day on the revenue bill. No important changes were made. Healy filed a motion to reconsider the vote by which the building and loan section passed. House amendments to dairy commissioner bill were concurred in.

HOUSE.

The insurance bill came up and was amended to make outside mutual companies comply with the laws governing home companies. An amendment compelling foreign companies doing business in the state to pay into the state treasury 2½ per cent of their gross premiums, was adopted

WOMAN'S LONG HOURS.

She Toils After Man's Day's Work Is Done.

What She Has to Contend With—Work That Sooner or Later Breaks Down Her Delicate Organism.

The great majority of women "work to live" and "live to work," and as the hands of the clock approach the hour of six, those employed in stores, offices, mills and factories, hail closing time with joy. They have won their day's bread, but some duties are yet to be performed, and many personal matters to be attended to. They have mending to do, and dresses or bonnets to make, and long into the night they toil, for they must look neat, and they have no time during the day to attend to personal matters.

Women, therefore, notwithstanding their delicate organism, work longer and more closely than men.

They do not promptly heed such signs as headache, backache, blues, pains in the groins, bearing-down, "all gone" feeling, nervousness, loss of sleep and appetite, whites, irregular or painful monthly periods, cold and swollen feet, etc., all symptoms of womb trouble, which, if not quickly checked, will launch them in a sea of misery.

There is but one absolute remedy for all those ills. Any woman who has to earn her own living will find it profitable to keep her system fortified with this tried and true woman's friend. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound speedily removes the cause and effects a lasting cure.

We are glad to produce such letters as the following from Miss M. G. McNamee, 114 Catherine St., Utica, N.Y.:

"For months I had been afflicted with that tired feeling, no ambition, no appetite, and a heavy bearing-down feeling of the uterus. I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Soon those bad feelings passed away; I began to have more ambition, my appetite improved and I gained rapidly in every way, and now I am entirely well. I advise all my friends to use the Compound, it is woman's truest friend."

$200. REWARD IN GOLD

Well Worth Trying For.

In the word BEAUTIFUL are nine letters. You are smart enough to make fourteen words, we feel sure; and if you do you will receive a reward. Do not use a letter more times than it occurs in the word BEAUTIFUL. Use only English words. The Household Publishing and Printing Co., proprietors of The Household Companion, will pay $50.00 in gold to the person able to make the longest list of English words from the letters in the word BEAUTIFUL; $30.00 for the second longest; $20.00 for the third; $10.00 each for the next five, and $5.00 each for the next ten longest lists. The above rewards are given free and solely for the purpose of attracting attention to our handsome ladies' magazine, THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION, containing forty-eight pages finely illustrated. Latest Fashions, articles on Floriculture, Cycling, Cookery, General Household Hints, etc., and stories by the best standard authors; published monthly, price 50 cents per year, making it the lowest-priced magazine in America. In order to enter the contest it is necessary for you to send with your list of words FOURTEEN 2-cent stamps or 25 cents in silver, which will entitle you to a half-year's subscription to THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION. In addition to the above prizes we will give to everyone sending us a list of fourteen or more words a handsome silver souvenir spoon. Lists should be sent as soon as possible, and not later than April 3d, 1897, so that the names of successful contestants may be published in the April issue of THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION. We refer you to any mercantile agency as to our standing.

Belmond, Ia., March 11.—Diphtheria has made its appearance in this City, and with results most fatal. The home of C. H. Clark, has been stricken with two deaths, those of the mother and the baby boy. The next youngest is not expected to live, while the remaining children, four in number, who are with their grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Luick, are very low, as well as Mrs. Luick. Everything is done to avert the spread of this dread desease; the school has been closed, and the gospel meetings held at the M, E. Church have been discontinued.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

Bay City, Mich., March 12.—An ice floe containing all the solid ice in Saginaw bay went out this morning, carrying over 200 fishermen. It is now eight miles out in the bay and a strong west wind is blowing. Fishermen here are uneasy, but do not anticipate that the men on the floe will perish. They say the ice is still too solid to break up enough to admit of passage to Lake Huron up the Charity islands. If the warm south wind cantinues another day there will be little chance of their rescue.—Cedar Rapids Republican.

BANNERS HOISTED FOR GOD, SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Following Text: "In the Name of God We Will Set Up the Banner of Truth and Righteousness and Not of Avarice and Riches"—Psalms 20:5.

I HATE war! In my boyhood we may have read the biography of Alexander or of some revolutionary hero until our young heart beat high and we wished we had been born over a hundred years ago, just for the glory of striking down a Hessian. For rusty swords hung up on the rafters and bullets cut out of log houses in which they were lodged during the great strife we had unbounded admiration, or on some public day, clothed in our grandfather's soldierly accoutrements, we felt as grave as Garibaldi or Miltiades. We are wiser now, for we make a vast distinction between the poetry and the prose of war. The roll of drums and the call of bugles, and the champing of steeds foaming and pawing for the battle; a hundred thousand muskets glittering among the dancing plumes; "God Save the King" waving up from clarionets and trumpets and rung back from deep defiles or the arches of a prostrate city: distant capitals of kingdoms illuminated at the tidings: generals returning home under flaming arches and showering amaranths and the shout of empires: that is poetry. Chilled and half-blanketed, lying on the wet earth: feet sore with the march and bleeding at the slightest touch: hunger pulling on every fiber of flesh or attempting to satisfy itself with a scanty and spoiled ration: thirst licking up the dew or drinking out of filthy and trampled pool: thoughts of home and kindred far away while just on the eve of a deadly strife, where death may leap on him from any one of a hundred bayonets: the closing in of two armies, now changed to a hundred thousand maniacs: the ground slippery with blood and shattered flesh: fallen ones writhing under the hoofs of unbridled chargers maddened with pain: the dreadfulness of night that comes down when the strife is over: the struggle of the wounded ones crawling out over the corpses: the long, feverish agony of the crowded barrack and hospital, from whose mattresses the fragments of men send up their groans, the only music of carnage and butchery: desolate homes from which fathers and husbands and brothers and sons went off: without giving any dying message or sending a kiss to the dear ones at home, tumbled into the soldiers' grave trench, and houses in which a few weeks before unbroken family circles rejoiced, now plunged in the great sorrows of widowhood and orphanage: that is prose.

But there is now on the earth a kingdom which has set itself up for conflicts without number. In its march it tramples no grain fields, it sacks no cities, it impoverishes no treasuries, it fills no hospitals, it bereaves no families. The courage and victory of Solferino and Magenta without carnage. The kingdom of Christ against the kingdom of Satan. That is the strife now raging. We will offer no armistices: we will make no treaty. Until all the revolted nations of the earth shall submit again to King Emanuel, "In the name of God we will set up our banners."

Every army has its ensigns. Long before the time when David wrote the text they were in use. The hosts of Israel displayed them. The tribe of Benjamin carried a flag with the inscription of a wolf. The tribe of Dan a representation of cherubim. Judah a lion wrought into the groundwork of white, purple, crimson, and blue. Such flags from their folds shook fire into the hearts of such numbers as were in the field when Abijah fought against Jehoram, and there were twelve hundred thousand soldiers, and more than five hundred thousand were left dead on the field. These ensigns gave heroism to such numbers as were assembled when Asa fought against Zerah, and there were one million five hundred and eighty thousand troops in the battle. The Athenians carried an inscription of the owl, which was their emblem of wisdom. The flags of modern nations are familiar to you all, and many of them so inappropriate for the character of the nations they represent it would be impolitic to enumerate them. These ensigns are streamers borne on the point of a lance and on the top of wooden shafts. They are carried in the front and rear of armies. They unroll from the main-top-gallant-mast-head of an Admiral's flagship to distinguish it among other ships of the same squadron. They are the objects of national pride. The loss of them on the field is ignominious.

The three banners of the Lord's hosts are the banner of proclamation, the banner of recruit, and the banner of victory. When a nation feels its rights infringed or its honor insulted, when its citizens have in foreign climes been oppressed and no indemnity has been offered to the inhabitants of the republic or kingdom, a proclamation of war is uttered. On the top of batteries and arsenals and custom houses and revenue offices flags are immediately swung out. All who look upon them realize the fact that uncompromising war is declared. Thus it is that the Church of Jesus Christ, jealous for the honor of its Sovereign, and determined to get back those who have been carried off captive into the bondage of Satan, and intent upon the destruction of those mighty wrongs which have so long crushed the earth, and bent upon the extension of the Saviour's reign of mercy, in the name of God sets up its banner of proclamation.

The church makes no assault upon the world. I do not believe that God ever made a better world than this. It is magnificent in its ruins. Let us stop talking so much against the world. God pronounced it very good at the beginning. Though a wandering child of God, I see in it yet the Great Father's lineaments. Though tossed and driven by the storms of six thousand years, she sails bravely yet, and as at her launching in the beginning the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy, so at last, when coming into the calm harbor of God's mercy, she shall be greeted by the huzzas of glorified kingdoms. It is not the world against which we contend, but its transgressions. Whatever is obstinate in the will, degrading in passion, harmful in custom, false in friendship, hypocritical in profession—against all this Christ makes onset. From false profession he would tear the mask. From oppression he would snatch the rod. From pride he would rend off the plumes. From revenge he would exorcise the devil. While Christ loved the world so much he died to save it, he hates sin so well that to eradicate the last trace of its pollution he will utterly consume the continents and the oceans. At the gate of Eden the declaration of perpetual enmity was made against the serpent. The tumult round-about Mount Sinai was only the roar and flash of God's artillery of wrath against sin. Sodom on fire was only one of God's flaming bulletins announcing hostility. Nineveh and Tyre and Jerusalem in awful ruin mark the track of Jehovah's advancement. They show that God was terribly in earnest when he announced himself abhorrent of all iniquity. They make us believe that though nations belligerent and revengeful may sign articles of peace and come to an amicable adjustment, there shall be no cessation of hostilities between the forces of light and the forces of darkness until the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord. Affrighted by no opposition, discouraged by no temporary defeats, shrinking from no exposure—every man to his position, while from the top of our schools and churches and seminaries and asylums, "In the name of God we will set up our banners."

Again, it was the custom in ancient times, for the purpose of gathering armies, to lift an ensign on the top of some high hill, so that all who saw it would feel impelled to rally around it. In more modern times the same plan has been employed for the gathering of an army. Thus it is that the Church of Christ lifts its flag for recruits. The Cross of Jesus is our standard, planted on the hill of Calvary. Other armies demand that persons desiring to enter the lists of war shall be between such and such an age, lest the folly of extreme youth or the infirmity of advanced age be a clog rather than an advantage. But none are too young for Christ's regiment: none can be too old. The hand that is strong enough to bound a ball or trundle a hoop is skilled enough to fight for Christ, while many a hand trembling with old age has grasped the arrow of truth, and with a dim eye close to it, taking aim, has sent its sharp point right through the heart of the King's enemies. Many of you have long ago had your names written on the roll of celestial troops, and you like the service well, although you now bear the scars of multitudinous conflicts and can recount many a long march, and tell of siege-guns opened on you that you thought never would be spiked. But there may be some who have not yet enlisted. Your being here implies that you are seriously thinking about it, and your attention makes me hope you are only looking for the standard to be hoisted. Will you not, a hundred of you, with all the aroused enthusiasm of your nature, come bounding into the ranks, while "In the name of God we set up our banners?"

Through natural modesty do you hold back and say, "I will be of no advantage to Christ; I am too awkward to learn the step of the host, or to be of any service in the shock of battle?" To you I make the reply, Try it. One hour under Christ's drill, and you would so well understand his rules that the first step of your march heavenward would make the gates of hell tremble on their hinges. We may not be as polished and trim as many Christians we have known, and we may not as well understand sharp-shooting, but there is rough work which we can all accomplish. We may be axe-men, and hew a pathway through the forests. We may be spadesmen, and dig the trenches or throw up the fortifications. We do not care where, we do not care what—if we can only help in the cause of our King and shout as loudly as any of them at the completion of the conquest.

We go not alone to the field. We have invincible allies in the dumb elements of nature. As Job said, we are in league with the very stones of the field. The sun by day and the moon by night, directly or indirectly, shall favor Christianity. The stars in their courses are marshaled for us, as they fought against Sisera. The winds of heaven are now as certainly acting in favor of Christ as in reformation times the invincible Armada, in its pride, approached the coast of England. As that proud navy directed their guns against the friends of Christ and religious liberty, God said unto his winds, "Seize hold of them," and to the sea, "Swallow them." The Lord, with his tempests, dashed their hulks together and splintered them on the rocks until the flower of Spanish pride and valor lay crushed among the waves of the sea beach. All are ours. Aye! God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost are our allies.

The Mohammedans, in their struggle to subjugate the world, had passages from the Koran inscribed on the blades of their scimiters, and we have nothing to fear if, approaching the infidelity and malice that oppose the kingdom of Christ, we shall have glittering on our swords the words of David to the giant, "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of Hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou has defied."

Now the Church goes forth bearing precious seed, but after awhile it will be the sheaf-binding, and reaper angels shall shout the harvest home. Now it is tents and marching and exposure, but then in the ranks of prostrate iniquity and on the very walls of heaven, "In the name of God we will set up our banners. * * *

You know in ancient times elephants were trained to fight, and that on one occasion, instead of attacking the enemy, they turned upon their owners and thousands were crushed under the stroke of their trunks and the mountain weight of their step. These mighty opportunities of work for Christ may accomplish great things in overthrowing the sin of the world and beating to pieces its errors, but if we do not wield them aright these very advantages will, in unguarded moments, turn terribly upon us and under their heels of vengeance grind us to powder. Rejected blessings are seven-fold curses. We cannot compromise this matter. We cannot stand aside and look on. Christ has declared it: "All who are not with me are against me." Lord Jesus, we surrender.

The prophecies intimate that there shall before the destruction of the world be one great battle between truth and unrighteousness. We shall not probably see it on earth. God grant that we may see it, bending from the battlements of heaven. On the side of sin shall be arrayed all forms of oppression and cruelty, led on by infamous kings and generals. The votaries of Paganism, led on by their priests. The subjects of Mohammedism, following the command of their shieks. And gluttony and intemperance and iniquity of every phase shall be largely represented on the field. All the wealth and splendor and power and glory of wickedness shall be concentered on that one decisive spot, and maddened by ten thousand previous defeats, shall gather themselves up for one last, terrible assault. With hatred to God for their cause and blasphemy for the battle-cry, they spread out over the earth in square beyond square, and legion beyond legion, while in some overhanging cloud of blackness foul spirits of hell watch this last struggle of sin and darkness for dominion.

Scattered by the blasts of Jehovah's nostrils, plunder, and sin, and Satanic force shall quit the field. As the roar of the conflict sounds through the universe all worlds shall listen. The air shall be full of wings of heavenly cohorts. The work is done, and in the presence of a world reclaimed for the crown of Jesus, and amid the crumbling of tyrannies and the defeat of Satanic force, and amid the sound of heavenly acclamations, the church shall rise up in the image of our Lord, and with the crown of victory on her head and the scepter of dominion in her hand, in the name of God shall set up her banners. Then Himalaya shall become Mount Zion, and the Pyrenees Moriah, and the oceans the walking place of him who trod the wave crests of Galilee, and the great heavens become a sounding-board which shall strike back the sound of exultation to the earth till it rebound again to the throne of the Almighty. Angel of the Apocalypse, fly! fly! for who will stand in the way of thy might or resist the sweep of thy wing?

The Oldest Will.

The antiquity of legal methods is curiously illustrated by the recent discovery of the oldest will extant. This unique document was unearthed by Prof. Petrie at Kahum, Egypt, and is at least 4,000 years old. In its phraseology the will is singularly modern in form, and it is said that it might be admitted to probate to-day.

PREPARED FOR WAR.

England Has Her Troops in Readiness for Movement.

LONDON, March 15.—Lloyds says that for some days past there has been a belief in all informed high official circles that secret and rapid detailed preparations are being made by Great Britain for a sudden declaration of hostilities. At the Horse Guards for some days past the officials have been engaged in preparing the details of every battalion which can be called at a moment's notice for active foreign service. While the subordinates profess ignorance as to the reasons for these preparations, it is undoubtedly true that the chiefs had tables prepared, showing exact number of men available for foreign service within twenty-four hours. Inquiry at Aldershot showed that there has been unusual activity.

WILL BE NO HEADSMAN.

Fourth-Class Postmasters to Be Allowed to Serve Their Terms.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The fourth assistant postmaster general is the man who makes the appointments of fourth-class postmasters. The present incumbent's commission has just expired. There are now 66,725 fourth-class postoffices, and the pressure for them is very great. It is said, however, that President McKinley intends to give the fourth-class postmasters terms of four years, and the pressure of spoilsmen will not affect that determination. Heretofore the fourth assistant postmaster general has been "a headsman," but during this administration he will be a perfunctory official.

LIMIT SET TO THE COST.

Secretary Long Issues an Advertisement for Bids for Armor Plate.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Secretary Long has issued an advertisement for 8,000 tons of nickel steel Harveyized armor for the battleships Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin, together with the necessary bolts and various hollow forgings, ammunition hoists, etc. Under the new law the cost of armor plate must not exceed $300 per ton.

For Commissioner of Pensions.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—H. Clay Evans, of Tennessee, has been tendered the office of commissioner of pensions. He will probably accept. Evans has long been a recognized leader among the southern republicans. He represented the Chattanooga district in congress and was the first assistant postmaster general under Harrison. Later he made a remarkable run for governor of Tennessee on the republican ticket and came near being elected.

Wages Reduced.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 12.—Reductions in wages of from 10 to 25 per cent, affecting about 800 men, have been announced in the Keystone Bridge Rolling mill, Pittsburg, and at the Standard Manufacturing company in Allegheny. The Standard Manufacturing company has resumed operations in full, after an idleness of about a month.

May Cause a Crisis.

MADRID, March 13.—The Imparcial asserts that at the recent cabinet council the queen regent refused to sign a decree submitted by the ministers recalling Gen. Polavieja from his position as captain general of the Philippine islands, and that there are consequent rumors of a ministerial crisis.

Madagascar's Queen Exiled.

TAMATAVE, Madagascar, March 13.—Ravanolana III, queen of Madagascar, who has been merely a nominal ruler since the island was made a French dependency last June, has been exiled to the island of Reunion, also a French possession.

Referendum Defeated.

TOPEKA, Kansas, March 13.—The populist measure providing initiative and referendum legislation was defeated in the lower house of the state legislature, after having passed the senate.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, March 11.—Master Paul James, of Des Moines, has been granted a copyright for an amusing publication entitled "Paul James's Card Game and Instructions." E. W. K. asks: "Can a person patent a machine for making wire fence and sell county rights to use the machine and then invent and patent another machine for making the same kind of a fence and sell the right to the second patent to make the same fence in the same territory?" Answer: Improvements are always in order, and it has been said "The room for improvement is the largest room in the world." A person may invent and patent two distinct machines for making the same kind of a fence and lawfully sell the right for each in the same place to different persons, so each purchaser has the right to make the fence in the same territory, provided there is no patent on the fence, or, if patented, each has bought a right to make such fence. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

Rev. G. W. Perryman, who has been with the First Baptist church of Newport, Ky., for seven years, has received a call to the First Baptist church of Cincinnati.

Merit Wins.

The invention of alabastine marked a new era in wall coatings, and from the standpoint of the building owner, was an important discovery. It has from a small beginning branched out into every country of the civilized world. The name "kalsomine" has become so offensive to property owners that manufacturers of cheap kalsomine preparations are now calling them by some other name, and attempting to sell on the Alabastine company's reputation.

Through extensive advertising and personal use, the merits of the durable Alabastine are so thoroughly known that the people insist on getting these goods and will take no chance of spoiling their walls for a possible saving of at the most but a few cents. Thus it is again demonstrated that merit wins, and that manufacturers of first-class articles will be supported by the people.

GRANT'S HAMMERING.

THOSE WHO CRITICISED IT WERE STAY-AT-HOMES.

The Soldiers in the Field Were as Anxious as the Commander to Fight the War to a Finish—Paper Bullets Were Not Effective.

GEN. HORACE Porter's "Campaigning with Grant," now running in The Century, deals with the battle of Cold Harbor in the current issue. General Porter says:

There were critics who were severe in their condemnation of what Grant called "hammering" and Sherman called "pounding;" but they were found principally among the stay-at-homes, and especially the men who sympathized with the enemy. A soldier said one night when reading by a camp fire an account of a call issued by a disloyal newspaper at home for a public meeting to protest against the continued bloodshed in this campaign: "Who's shedding this blood, anyhow? They better wait till we fellows down here at the front hollo, 'Enough!'" The soldiers were as anxious as their commanders to fight the war to a finish, and be allowed to return to their families and their business.

Grant could have effectually stopped the carnage at any time by withholding from battle. He could have avoided all bloodshed by remaining north of the Rapidan, intrenching, and not moving against his enemy; but he was not placed in command of the armies for that purpose. It had been demonstrated by more than three years of campaigning that peace could be secured only by whipping and destroying the enemy. No one was more desirous of peace; no one was possessed of a heart more sensitive to every form of human suffering than the commander; but he realized that paper bullets are not effective in warfare; he knew better than to attempt to hew rocks with a razor; and he felt that in campaigning the hardest blows bring the quickest relief. He was aware that in Wellington's armies the annual loss from disease was 113 out of 1,000; in our Mexican war, 152; and in the Crimea, 600; and that in the campaigns thus far in our own war more men had died from sickness while lying in camp than from shot and shell in battle. He could not select his ground for fighting in this continuous siege of fortified lines; for, though he and his chief officers applied all their experience and skill in endeavors to manoeuver the enemy out of strong positions before attacking him, his foe was often too able and wily to fall into the traps set for him, and had to be struck in positions which were far from Grant's choosing. When Lee stopped fighting the cause of secession was lost. If Grant had stopped fighting the cause of the Union would have been lost. He was assigned one of the most appalling tasks ever intrusted to a commander. He did his duty fearlessly to the bitter end, and triumphed. In thirteen months after Lincoln handed him his commission of lieutenant-general, and intrusted to him the command of the armies, the war virtually ended.

NO USE FOR AN UNDERTAKER.

The Expected Corpse Traveled in the Same Train With His Coffin.

Robert Richmond, a young man from St. Louis, was taken sick at Marfa, a small town 400 miles west of here on the Southern Pacific railroad, says a San Antonio correspondent of the Philadelphia Record. He grew rapidly worse and became unconscious and his attending physician telegraphed the patient's parents in St. Louis that their son was dying. The parents wired instructions for the body to be embalmed and shipped to St. Louis. There is no embalmer and undertaker nearer than San Antonio, and a telegram was sent there for one. The young man was still alive, but his physician was positive that he would be dead in a few hours. The San Antonio undertaker arrived at Marfa next morning and found the young man still alive. He waited thirty-six hours and Richmond showed signs of improvement. The undertaker left with the coffin for San Antonio and Richmond was brought here on the same train, arriving last night. The trip did so much good that he will leave the hospital in a few days a well man.

Mr. Geo. W. Hervey, the Editor of the Weekly World-Herald of Omaha has been restored to health after years of suffering during which time the three best physicians of the state failed to help him. He had indigestion so bad that he could never eat more than two meals a day and was obliged to carry morphine with him to relieve paroxysms of pain. In one attack he lost 22 pounds in 9 days. Three packages of Dr. Kay's Renovator cured him. For lack of space we can give only short extracts from his letter but we urge all to send for full report of this case and many others who had failed to get help from physicians or any medicine, until they took Dr Kay's Renovator Mr. Hervey wrote: "I consulted three of the best physicians in the state but they failed to give me relief. My stomach was sore and sensitive. I was induced to try and it is eight months since I commenced its use and I now have no symptoms whatever of my old trouble. I have recommended it to many of my friends for stomach trouble and I think all have reported relief." Dr. Kay's Renovator has cured so many of the worst cases that we consider it a certain cure for all cases of dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney diseases, and all nervous and blood diseases, headache, billiousness, etc. AT THIS TIME OF YEAR it should be taken by every one to renovate and invigorate the whole system and to purify and enrich the blood, giving to the whole body NEW LIFE and vigor. It is easy and pleasant to take. Tone up your system for the spring work. "Your Ruling Planet Discovered

Dr. Kay's Renovator,

By Astrology" is the title of Prof. G. W. Cunningham's new work on this wonderful and mystical science. Written in plain, comprehensive language. Every page sparkles with gems of information. Every reader will acquire amazing and startling knowledge of the secret, ancient learning of "The Wise Men of the East." You will see at once which is your own, or your friends' ruling planet. Price, postpaid, 25c, 50c and $1.00, according to binding.

THE ASTROLOGER'S CORNER.

Some slight changes necessitated using less space for this department. Prof Cunningham is daily receiving flattering testimonials of his genius and marvelous power in reading the language of the signs and planets. His horoscope life readings with chart are daily convincing people of the great and VALUABLE INFORMATION to be had through his wonderful knowledge of astrology. He receives letters from every state and territory and his fame has extended into foreign lands.

Under no circumstances will names of correspondents be published, but the following are extracts from recent letters: "I received my horoscope, am much pleased with it. It is as near right as is possible to make it." Another writes: "I am surprised at its correctness."

Prof. Cunningham now proposes to tell your ruling planet and send a test reading ABSOLUTELY FREE to the applicants whose letters happen to be the First, Third, Ninth and Twelfth opened from each day's mail. All aspirants for these FREE READINGS must send: sex, race or nationality, place, year, month, date, hour and minute of birth, A. M. or P. M., as near as possible. Applicants entitled to FREE READINGS will receive them by return mail with their 24 cents refunded less 2 cents postage. All applicants must send 24 cents to pay for their reading in case they do not win FREE reading. DO NOT DELAY; send at once; you are just as apt to win as anybody, and if you do not, you will receive a valuable test by astrology for the small sum of 24 cents. Those not knowing their time of birth should send 4 cents for further instructions. These rules apply to all applications. No more applications for readings to be published will be received; there are more now than probably can ever be published, owing to changes that are likely to occur at any time, so all who have applied for readings to be published should enclose 24 cents in stamps and take part in the above contest. About 100 letters have been returned to me "unclaimed." All who gave fictitious names had better correct the error at once. Wonderful Horoscope Readings with Chart at from $1.00 to $5.00. Their completeness will be in accordance with amount of money sent. I will not be responsible for money sent in a letter. Send money order or stamps. Address

Dept. 4, 194 S. Clinton Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE FOLLOWING ARE SOME READINGS FOR THIS WEEK:

Miss M. E., Ottawa, Kansas. According to the data the sign Sagittarius, which Jupiter rules, was rising at your birth, therefore Jupiter is your ruling planet or significator. The Moon and Mercury are on the ascendant and must be considered as co-significators. You are above medium height; good form; medium to light complexion, hair and eyes; the complexion is very clear and healthy; you are very active and energetic, generally cheerful, happy, jovial, kind and obliging; you are very fond of animals and especially a fine driving horse; you are somewhat inclined to speculation; in a general way you are far more fortunate than the average and you will always be able to command more or less money, however you need some special advice about finances.

Miss Marie, Grand Rapids, Wis. According to data the sign of Cancer, which the Moon rules, was rising at your birth, therefore the Moon is your ruling planet or significator. Venus and Mercury are on the ascendant and must be considered as co-significators. You are medium height, or slightly above; plump form; medium to dark hair and eyes; the eyes have a peculiar sparkle and sharp sight; the complexion clear; you are more swift in your actions than the Cancer people usually are, as denoted by Mercury. You are quite changeable and often have a strong desire to change your business or location, or both; you are fond of parties, dances, amusements, etc.; you are very popular with the gentlemen and marriage will be average fortunate for you.

SOMETHING TO DEPEND ON.

Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with La Gripp, and her case grew so serious that physicians at cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develope into lung consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from first dose and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at Harr's Drug Store.

H. F. Ludeke living just west of town brought into Klemme, Saturday one load of clover seed that brought him $111.87. How is that for farming these hard times? More clover and less oats, should be your motto this season, for clover seed always brings a good price and you have the hay also.

H. N. Church and Miss Mamie Ekman were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at Goodell, Iowa, on March 15th. 1897. Rev. C. F. Schell officiating. The contracting parties are to well known to need any futher remarks. The TIMES extends congratulations and wishes them happines and prosperity.

The revival meetings are still progressing nicely, with a large attendance, the interest not abating, but rather increasing. A wonderful amount of good has been accomplished and over 40 new names added to the church book. Evangelist Fred B. Smith left for his home in chicago, last Friday. The roads were so bad country people could hardly get to church, and he thought to postpone the meetings for the present and come again later, but the meetings still continue. Everybody invited to come to these meetings.

It does not take long for profuse apologies to become a nuisance.

There is suspicion that the Mayor of Baltimore, who vetoed a high hat bill, may have been the victim of feminine coercion.

The crowded jails, penitentiaries and lunatic asylums should teach us that we are not doing all that we ought to do for mankind.

The man whom Blondin carried on his back across Niagara is still alive. The fool killer has really been dead longer than we thought.

Some tobacco raised in Wisconsin from Cuban seed developed such an excellent leaf that the Wisconsin people in talking of it can hardly avoid speaking Spanish.

Roads are so bad in Connecticut that a funeral procession there had to take to the trolley cars. The older states are apparently as neglectful of roads as some that are further west.

If Texas should take it into her head to burn a negro just now, it's safe to say some New York paper would have a "commissioner" on hand to take a singed statement from the victim.

Li Hung Chang's Grand Army badge is a sight more ornamental than that old yellow jacket and bedraggled peacock feather the Chinese Emperor took away from him some time ago.

Mrs. Besant, theosophist, is quoted as saying that offerings of burnt butter to the gods might produce an electric current that would bring rain. It might pay irrigation committees to look into this.

An unemployed man in Chicago supported two persons beside himself, and sometimes three, for three months, on $18. The bad times are teaching hard lessons of economy, some of which may be useful in the future.

Labouchere's instance of a woman having been cured of kleptomania by a good whipping is something of an indorsement of our late Delaware whipping-post. The record of Delaware reforms is not, however, at hand.

The Duchess of Fife is an ardent devotee of the wheel. She has recently purchased a very handsome one made of black walnut mounted with brass, and although it is 100 years old she finds it in excellent working condition. With this wheel she spins her own yarn, which she knits into golf stockings for her husband to wear when he dons the kilts. From an industrial and domestic standpoint at least the Duchess seems to be all wool and a yard wide.

Our judges often enunciate sound principles in morals as well as in law. In the New York Supreme Court Justice Pryor lately gave his opinion of marrying for money. A lawyer said, "Admit that the man was after this woman's money to better and elevate his position in life. Is there anything reprehensible in that?" The justice replied, "It is infamous to marry a woman simply for her money." So far as is known an appeal from this decision was not taken.

There is a national, "almost a patriotic," movement in Japan to induce the people to become eaters of meat. The Japanese are intelligent imitators of Europeans and Americans, and it seems that many of them think because of its general use by other nations that there is promise of physical and mental improvement in the substitution of flesh foods for rice and other cereals. If a favorable result follows this change of diet, the meat-eaters will be hilarious in proclaiming it against the vegetarians.

The British Post Office Savings Bank lately completed thirty-five years of existence, and a summary of the results reached is given in the Pall Mall Gazette, which ten years ago gave an account of the progress of the system for the quarter century completed in 1886. The journal in question showed that, beginning in a very modest way, only 435 deposits, amounting to £951, having been received on September 16, 1861, the first day on which business was transacted, there were during 1885 6,474,484 deposits, amounting to £15,034,694, and on December 31 of that year the sum of £47,697,838 was standing to the credit of 3,535,650 depositors, in addition to which 30,597 depositors held government stock of the nominal value of £2,452,252. These figures bore ample testimony to the thrifty habits of a considerable proportion of the inhabitants of the United Kingdom, and to the facilities for saving afforded by the post office.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

BURLINGTON'S BOY BANDITS.

Gang of Eight Sent to the Industrial School.

BURLINGTON, March 20.—Archer Broderick, aged 9; Walter Calhoun, aged 18; Bert Dupree, aged 16; John Broderick 12; Archie Cunningham, aged 12; Charley Childs, aged 14; Barney McGuire, aged 14, and Charley Kelb, aged 14, were arrested by the police and a charge of larceny placed against them. By the arrest of this petty gang of thieves Burlington has probably gotten rid of one of the greatest nuisances that the city has had to contend with for some time. They have figured in more petty burglaries in Burlington than any other organized gang that has ever invested the city. The boys were sentenced to terms in the reform school, most of them confessing to the crimes charged against them.

TRAVELING MAN ATTACKED.

Would-Be Robber Throws Him Under a Train.

GLADBROOK, March 22.—Filo Hoadley, a traveling salesman, whose home is at Toledo, was standing on the platform of the rear coach of a southbound train when the train stopped at Gladbrook. He was approached by an unknown man just as the train slowed up and his money demanded. Hoadley refused and a scuffle ensued, during which he was thrown from the train and under the wheels as the train began moving. One arm was run over and terribly mangled. He was taken immediately to his home at Toledo, and the arm amputated above the elbow. The thief secured $40 in money and a gold watch; also the man's morocco pocketbook. The word "Filo" is engraved on the watch.

WILL TRY WHEAT.

Farmers Decide to Discontinue Raising Large Crops of Corn.

CLARION, March 19.—It is learned that the farmers of Wright county are making preparations to sow a larger acreage to wheat than formerly. Wheat is worth 50 cents per bushel in this market, and as corn is not bringing much more than 9 to 11 cents per bushel, and not very good quality, they find it difficult to sell, even at the price named. Wheat finds a ready market and the dealers in Clarion have bought over 5,000 bushels at an average price of 50 cents per bushel. So the farmers will try wheat.

DROWNED IN BOONE RIVER.

Dr. Travis and Oliver Kirkberg the Unfortunate Victims.

EAGLE GROVE, March 20.—Dr. J. H. Travis, of Eagle Grove, and Oliver Kirkberg, who lived four miles west of town, were drowned in the Boone river near John Wasem's. The doctor had been visiting patients in the vicinity, and had passed safely over the bridge a few hours before, but the graded approach had washed out and the horses sank and carried the buggy and its occupants into the water.

Fell Under the Train.

CLINTON, March 21.—A. P. Bell, a brakeman on the C. & N. W., met with a serious, if not fatal accident at De Witt. He was engaged in making a coupling, when he slipped and fell beneath the wheels. He was dragged some distance before he was noticed by other trainmen. He was carried to the way car and brought to Clinton and taken to Mercy Hospital. Drs. Jonsson and Hofstetter found it necessary to amputate the left leg six inches above the knee.

A Clinton County Woman's Suicide.

CLINTON, March 19.—Mrs. Wm. Semper, living two and one-half miles northwest of Calamus, escaped the vigilance of her family, made her way to the Wapsie river and jumped in. She was seen to jump by some boys, who gave the alarm at once. Mrs. Semper had had a mild form of insanity for several years, and had twice been an inmate of an insane hospital, but it was thought she was sufficiently recovered to warrant her staying at home.

Gov. Drake Calls for Aid.

DES MOINES, March 19.—Gov. Drake has issued a proclamation calling for aid for the starving people of India. The relief committee are mailing out circular letters to the local aid committees over the state, and inclosing the governor's proclamation.

Suicide at Creston.

CRESTON, March 20.—Will Hanneman suicided by cutting his throat with a razor. He committed the deed in a water closet, where he was found by wife. He had been in the asylum, returning home three weeks ago. He leaves a wife and three children.

Murder in the First Degree.

WAPELLO, March 20.—In the trial of Orval McPherson for the murder of Marshal Finley at Morning Sun, some time ago, the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and recommended a life sentence.

FEARFUL IOWA TRAGEDY.

Lunatic Shoots Three Persons, One Fatally, Then Himself.

ODEBOLT, March 19.—Dave Pennington loaded a shotgun and started out to kill a number of people who had incurred his enmity. He first hunted for A. P. Walter, against whom he had a grudge, but Walter saw him coming and hid. Then Pennington went to the house of Hiram Johnson and fired at Mrs. Johnson, seriously wounding her in the shoulder and back. He next emptied both barrels into Luther Traver, an aged man, killing him instantly. Then he pointed the gun at Mrs. Fran k Stolt, a neighbor, who came to the door on hearing the noise. She ran into the doorway, closing the storm door behind her, but he fired through the door, wounding her in the abdomen. Pennington retreated across some vacant lots, loading his gun as he went, and called to an officer, daring him to shoot. He exclaimed: "Well, if you haven't got the nerve to shoot, I have!" Then he placed the muzzle of the gun to his forehead and blew the top of his head off, scattering brains and pieces of skull fifty feet. Pennington was undoubtedly insane. It is thought Mrs. Stolt cannot recover, but Mrs. Johnson's injuries, while severe, are not fatal.

FEARFUL CRIME.

Farmer Commits Murder at Hedrick, Result of a Love Rivalry.

OTTUMWA, March 22.—Frank Merryfield shot and killed Bradrach Roch on the streets of Hedrick. Both men were farmers about 35 years old. They were rivals in love and had threatened to kill on sight. Merryfield saw Roch on the street, followed him to his horse, and as he was mounting, shot him with a revolver. Merryfield was arrested. About a year ago the murderer's son Hugh, aged 12, angered at his brother Joe, aged 9, shot him dead and then killed himself with a shotgun.

Miraculous Escape From Death.

IOWA CITY, March 21.—While seven workmen were engaged in tearing down old Mercy hospital, which is to make place for a new structure this spring, the ceiling of the northeast room, together with a large chimney, collapsed and buried three of the men in the debris. The men were soon extricated, none of them having received serious injuries, although their escape from death was almost miraculous.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Advices from Minneapolis bring the announcement of the death of Mrs. Victor B. Dolliver, nee Augusta Larrabee, daughter of ex-Governor Larrabee, who was married to the brother of Congressman Dolliver six months ago.

At Marshalltown recently Edward Jorpeland, a young man about 24 years of age, was struck by a street car and received terrible injuries. The accident was witnessed by some fifty spectators, who saw the man's danger and warned him in due time, yet he seemed to pay no attention whatever and walked directly before the moving car as unconcerned as possible. Jorpeland is employed as a starch shoveler at the glucose works.

A serious accident occurred in the Council Bluffs Vinegar Works recently. An old-fashioned stone buhr is used in grinding the corn required in the manufacture of vinegar. This buhr bursted while running, sending pieces in all directions, seriously wounding Andrew Sorrenson, who had charge of the machinery, and knocking down several other men in the room. The buhr was designed to run at 400 revolutions per minute, but was at the time making 1,000.

Villisca dispatch: City Clerk H. D. Dolson has during the past two years used between $1,000 and $1,200 of the city's money. He has collected water rents and sold cemetery lots and failed to turn over the money. It is just learned that the council failed to have the clerk give bond, as required by the city ordinances. Mr. Dolson, when called before the council and accused of the defalcation, acknowledged that he had used the money, but gave in extenuation of the crime the cheerful assurance that he had to live some way.

An Atlantic dispatch says: October 1, 1896, the Bank of Atlantic suspended business, and as the assets, in realty and notes, were found to be much greater than the liabilities, by the committee of depositors, who were allowed to examine the books, all depositors agreed to let the receiver, J. B. Bruff, alone, and allow him to turn the real estate into money as fast as possible, at the same time agreeing not to carry any litigation into court unless a settlement was found impossible. The receiver has paid all preferred claims in full, with interest at 6 per cent from October 1, 1896. All parties interested feel elated over the fact that thousands of dollars that usually go to pay court and lawyers' fees have been avoided by the mutual agreement of the depositors and so early and satisfactory settlements have been made.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

ROME, March 16.—It is semi-officially stated that all foreign admirals have received orders to blockade Crete. A blockade of Greece will not occur unless the Cretan blockade is not effective. The Greek fleet will be escorted outside of Cretan waters unless it departs of its own accord.

LARISSA, March 17.—The situation on the frontier is now inflammable. At several points the sentries and outposts of the Turkish and Greek forces are within forty paces of each other CONSTANTINOPLE, March 17.—The porte has sent orders to Erzeroum, Roumania, to stop all furloughs among the Redliffs (first reserves). The Hamidieh regiment is to be placed on a war footing.

CANEA, March 17.—Col. Vassos has transferred his headquarters to Sphakia, the most mountainous and inaccessible position in the island. This is held to indicate that Greece is firmly resolved not to recall her troops.

ATHENS, March 18.—It is confidently asserted that Russia is backing Greece and that as soon as the Greeks cross the frontier the Balkans will rise and the czar will seize Constantinople. Crown Prince Constantine's regiment, the last one, leaves for the frontier to-day.

CANEA, March 19.—The Austrian gunboat Zebnico fired and sunk near Candia a Greek vessel loaded with provisions and munitions intended for the Greek forces in Crete. It appears the Zebnico, while watching the Greek ship, was fired upon by insurgents. The Zebnico then sank the vessel and drove off the insugents.

ATHENS, March 20.—The cabinet, after exhaustive discussion of the question, decided to recall the Greek warships Alpheois and Peneus from Crete and send them to Volo, Thessaly, and it was also decided to push forward the reinforcement of the Greek troops on the Turkish frontier with all possible expedition.

ATHENS, March 21.—The Turks are engaged in constructing fortifications. This work is in direct violation of the provisions of the treaty of Berlin. The government has made protests to the powers against this action on the part of Turkey.

ATHENS, March 22.—In his reply to the protest of the Greek government against the sinking of the Greek vessel by an Austrian boat, the Austrian representative said it was provoked by an insurgent attack on a gunboat. Greece then consented to await the result of the inquiry into the affair.

CANEA, March 22.—The blockade of Crete by the powers began yesterday. The blockade applies only to vessels under the Greek flag.

ONE MORE SPANISH DEFEAT.

Rumored That Gomez Whipped 2,000—Cubans' 8,000 Guns.

NEW YORK, March 20.—A Sun dispatch from Havana says: A big battle has been fought at Sabana, near Sancti Spiritus, between the forces of Gen. Gomez and a Spanish column 2,000 strong. The Spanish official report of the battle gives no details, but the report is current that the Spaniards suffered a terrible defeat. The news has created a great sensation. The governor of Havana, Senor Porrua, has been called to Madrid at the request of General Weyler. In Havana it is intimated that the expedition of General Roloff landed in Pinar del Rio with 8,000 guns and ammunition, and then the steamer started for some other port of the island.

IMMENSE AREA SUBMERGED.

Eight Hundred Square Miles of Arkansas Under Water.

MEMPHIS, March 19.—Eight hundred square miles of Arkansas is under water, and the river still continues to rise. In the district west of Marion, Ark., hundreds of people have been picked up. The work of saving stock has been abandoned, and all efforts will be directed to the saving of human life. Thousands of people are homeless and dependent on charity. So far as known, a dozen lives have been lost, all negroes. Hundreds of people, mostly negroes, have been landed on the Memphis levee by the relief steamers that are daily visiting the flooded districts adjacent to Memphis.

Jackson and Walling Confess.

NEWPORT, Ky., March 20.—Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, who were hanged here to-day for the murder of Pearl Bryan, made a confession that they killed her accidentally by administering an anesthetic while attempting to perform an abortion.

Chicago's Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The president, after consideration of the subject by the cabinet, decided to accept the resignation of Washington Hesing, postmaster at Chicago, and has sent the senate the nomination of Charles U. Gordon as his successor.

SENSATION AT DES MOINES.

Corruption of Building and Loan Lobby Creates Consternation.

DES MOINES, March 17.—The biggest sensation of the extra session of the legislature was sprung by Lambert in the house to-day during the consideration of the building and loan bill. It was a complete expose of the methods employed by the building and loan associations to influence legislation, and was contained in a copy of a letter sent to the different building and loan associations over the state that are members of the federation. Lambert read a few extracts from the letter to serve as argument against an amendment to the bill offered by Dowell, and immediately the speaker requested the letter be sent to the clerk's desk to be read in its entirety. Lambert said the letter was a private communication, and he would not consent to its contents being made public. The speaker replied that the communication was the property of the house by reason of the action of the gentleman in reading from it and again demanded that it be sent forward. Lambert replied that he would give it up only by legal proceedings, and the speaker ordered the sergeant-at-arms to call upon the member and secure the letter. Lambert again protested, but the officer of the house was commanded to procure the letter and it was accordingly secured and read by the clerk. It was a letter from Oce B. Jackman "to the officers and managers of the Iowa Federation of Building and Loan managers" and gave details of a lobbying fund of $2,395, who paid it in and who received it. The letter created consternation among the members. Speaker Byers announced that he had learned yesterday of the existence of the document and as it charged that he had been culpable in appointing the building and loan committee he called Morrison to the chair and offered a resolution that a committee be appointed by the chairman pro tem to investigate the charges in the letter, three members to be from the house and three from the senate. The resolution was adopted. A resolution by Funk expressing confidence in the personal and official integrity of Speaker Byers was also adopted. Later Mr. Byers was persuaded not to resign. Another resolution by Dowell providing for a committee of five to investigate the charges that the building and loan associations of the state had something to do with the selection of the speaker of the house and also influenced the selection of the committee on building and loan associations, was also adopted. On the first committee Crow, Temple and Byington were appointed, and the members of the second are Weaver, Temple, Haugen, Byington and McDowell.

THE OCEAN FOR A GRAVE.

Seventy-eight Lives Lost in an Atlantic Ocean Shipwreck.

NEW YORK, March 19.—It is now believed that seventy-eight persons in all were lost by the foundering of the French line steamer Ville de St. Nazaire off Cape Hatteras, although a summary of the list of the passengers and crew who were in the vessel when she left shows that there were but eleven passengers in all, and the crew list numbered seventy-one men. Of these, four are known to be saved. The officers, crew and passengers were, with one or two exceptions, residents of foreign ports. Of the total number on board, sixty were colored. The only white persons on board besides the passengers were the officers.

Fitzsimmons Retires.

CARSON, Nev., March 21.—Robert Fitzsimmons, champion pugilist of the world, left the scene of the battle ground on which he received his last laurels of superiority. Before leaving Fitzsimmons reiterated his intention of leaving the ring. "I do this in compliance with a request made by my wife before I met Corbett," said the champion. Fitzsimmons's destination is San Francisco, where he will appear in the Mechanics' Pavilion to-night, and that will be his last appearance in public. He will not even give posing or sparring exhibitions in the future.

Floods North and South.

DES MOINES, March 22.—Advices from the south tell of a terrible condition caused by the Mississippi floods. Northwestern Iowa is also badly flooded. Le Mars, Sioux City, Cherokee and other cities fear great damage by the continual rise.

A Train Goes Into a River.

CUMBERLAND, Md., March 22.—An east-bound passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio jumped the track near Oakland and went into the Youghiogheny river. All the passengers save one were rescued, but a dozen were injured.

BREVITIES.

Fire broke out in the store of the Ely-Walker Dry Goods Company at St. Louis recently. The firm carried a stock valued at $1,500,000, with an insurance of $1,000,000. The stock was completely destroyed, and the building, which is valued at $200,000, is a complete loss. One of the walls fell and as a result one man was killed and several injured. One thousand persons are thrown out of work by the fire.

CHAPTER XXII.—(CONTINUED.)

The tears were flowing silently over the girl's pale cheeks, and the lips of Jules trembled so no articulate words passed over them. But Emile understood well the fervent joy and gratitude swelling in either heart. A few moments only were required for his preparations, final though he intended them to be. All his valuables were in the belt around his waist so many weary months in instant readiness for flight, anyhow, anywhere. He filled the basket of provisions, handed it silently to Jules, took up his cloak, and a shawl for Chlotilde, and with a parting nod to Leon, descended the stairs.

The traveling carriage had drawn a crowd around the door. The excitement of the day seemed in no way to have exhausted itself, and now as the shadows of evening fell, the streets were thronged. Wild shouts of "Vive la Liberty! Abas la Tyrannie! Vive la Republic!" echoed from all sides. Bonfires and illuminations made the evening shadows more weird and ghostly. The clank of armed men passing to and fro constantly resounded through the shriller uproar.

"Whither away at this time?" shouted a rude voice, as a man with flaring torch hurried up to the carriage.

"The Gray Falcon flies at unwonted hours," echoed another.

"All hours are suitable for one who executes the will of the people's chief," answered Emile, haughtily, though at the same time he exhibited to the gendarme the passport furnished by Robespierre.

He thrust his companions into the carriage and followed himself with apparent nonchalance.

"It's all right," said one of the soldiers, and the word was passed along the line.

Then the carriage proceeded. It drove slowly through the city, but once out of the crowded streets the coachman cracked his whip, and they dashed along at a furious rate.

Scarcely a word was spoken by the occupants, though every heart was thrilling with emotion.

Once Emile said gently:

"Take all the rest you can now. After the next change of horses the road will be rougher."

"Oh, Emile, all fatigue and weariness seems lifted away from me by a magic spell," answered the girl. "I seem able to endure everything now that we have left those horrible scenes."

"Speak guardedly; there are sentinels posted all the way. We shall be stopped repeatedly. It were better for you to seem asleep, even if you cannot find genuine forgetfulness."

Jules drew the graceful head to his shoulder, and presently, despite her assurance, Felicie was really sound asleep.

They were stopped every few miles, and soldiers came forward, carefully scrutinizing the whole party; but the dreaded name of Robespierre silenced all doubts, and prevented serious hindrance.

On dashed the gallant horses, and when the morning crept upon them, they had gained the post where the change was to be made. None of the party left the carriage, but as speedily as possible the jaded, reeking animals were removed, and fresh ones harnessed in their places.

At length, quite as soon as he had anticipated, Emile leaped from the carriage upon the quay at Calais. A little English brig was lying away out in the stream. The French guards eyed our party suspiciously, but Emile boldly presented his priceless passport and feigned extreme disappointment at not overtaking the objects of his search.

A boat and rowers were instantly provided, and the three fugitives quietly took their seats, and were pushed away from shore.

The guards rowed the party toward the brig.

CHAPTER XXIII.

NEVER did exiles bid their mother land adieu with more sincere delight and grateful relief. Neither eye lingered behind, but all turned hopefully and eagerly to the gallant little vessel rocking on the waves before them.

The boatman entertained Emile with the description of a race they had the day before to prevent a small skiff from getting out to the English vessel.

"And did you succeed?" asked he, a little indifferently.

"Not we. It was strange enough, but they pulled as though the evil one took hold with them. An old man, one was, too, and feeble looking, but his arms were like iron. They were prowling around all the evening, and they stole the boat and put out, thinking, most likely, the dark would hide their movements; but some of the boatmen heard their oar strokes, and we set bonfires a-going, and saw them plain enough to stop them, but they beat us, that's a fact; they earned their escape, anyhow. It was stupid in us not to have fired upon them."

"Perhaps they are the ones I search after; if so, I will follow them to England, and get them back by stratagem."

"The English are watching us, now. See the crowd on the deck. Perhaps they won't allow us to approach."

"No fear of that, since we are unarmed, and show plainly that we come with peaceable intentions. You may leave us, and retreat at once. I'll signal if I wish you to return."

"Aye, aye. You've the proper papers from Robespierre, or I mistrust we shouldn't help you along in this fashion."

Emile smiled calmly. He had drawn forth a white handkerchief and allowed it to flutter in the breeze as a sort of flag of truce.

How his heart was beating! How every pulse throbbed wildly, notwithstanding that calm exterior, as the leaping waves bore them toward the white-winged ark of safety!

The officer of the English deck hailed them the moment they came within speaking distance.

"Boat ahoy! What do you wish? Who are you?"

"Friends, seeking to board your ship," was Emile's reply, in his deep, steady tones.

"Aye, aye," came back in cheery response.

It was but a few moments longer, though it seemed hours to the anxious fugitives, ere they stood upon the friendly deck, the center of a curious group.

Emile spoke a few words with the captain, and then called out to the boat's crew waiting below:

"You may return. I shall take passage to England."

"That's a curious chap, anyhow," growled the leading oarsman. "I suppose Robespierre knows his own business, but I should say we've helped some pretty cunning fugitives to get away from France in fine shape."

"It's none of our lookout, anyhow," responded the fellow at the oar, "but they had a grand look, all three of them, and that's a fact."

And the boat was turned again toward the shore.

On the English deck stood Emile, grasping the hand of either companion, and repeating fervently while the tears poured down his cheek:

"Heaven be praised for the mercy vouchsafed us. My children, we are saved!"

Lady Felicie hid her drenched face in her hands. Jules wrung that of Emile, and answered falteringly:

"And after Heaven, we owe our deliverance to you."

"And after me, to Robespierre, little though he intended it," replied Emile.

The sympathizing captain inquired their history.

It was given, though somewhat guardedly.

The group of interested passengers warmly tendered their congratulations and sympathy.

"We hear similar recitals every day," observed the gentlemanly commander; "in fact, it is our business, lying off here to receive fugitives. I fear we shall be molested presently. I have been warned a French man-of-war is to be sent hither.

"How long must you remain?" asked Emile, looking anxious once more.

"Only a few hours longer. I have waited a week for an illustrious passenger. Much I fear he is discovered and thrown into prison, if not already guillotined."

"Perhaps I shall be able to give you information. I prepared a fresh list at Robespierre's dictation but a few days ago," returned Emile.

The captain whispered a name in his ear.

Emile sighed deeply.

"Alas! your errand is fruitless. The revered and noble bishop has gone to his long home. He was brutally murdered in La Vendee, almost a month ago."

"Then we will set forth for England at once. The Carrier Pigeon must spread her wings and fly to a happier shore. We have other fugitives on board, and you may all be naturally enough anxious to leave these scenes. Ho, my hearties, up anchor and shake out the sails!"

Just as they were passing into the cabin, Felicie came hastily to Emile's side.

"Emile, dear Emile, I am certain I see an old, familiar face in that crowd. It is strange enough why he should be here, yet, if that be not Jeannot Lazim, I have lost my memory. He looked eagerly and questioningly into our faces. I am certain it is Jeannot! He will be glad to know that one Languedoc is left; let us comfort him with the knowledge."

"Point him out to me, and I will bring him down to you."

"The gray-headed old man in the green jerkin. See, he is watching us now."

Felicie and Jules passed down into the cabin, and Emile returned on deck.

The cabin was a long narrow apartment with the state-rooms opening from either side. There were some dozen people in it, who at once came forward to offer any assistance or favor in their power to the pale, lovely girl, whose graceful bearing was such a contrast to her present clothing. One drew forward an easy chair, another poured out a glass of wine and eagerly proffered it, a third produced a rich shawl, and veiled with its bright folds the coarse and dingy dress.

Only one made no movement—a tall, dejected-looking woman, in the very coarsest of black dresses, who sat with closed eyes, leaning her head wearily against the wall.

She had spread her handkerchief over her eyes and forehead, and did not remove it for the stir made by the entrance of Felicie.

When, however, old Jeannot made his appearance, rushing in with the most reckless disregard of propriety, she drew it away and looked up hastily.

"Oh, all the saints be praised," cried old Jeannot, sobbing and blubbering like a school-boy; "it is really you, my young mistress! I never dreamed it could be, though it made my heart ache thinking how much you looked like my blessed young lady. Oh, this is too beautiful! What will she say? Where is she?"

"My good Jeannot, I knew it would be such pleasure to your honest heart to know that I had escaped. And what has brought you here to meet the sole survivor of a hapless family, whose greatness and grandeur have fallen to the dust?" said Lady Felicie, softly and tenderly, as she clasped affectionately the old man's extended hand.

"Where is she?" demanded Jeannot, feverishly.

CHAPTER XXIV.

HASTY hand brushed him aside—a tall figure rushed between—a pale face, attenuated and wan with grief and suffering—eyes wild with frantic joy and amazement, peered into the startled face of Felicie.

"My child, my Felicie—oh, God of mercy, I thank thee!"

And prone at the girl's feet, sank the shivering, trembling figure.

Had the grave opened before her eyes, and yielded up its dead, Felicie could not have been more startled.

"Mother, mother," gasped she; "can it be possible, am I awake? Emile, Jules, tell me that I do not dream."

Emile stood at the threshold like a statue frozen suddenly to the spot; he could not articulate a single word. Jules likewise was overwhelmed with bewilderment.

But Jeannot had read the whole, and seizing the hand of each, he cried, stcutly:

"No, no, it is no dream; you are both saved — mother and daughter both saved—when you believed each other dead. Rejoice and be happy. And we shall be in England soon. Oh, praise all the saints for this beautiful ending to that bloody night."

Mother and daughter were sobbing in each other's arms, and not an eye was dry in the cabin, as the strangers silently retreated from the sacred scene.

"Oh, my child, my child! I have had so little hope in escape—the world has seemed such a dreary blank, and now there is such light, such joy!" whispered the countess.

"I cannot understand it! We believed you dead; such anguish as the thought gave us; Emile and I both were so certain of your death. How could it have happened, that we were deceived?"

"Emile? Then it was he who saved you?"

"He is here. Emile, where are you?" cried Felicie.

Emile came forward slowly; he took the hand of the countess, raised it reverentially to his lips, and said:

"I cannot speak. I am overwhelmed with gratitude at this providential meeting—this blessed discovery—and it is totally inexplicable still."

"Tell us how you escaped, my mother, my precious, precious one; restored as it seems from the very jaws of death; tell us how it happened."

"Jeannot must answer your inquiries, to me it is all a blank."

Jeannot smiled with pardonable pride.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

More to the Point.

"Daddy," asked little Ephraim, "whar did de fust tukkey come from?"

"Nebber yo' mine askin' irreligious questions," said the old man. "An' w'en Pahson Thompson come fer dinner Sunday doan' yo' hab ter ask whar dot tukkey come fum, eider."

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, March 15.—Senate met and appointed a committee to inform the president that congress was in session, after which a recess was taken until 2 p. m. After listening to the reading of the president's message at 3:23 adjournment was taken until to-morrow.

HOUSE.

The extra session of the Fifty-fifth congress convened at noon to-day. The proclamation of President McKinley convening the extra session was read, and the house then proceeded to elect a speaker. Thos. B. Reed was nominated by the republicans, Joseph W. Bailey by the democrats and John C. Bell by the populists. The vote resulted: Reed 199, Bailey 114, Bell 21. Mr. Reed was then sworn in, after which a committee was appointed to inform the president that congress was in session. The president's message was applauded vigorously, as was also Mr. Dingley when he introduced the new tariff bill. The speaker appointed the republican members of the old committee on the new ways and means committee, adding Mr. Bailey, of Texas, Mr. Robertson of Louisiana, and Mr. Swanson of Virginia, to the democratic membership. Adjourned until Thursday.

SENATE.

Washington, March 16.—The president sent to the senate to-day the following nominations: Ambassador to Great Britain, John Hay, District of Columbia; ambassador to France, Horace Porter, New York; secretary to the embassy to Great Britain, Henry White, Rhode Island. 438 bills and eight resolutions were introduced in the senate to-day. One by Allen provided for the foreclosure of the government liens against the Union Pacific road. Morgan reintroduced the Nicaraugua canal bill. A bill by Thurston provides for an increase of all pensions. All were referred to committees. Adjourned to Thursday.

SENATE.

Washington, March 18.—The president to-day sent to the senate the following nominations: Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, to be minister to Mexico; W. M. Osborne, of Massachusetts, to be consul general at London; J. K. Gowdy, of Indiana, to be consul general at Paris; J. H. Brigham, of Ohio, to be assistant secretary of agriculture; P. S. Heath, of Indiana, to be first assistant postmaster general. A constitutional amendment for election of senators by popular vote was introduced by Turpie. Gear reported the bill for the adjustment of the Pacific railroad debt. After a short executive session the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

When the house convened to-day Henderson of Iowa announced that the ways and means committee would not be ready to report until to-morrow, and the house adjourned.

SENATE.

Washington, March 19.—After a short open session in which little was done, the senate went into executive session to consider the arbitration treaty. The senate confirmed the nominations of Charles U. Gordon, Samuel E. Kercheval, Albert W. Wishard and Perry S. Heath.

HOUSE.

House concurred in senate amendments to bill relative to college for the blind. Senate bill relative to elections and officers was taken up, and a number of committee amendments were adopted, no great change being made, however. Consideration of the bill was finally deferred until Wednesday. Bill relating to soldiers' home passed.

HOUSE.

Washington, March 20.—The house pushed through the two remaining "left over" appropriation bills—the agricultural bill carrying $3,182,902, and the Indian carrying $7,670,220. The sentiment of the house against the provision in the Indian bill opening to entry, under the mining laws, the lands in the Uncompaghre reservation in Utah containing gilsonite or asphaltum deposits, which were inserted in the bill by the senate, was so intense that it was stricken out by unanimous consent.

HESING IS IN EARNEST.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Washington Hesing has resigned his postmastership of the city of Chicago. The resignation is based on his position in the fight for the mayoralty, he desiring to remain in the fight unencumbered by the criticism made by many who would otherwise support him that he was holding one office while striving to secure another.

Pingree Ousted.

LANSING, Mich., March 21.—The supreme court of Michigan decided that the office of mayor of Detroit became vacant when Hazen S. Pingree took the oath of office as governor of Michigan on January 1. A new election must be held to elect a new mayor for Detroit.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, March 19.—Henry Principal, of Des Moines, has been granted a copyright for the "Principal Tailor System of Dress Cutting."

J. Cundiff, of Union, Iowa, has been allowed a patent for a simple, strong and durable portable machine adapted to be advanced along a wire fence to weave stay wires on the fence wires.

In the list of patents issued last week Iowa is represented by 6, Nebraska has 2, Minnesota 8, Kansas 3, Missouri 18, New York 70.

Ten thousand two hundred and eight applications are awaiting action at Washington. The examiners of 33 divisions are less than two months in arrears with their work and in only one division is the work in arrears over two months.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 15.—House bill relating to fences passed. The bill relating to roads, bridges and ferries was considered at length and slightly amended. Committee on agriculture reported resolution authorizing an investigation of the beet sugar industry, recommending indefinite postponement. The senate completed the first reading of the revenue bill. No important changes were made during the day.

HOUSE.

The bill relating to estates of decedents was amended so as to permit lost or stolen wills to probate, after the execution or validity of the will has been established, and then passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 16.—Cheshire offered an amendment to that part of the bill relating to the taxation of telegraph, telephone, express and street car companies. He explained that it was a lengthy amendment and was new law modelled after the statutes of Indiana and Ohio. It went over. Funk, for the committee on ways and means, moved to strike section 22, providing for the taxation of loan and trust companies, from the bill, and the motion carried. Healey's amendment including loan and trust companies in the same class as state and savings banks, was then adopted. Section four, limiting the total amount of revenue to be raised and the total constitutional limitation of indebtedness of county, township and city government, passed. An amendment by Gorrell to exempt indebtedness on real estate and real property was defeated, 14 to 24.

HOUSE.

A new militia law was enacted by the house this morning, providing for the promotion of meritorious young soldiers to positions of honor on the governor's staff. A system of examinations for promotion is arranged, whereby it would be possible for a private to advance to the highest position in five years if he was worthy. Consideration of the insurance bill was completed and the bill passed, 56 to 33. House refused to concur in senate amendment to bill relating to care of insane which cut the salary of superintendent from $3,000 to $2,500.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 17.—Revenue bill was taken up and an amendment by Ellis to exempt from taxation to the extent of the indebtedness upon them the homesteads to the actual value of $1,000 of the persons who earn their livelihood by manual labor, was defeated. Cheshire's amendment relative to taxing telephone, telegraph and express companies came up and he explained it was the law in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. A vote was not reached.

HOUSE.

Building and loan bill came up. An amendment providing that the executive council shall pass upon the rights of such associations to do business was offered by Allen. Dowell offered an amendment to the amendment granting appeal to district court from decision of council. Lambert began reading from a letter to prove that questionable methods were being used to influence legislation. [See elsewhere.] After the sensational letter had been read a resolution was unanimously adopted expressing confidence in the speaker, and a resolution by the speaker, providing for appointment of a committee of three members of the house and three of the senate to investigate the affair, was adopted. Allen's amendment was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 18.—Senate concurred in house resolution for a joint building and loan association investigation committee. Cheshire's amendment to the revenue bill came in for a lengthy debate. The amendment was defeated, 17 to 29.

HOUSE.

Speaker Byers occupied the chair to-day. The building and loan bill was taken up and amended so that after one year's payment of premium the withdrawal shall in no case be less than the amount paid to the association by the shareholders. Another amendment requiring associations to prepare and mail to every shareholder a verified statement showing the book and withdrawal value of shares every year was adopted. On a vote the bill failed to pass, 39 to 50. A motion to reconsider was filed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 19.—Consideration of the revenue bill was resumed and one or two unimportant amendments adopted. The bill then passed, 36 to 7. House bill relating to weather crop service, agricultural societies, etc., was then taken up. An effort was made to strike out the section giving county and district fairs $200 each year, but it failed, and the bill passed.

HOUSE.

Dingley, for the ways and means committee, reported the tariff bill, and it was ordered printed and placed on the calendar. A resolution providing for a final vote on tariff bill on March 31 passed, 179 to 132. The sundry civil bill was taken up and passed, 157 to 73. It carries $53,000,000. The general deficiency bill, carrying $8,166,214, came next and it passed, 131 to 89.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 20.—Bill proposing to codify the statutes in relation to criminal procedure came up. An amendment to the chapter on vagrants to prevent the marching of bands like Kelley's army was voted down. Fifty pages of the law had been completed at time of adjournment and no important changes had been made.

HOUSE.

The railroad bill was considered for awhile but finally went over until Monday. Bill for the purchase of a historical and art building passed. It carries an appropriation of $25,000, $5,000 of which is to be expended this year and $20,000 in 1898.

MIGHTY BATTLE FOUGHT.

One Thousand Men Lost in an Engagement in Uruguay.

MONTEVIDEO, March 20.—A battle occurred in the province of Paysaudu between large bodies of government troops and insurgents. The total losses on both sides were 1,000 men. It is not stated which side was victorious.

DANGERS OF THE GRIP.

The greatest danger from La Grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and chamberlain's cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for La Grippe, we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dread disease. It will effect a permanent cure in less time than any other treatment. The 25c and 50c sizes for sale by Harr.

Dan Stewart one day last week traded for a rifle, and proud of his bargain, took it home and was explaining its good qualities to his wife. He had a number of 32-calibre cartridges, which are about an inch and a quarter long and had placed these on the table. While he was interesting his better half in the redeeming features of the newly acquired flint lock, his young hopeful secured one of the shells and of course swallowed it—or tried to. But it stuck in his throat and Dan hied himself for a doctor, who succeeded in getting the cartridge down the little fellow. Dan says he never was much of a sportsman anyhow and believes he will sell this gun.—Lake Mills Graphic.

Seed Oats.

Unless farmers are very carefull in selecting seed this year there will be a thin stand of oats and a more or less complete fail ure of the oats crop. The oats grown in the southern part of the state last year were very light and chaffy. We are not prepared to say how these oats will grow, but by following the directions given elsewhere for testing, every farmer may know if he will go at it at once, what per cent will germinate and how vigorous the germination will be. It would be better, in our judgement, where farmers can secure old oats that have not been heated to trust to them rather than to the new, but even here we would test the seed first so that there may be no uncertainty.

FITZSIMMONS WINS.

AUSTRALIAN PUGILIST NOW CHAMPION OF THE WORLD.

Battle at Carson City Settles All Controversy — Fight Declared to Have Been One of the Best Ever Witnessed —Fourteen Rounds Fought.

Carson City, Nev., March 17.—Fitzsimmons won the big fight for the pugilistic championship of the world today, defeating James J. Corbett, of

ROBERT FITZSIMMONS.

California. Fourteen rounds were necessary to decide the question of supremacy. The fight is said by old sporting men to have been one of the best that ever took place in a ring.

Fighting was fast and furious from the start. Fitzsimmons forced the sparring and fought, though covered with blood, with fierce determination. Corbett, on the other hand, showed coolness and did by all odds the cleverer fighting. Corbett's punishment of the Australian was severe, but in the sixth round his blows became wild and he frequently missed his antagonist. Fitzsimmons during the sixth round went down on one knee and took the time limit. In the seventh round Fitzsimmons showed the worse for wear of the two and both men watched warily for a chance to land a knock-out blow. The Australian's fighting was fierce and Corbett showed extreme tiredness and decided signs of wearing.

JAMES J. CORBETT.

The blow which ended the fight was a left-hand punch, delivered just below the heart. It was all the more effective for the reason that Corbett was leaning backward when it came. It caught him on the tensely drawn muscles just over the spleen. Corbett was more unconscious from pain than from the force of the blow. As he lay writhing and groveling on the floor his face presented the most ghastly appearance imaginable. No man in a last death struggle could have horrified the spectators more, and his agonizing cries of pain could be heard above the cheers for the victor. And then followed the wildest scene of the day, when he arose to his feet, and with all the strength he had left, rushed at his opponent and tried to finish the contest. Those nearest the ring jumped over the ropes, in spite of all efforts of the police to prevent them, and in a moment the entire enclosure was filled with a howling, shouting mob and the noise was so great that the referee was hardly able to announce his decision, awarding the battle to Fitzsimmons. In the midst of it all, Corbett, who had been forced to his corner by his friends, broke away from them and rushed at them a second time, but this time, instead of attempting to renew the fight, he implored his victor to give him another chance and to accept a challenge from him. This was refused and warm words followed. Fitzsimmons was borne away with all the glory of his newly won victory, and Corbett left to return to his home in San Francisco, carrying with him the despair of defeat.

Injured by Natural Gas.

Muncie, Ind., March 18.—A tenement-house owned by R. M. Grosbeck of Indianapolis was destroyed by a natural gas explosion and fire Tuesday. The occupants, P. O. Mull and wife and F. M. Needham and wife, were seriously burned, and Mrs. Mull's condition is very dangerous. Her lower limbs were burned to a crisp, and she begged the firemen at work on the building to kill her. Her death is hourly expected.

Many Bills Are Presented.

Washington, March 18.—In the senate Tuesday 438 bills and eight joint resolutions were introduced. They embraced nearly every phase of public business. Mr. Morgan reintroduced the Nicaragua canal bill before the last congress, and also a joint resolution to abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Full Text of Mckinley's First Appeal to Congress.

"To the Congress of the United States: Regretting the necessity which has required me to call you together, I feel that your assembling in extraordinary session is indispensable because of the condition in which we find the revenues of the government. It is conceded that its current expenditures are greater than its receipts, and that such a condition has existed for now more than three years. With unlimited means at our command, we are presenting the remarkable spectacle of increasing our public debt by borrowing money to meet the ordinary outlays incident upon even an economical and prudent administration of the government. An examination of the subject discloses this fact in every detail and leads inevitably to the conclusion that the condition of the revenue which allows it is unjustifiable and should be corrected.

"We find by the reports of the secretary of the treasury that the revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1892, from all sources, were $425,868,260.22, and the expenditures for all purposes were $415,953,806.56, leaving an excess of receipts over expenditures of $9,914,453.66. During the fiscal year $40,570,467.93 was paid upon the public debt, which has been reduced since March 1, 1889, $259,076,890, and the annual interest charge decreased $11,684,576.60. The receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1893, amounted to $461,716,561.94, and its expenditures to $459,374,887.65, showing an excess of receipts over expenditures of $2,341,674.29.

"Since that time the receipts of no fiscal year, and with but few exceptions of no month of any fiscal year, have exceeded the expenditures. The receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, were $372,892,498.29, and its expenditures $442,605,758.87, leaving a deficit, the first since the resumption of specie payments, of $69,803,260.58. Notwithstanding there was a decrease of $16,769,128.78 in the ordinary expenses of the government as compared with the previous fiscal year, its income was still not sufficient to provide for its daily necessities, and the gold reserve in the treasury for the redemption of greenbacks was drawn upon to meet them. But this did not suffice, and the government then resorted to loans to replenish the reserve.

"In February, 1894, $50,000,000 in bonds were issued, and in November following a second issue of $50,000,000 was deemed necessary. The sum of $117,171,795 was realized by the sale of these bonds, but the reserve was steadily decreased until on Feb. 8, 1895, a third sale of $62,315,400 in bonds for $65,116,244 was announced to congress.

"The receipts of the government for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1896, were $390,373,203.30, and the expenditures $433,178,426.48, showing a deficit of $42,805,223.18. A further loan of $100,000,000 was negotiated by the government in February, 1896, the sale netting $111,166,246, and swelling the aggregate of bonds issued within three years to $262,315,400. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1896, the revenues of the government from all sources amounted to $409,475,408.78, while its expenditures were $434,678,654.48, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $25,203,245.70. In other words, the total receipts for the three fiscal years ended June 30, 1896, were insufficient by $137,811,729.46 to meet the total expenditures.

"Nor has this condition since improved. For the first half of the present fiscal year the receipts of the government, exclusive of postal revenues, were $157,507,603.76, and its expenditures, exclusive of postal service, $195,410,000.22, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $37,902,396.46. In January of this year the receipts, exclusive of postal revenues, were $24,316,994.05, and the expenditures, exclusive of postal service, $30,269,389.29, a deficit of $5,952,395.24 for the month. In February of this year the receipts, exclusive of postal revenues, were $24,400,997.38, and expenditures exclusive of postal service, $28,796,056.64, a deficit of $4,395,059.28, or a total deficit of $186,061,580.44 for the three years and eight months ended March 1, 1897. Not only are we without a surplus in the treasury, but with an increase in the public debt there has been a corresponding increase in the annual interest charge from $22,893,883.20 in 1892, the lowest of any year since 1862, to $34,387,297.60 in 1896, or an increase of $11,493,414.40.

"It may be urged that even if the revenues of the government had been sufficient to meet all its ordinary expenses during the last three years the gold reserve would still have been insufficient to meet the demands upon it, and that bonds would necessarily have been issued for its repletion. Be this as it may, it is clearly manifest, without denying or affirming the correctness of such a conclusion, that the debt would have been decreased in at least the amount of the deficiency, and business confidence immeasurably strengthened throughout the country.

"Congress should promptly correct the existing condition. Ample revenues must be supplied, not only for the ordinary expenses of the government, but for the prompt payment of liberal pensions and the liquidation of the principal and interest of the public debt. In rising revenue duties should be so levied upon foreign products as to preserve the home market so far as possible to our own producers; to revive and increase manufactures; to relieve and encourage agriculture; to increase our domestic and foreign commerce; to aid and develop mining and building, and to tender to labor in every field of useful occupation the liberal wages and adequate rewards to which skill and industry are justly entitled. The necessity of the passage of a tariff law which shall provide ample revenue need not be further urged. The imperative demand of the hour is the prompt enactment of such a measure, and to this object I earnestly recommend that congress shall make every endeavor.

"Before other business is transacted let us first provide sufficient revenue to faithfully administer the government, without the contracting of further debt or the continued disturbance of our finances. William McKinley.

"Executive Mansion, March 15, 1897."

To Work for Silver.

Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the national Democratic committee, and Daniel J. Campau, chairman of the national Democratic executive committee, left Denver Tuesday for Salt Lake. The object of their western visit is to confer with the permanent advocates of free coinage of silver concerning measures to carry on an educational campaign steadily until the election of 1900.

C. H. HARRISON THE YOUNGER.

HE IS CANDIDATE FOR THE HONOR ONCE HELD BY HIS FATHER.

Carter H. Harrison was born in 1860, in Chicago. From 1873 to 1876 he attended the Gymnasium of Altenburg in Saxe-Altenburg. On his return home, owing to his father's absence from Chicago on account of being a member of Congress, was unable to attend an Eastern College, and took a full collegiate course at St. Ignatius' College on the West Side, whence he graduated as bachelor of arts in the class of 1881. Took the degree of bachelor of laws after a two years' course at Yale in 1883. Followed the law until 1889, when he ambarked in real estate, with his younger brother, William Preston Harrison, under the firm name of Harrison Bros., until November, 1891, when, his father having purchased the Chicago Times, he devoted his time until the winter of 1894 as publisher of that paper.

ELECTRICALLY OPENED DOORS

Ingenious Apparatus for Performing a Simple Operation.

One may be tempted to ask whether it is worth while to arrange a door so that it will open automatically when you step on a mat before it, and will close when your foot presses another mat beyond, says the New York Tribune. But, whatever opinion may be entertained on this point, the fact that electrical apparatus for thus operating a door has been invented is at least worth recording. A noted lunch-room in Chicago and the city market in Springfield, Mass., have double doors equipped in this manner. Over the doorway is placed a suitable box inclosing magnets and machinery. From this box extends downward a rod, from which a horizontal arm reaches along the door. Forces at work within the box twist the rod and swing the door to and fro. When the door is closed there are some stiff springs already coiled up and trying to pull it open. It cannot move, however, until a certain band which is wound up on a drum has been released. The immediate effect of stepping on the mat is to close an electric circuit which frees that band. Then the springs swing the door open. When you step on the other mat another electric circuit is closed, which sets a current flowing through a small electric motor. This puts a drum or spool in motion, winds up the belt and draws the door shut. The motor is more powerful than the springs, so that in closing the door it brings the springs again into a state of tension sufficient to do their work over again as soon as a chance occurs. Just before the door reaches a closed position a switch is automatically moved which shuts off the electric current from the motor.

Where this apparatus is applied to double doors the outside mat will open the right-hand door, but close the left-hand one, while the inside mat closes the right-hand door, but opens the left-hand one.

BOSTON'S NEGLECT OF POE.

Memory of Her Most Famous Man of Letters Ignored.

I have mentioned the circumstance that it has never occurred to the town of Boston to erect a monument to Poe, who, next to Franklin, probably has the most world-wide fame of all the men of letters native to that town, and Poe was connected with Boston not alone by the important accident of his birth, but by the commencement there of his literary career, itself an event worth commemoration, says the Atlantic. So far as I am aware, Boston never awarded to Poe the honor which, in the case of her dead literary men of eminence, she sometimes deems worthy to be taken in lieu of any further monumental attention—namely, the calling of a public meeting by the mayor, at which addresses are made and complimentary resolutions adopted. The name of Poe is indeed carved on the outer wall of the public library at Boston; so are several hundred other names. Their purpose is chiefly decorative.

However, Boston's neglect in respect of Poe was but the neglect of all the rest of the country. His kindred left his grave at Baltimore unmarked, and a fund of about $1,000 had to be raised by public subscription to place above his ashes the unbeautiful mortuary monument which now bears his name. If an enterprising commercial person had not hired the cottage in which Poe lived at Fordham, just out of New York, and put up above its door the large sign "Poe Laundry," surmounting it with the figure of a raven, thereby arousing the wrath of many people, including the owner of the cottage, and shaming them into a protest, it is probable that the poet's fame would still be quite destitute of any public memorial.

Square-Muzzled Guns.

Dr. A. S. Kennedy of Auburn, N. Y., recently conceived the idea that a gun with a square muzzle would outshoot for pattern, if not for penetration, the ordinary round muzzle gun, and a few days since he tried the experiment by making his Winchester repeating shot gun square at the muzzle, and the very first shot fired from the gun after the change had been made was a great surprise, for no round-muzzled gun he had ever fired made such a close, even pattern and gave such wonderful penetration at the same distance as did his gun with a square muzzle.

Constipation

is a disease which afflicts over 75 per cent. of the American people. It is a dangerous disease because it not only poisons the blood but causes heaviness, oppression, and dulls the intellect. Then follow chronic headache, loss of appetite, slow digestion, nervousness, bad breath, dingy complexion and low spirits. It will eventually bring on liver and kidney disease in some incurable form. But sufferers from this dreaded malady are speedily

Cured by

Warner's SAFE Cure and Warner's SAFE Pills. Leading physicians the world over, have acknowledged this fact, and thousands of people throughout the land have testified to it.

Warner's

SAFE Cure puts a stop to backaches, headaches, constipation, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, tired feelings and sleeplessness. It builds up the exhausted system. It is a sure cure for liver and kidney complaint in any form, and the only remedy that has ever been able to cure Bright's disease.

REPORTER'S CHIPS.

From the Advertiser, Clinton, Iowa.

Every druggist in Clinton, Iowa, was interviewed to-day and had good words for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and not one of them had other than good results to report of those who had used them. One of the druggists referred me to a prominent merchant in Clinton, whose wife had for the last five years been badly crippled and at times nearly helpless from the effects of rheumatism. I was personally acquainted with the family, (Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bailey) and called on them this afternoon and found Mrs. Bailey very much improved since I was last there, and congratulated them on her improved condition, and inquired as to what means had been used to bring about the happy results. Mr. Bailey said that for years they had tried one thing after another but had found nothing that afforded any relief, but they continued trying and finally a few months since some one spoke good words for the Pink Pills as a safe and reliable remedy for rheumatic troubles, and they concluded to try once more. The Pink Pills were purchased and although in her case there was no rapid recovery of health, there was a decided change for the better and a continual steady improvement from week to week which has given them confidence in the remedy, and a belief that by their continued use she will soon be restored to complete health.

Mr. Bailey told me of another case with which he was personally acquainted, that of Mr. George Brenizer, one of the city officials for many years, and that for the last two years he had been nearly helpless from rheumatism, but has of late been using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and had been wonderfully helped by using them. As I was also personally acquainted with him I went out to his residence to get his personal testimony as to what had wrought the happy change in his system, but he had just moved to Chicago, but I have every reason to believe that what Mr. Bailey told me were the facts of the case as they were intimate friends.

Every druggist reports good sales of the pills but have few but facts outside of the demand for them, but the money in the money drawer and that is in most cases all they know or care about. I have called on quite a number of people who have used them for nervous prostration and general debility and the universal testimony is that the Pink Pills accomplished all they are recommended for. I am personally acquainted with all the persons referred to in this letter and the facts have been stated in each case.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. HISTORY OF WITCHCRAFT.

John Fiske Tells Interesting Facts About the Old-Time Crime.

"Witchcraft at Salem and Elsewhere" was the subject of the third lecture of the series of Prof. John Fiske, says the New York Tribune. Prof. Fiske began his lecture by citing an instance which occurred in Normandy in 1670, when Louis XIV granted leniency to a number of persons convicted by the parliament of Normandy of the crime of witchcraft. A remonstrance was sent to the crown by the parliament supplicating his majesty to reflect upon the guilt of these persons, whose crime was the "greatest men can commit," both as an offense against the glory of God and a menace against the good and even lives of their fellow-men. Louis was too well versed in the etiquette of the highest court to reverse his decision, and the offenders escape death, but the incident serves to show the attitude of the leaders of that time toward the supposed crime. "Belief in witchcraft," said the lecturer, "was shared by the whole human race from the earliest time down to the seventeenth century. Tribes of people have been found living in a state of extreme barbarism, and it is believed by travelers that they were utterly without ideas of religion; still, even among these there was a strong belief in the supernatural in human form. According to the pagan idea the first association of death and all evil was with some similar agency. They had no conception of natural decease—all death was murder through some superhuman power. This belief in witchcraft was deeply rooted and accepted by all without question. This belief now is entirely extinct among educated people. What, then, caused this change? It is not argument. A powerful cause has been at work, and it is the gigantic development of physical science since the days of Newton and Descartes. This new force supplanted superstition in the minds of the people, just as clover will choke out weeds." Relating to evidence, Mr. Fiske told of several instances which showed the power of the belief in the old world long before the famous Salem witchcraft in the new. One of the first recorded was the trial of two old women in England for bewitching six girls and an infant boy. The child being ill, the mother suspected it of being a victim of witchcraft—the most natural supposition at that time. She consulted a country physician, who advised her to hang the child's crib blanket up during the day and if she found anything strange about it to throw it in the fire. She did so and when she looked at the blanket found a frog on it. When thrown in the fire it blazed suddenly, then vanished with a queer noise. At the same hour one of the old women, sitting before the fire, had her face scorched, which immediately aroused suspicion against her. About the same time the other children were seized with pains, causing convulsions and other such symptoms of evil practice, upon which the two old women suspected were tried, convicted and hanged. During the middle ages the executions for witchcraft were numerous. The last sentences of death for witchcraft occurred in England in 1712, in Scotland in 1722, in Germany in 1749 and in Spain in 1781. In this country the first accused of witchcraft was Margaret Jones, at Charlestown, who aroused suspicion by her opposition to the usual forms of medicinal practice, such as bleeding and leeches, and who effected remedies through the means of simple herbs.

Precious Stones Fads.

The powerful chemical effects of the sun are felt even by precious stones. The ruby, sapphire and emerald suffer less than other colored stones in this respect, but it has been shown by experiment that a ruby lying in a shop window for two years became much lighter in tint than its mate kept in a dark place during that period. Garnets and topazes are more easily affected. Pearls are said to show deterioration with age, but if they are not worn constantly they will recuperate wonderfully during brief vacations spent in quiet and darkness. The only species of unluck which the practical person believes the opal will bring its owner is that of loss if the stone is exposed carelessly to heat. It is liable to crack, being composed principally of silicic acid, with a small proportion of water.

Russia does not really want to strike Greece. It is afraid the little nation might be hurt.

Russell Sage holds a $50 mortgage on his grand-nephew's little home. That mortgage ought to be lifted as soon as possible.

W. A. Johnson, who is now associate justice of the Kansas supreme court, serving his third term, once was a baseball pitcher. He seems to be in the game still. He's on the bench.

The Chicago Evening Post calls McKinley the twenty-fourth president. We hope this great question of counting the presidents will some day be settled before all the brain tissue of the country is worn threadbare.

A St. Louis alchemist, Edwin C. Brice by name, announces to the world that he has discovered a formula by which he can obtain gold and silver from crude raw material and the baser metals. The feat was performed the other day in the presence of several spectators whose probity cannot be questioned. Mr. Brice is a cousin of Senator Calvin H. Brice.

Now and then we hear of girl typewriters capturing the hearts and bank accounts of their employers, or their employers' sons. In the day of woman's supremacy the conditions will be reversed. Already the first case has been reported in the male typewriter of St. Paul who eloped with and married the daughter of his millionaire employer. Why not give the boys an equal show with the girls?

A Presbyterian congregation at Steamboat Rock, Ia., disliked their pastor, Rev. H. B. Fonkin, and while he was away they sent for a congregational minister at Cedar Rapids to come down and preach to them last Sunday evening. After the service one of the deacons arose and made a motion that every member join the Congregational church. And it was carried unanimously. Rev. Mr. Fonkin is recovering very slowly from the shock.

In the United States senate a bill has lately been introduced to establish a national department of public health. The bill is the result of efforts by the Pan-American Medical Congress, a gathering of physicians from the countries of North, South and Central America. Such a department, if established, would study in a systematic and scientific way, not only diseases and their prevention or cure, but many kindred matters which have quite as important a bearing upon the welfare of the people—matters such as the condition of the laboring classes, their workshops and dwellings, the cost and nutritive value of various kinds of food, the purity of water supplies, etc.

The comparative statement of the receipts and expenditures of the United States shows the total receipts during February to have been $24,400,997, and the disbursements $28,796,056, which leaves a deficit for the month of $4,395,059, as compared with a deficit of about $690,000 for February, 1896. Since July 1, 1896, the aggregate deficit is $48,135,441. The receipts from customs last month amounted to $11,537,260; from internal revenue, $10,888,421; from miscellaneous sources, $1,925,315. As compared with February, 1896 there is shown a loss from customs of about $2,320,000, a gain of about $82,000 from internal revenue and a gain of about $550,000 from miscellaneous sources.

Every public speaker is liable to say what Punch calls "things one could wish to have expressed otherwise." Not long since, at a meeting of ministers, where a sermon that had caused very general comment was criticised, a Brooklyn pastor said several ill-considered things about the preacher of the discourse. The next morning, on seeing them in the cold type of a newspaper, they seemed to him rude and offensive. Immediately—being a Christian and a gentleman—he wrote to the editor a letter for publication in the next issue of the paper, wherein he withdrew the offensive words as "unwarranted and uncalled for," and conveying an unfriendly judgment which the criticised preacher did not deserve. The apology confessed the wrong and made amends for the infelicitous speech. That was not remarkable. Gentlemen do that every day. But what is remarkable about it is, that it exhibits one theologian, who, living in an atmosphere where there is no odium theologicum (theological hatred), can differ from another theologian without exhibiting the rancor which cloaks itself under the guise of zeal for the truth.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

MURDER NEAR EDDYVILLE.

Awful Result of a Quarrel Over a Division Fence.

OTTUMWA, March 26.—Jake Werner, a German farmer, 25 years old, was shot and killed near Eddyville, by John Steele. The farms of Werner and Steele adjoin, and a feud resulted between them from a quarrel over a line fence a few years ago. Two weeks ago a third party stirred up the trouble anew, and they began carrying revolvers, each hearing that the other had threatened him. Werner was at work in his field when Steele came by. Steele was seen to stop, say a few words and then begin shooting. He shot Werner twice in the breast, killing him almost instantly. Steele made no attempt to escape, but was arrested with his three sons. Steele is one of the oldest settlers of Monroe county, and both were considered good citizens.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Verdict Reached in the Wright Murder Case at Albia.

OTTUMWA, March 29.—James Hazlett and William Franklin were found guilty of manslaughter for killing Joe Wright, at Hickory church, in Monroe county. The quarrel was between Hazlett and Wright, over a girl, and the jury made the unusual request that Hazlett get the extent of the law and that Franklin be shown leniency. The trial of Dr. King for complicity in the murder of Mrs. Elmer Dougherty is now on. At Centerville, where it was taken on a change of venue, is proceeding. This is the second trial of the case, the first resulting in a jury disagreement. John Steele is now awaiting the action of the grand jury for the murder of Jake Werner.

EX-CITY CLERK SUED.

City of Des Moines Will Try to Recover Funds Retained by an Official.

DES MOINES, March 27.—City Solicitor Macomber has begun suits against ex-City Clerk Kooker to recover $5,800, which it is alleged was paid to Kooker as city clerk by contractors to cover incidentals, etc., which Kooker failed to turn over to the city treasurer. There are two suits. One is against Kooker and his bondsmen, G. W. Shope and D. H. Kooker, for $3,000, and the other is against Kooker and his bondsmen, G. D. Ellyson and D. H. Kooker, for $2,800. The bondsmen are liable for but $1,000 in each suit.

The Novak Case in Court.

VINTON, March 27.—Mrs. Mary Novak, wife of the missing Frank A. Novak, of Walford, who so suddenly and mysteriously disappeared on the night of the burning of his store and bank on the night of February 3, last, has petitioned the district court of Benton county to appoint Joe J. Novak, of Iowa City, a brother of Frank, administrator of his estate, alleging in her petition for the appointment that Frank A. Novak died February 3, 1897. She gives as the property of his estate the homestead which they were occupying, the interest in the store and stock of general merchandise of Novak & Jolik, which was burned, and personal property amounting to about $100.

Mrs. Mangus Wants a Divorce.

CEDAR RAPIDS, March 26.—A big sensation has been created here by Mrs. Christian Mangus bringing suit in the district court against her husband for separate support and maintenance. The petition is a lengthy one. She claims that she was given to her husband as his wife by her father when she was young and inexperienced, in order to have Mr. Mangus remain in charge of her father's brewery; that she has always been a dutiful wife, but that she has been cruelly treated, until she is now in mortal fear of her life. Mr. Mangus is very wealthy, and she asks for the use of the homestead and alimony of $500 a month.

Sheriff Can't Take Rewards.

DES MOINES, March 27.—Attorney General Remley has handed down an important opinion relative to the acceptance of rewards by sheriffs. Mr. Remley holds that it is contrary to public policy to allow sheriffs to accept rewards for the arrest of criminals. The opinion is submitted to Governor Drake and is in reference to the case of L. H. Davidson, where the sheriff and another party both claim the reward offered by the state.

Burned By a Powder Explosion.

CHARITON, March 26.—Ewing Woods, son of George Woods, of Belinda, met with a serious accident. He was smoking, and started to carry half a pound of powder from the store to a wagon in front, when the powder took fire and exploded, badly burning and shattering his face. The physicians are doubtful if he will recover his eyesight, but say he will recover all right.

McPherson Given a Life Sentence.

WAPELLO, March 26.—Orval McPherson, convicted of the murder of Marshal Finley at Morning Sun, has been sentenced to imprisonment in the Ft. Madison penitentiary for life.

TRAGEDY AT LADDSDALE.

Five Children of Mr. and Mrs. Penrod Burned to Death.

OTTUMWA, March 26.—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Penrod, at Laddsdale, a little mining town on the Wapello and Davis county line, were burned to death. Three were cremated and two died a few hours later. They are: Harry, aged 10; John, aged 8; Minerva, aged 6; Ross, aged 4; Blaine, aged 3. The parents of the children took the oldest child, a son aged 12, and a baby in the arms of its mother, and went to a religious meeting, having first put the other five children to bed. The school house where the services were held was only a hundred feet away from the Penrod house. About 9 o'clock an alarm of fire was given, and Penrod rushed out with the other occupants of the school house to find his house in flames. It was impossible to enter the house, as it was crumbling when Penrod reached it. The children's beds were by the window, however, and Penrod burst the window open and succeeded in pulling the 8-year-old and 4-year-old boys out, horribly burning himself in the act. The two never regained consciousness, however, and died in a short time. The others were burned until only a few bones were found in the debris of the house.

CLINTON MAN KILLED.

Cut to Pieces by a Train at Sterling, Illinois

CLINTON, March 29.—An accident occurred at Sterling, Ills., in which Frank R. Peck, a real estate and insurance agent of Clinton, was badly mangled. Mr. Peck had been in Chicago on business, and had stopped at Wheaton to see his brother. It is supposed Mr. Peck stepped off the train at the depot and attempted to get aboard again while the tratn was in motion. The circumstances are a mystery.

Mysteriously Missing.

INDEPENDENCE, March 28.—John Winger, a Bohemian, aged 20 years, was employed on the farm of William Trever at Spencer Grove during the winter. On February 14 he mysteriously disappeared, and no trace of him has been found. It was at first supposed that he had gone to relatives at Center Point or Marion, but it has just been learned that he has not been seen by them, and his relatives are instituting a search for him. He was without funds, as all the money he possessed was found in his valise. Temporary insanity is supposed to be the cause, as there was no just reason for his disappearance.

Thompson Man Hangs Himself.

THOMPSON, March 29.—For some time it has been noticed that Lewis Halverson, a prominent farmer living three miles south of Thompson, has been melancholy, owing to the loss of several hundred dollars in a business transaction, but people had no idea it would lead to any such thing as self-destruction, and were shocked when it became known that his lifeless body had been found hanging in his barn.

Fire at Des Moines.

DES MOINES, March 27.—M. Reigelman & Co.'s wholesale and retail millinery house was greatly damaged by fire and water. The stock was valued at $150,000, with insurance amounting to $80,000.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Fire which started in the basement of Cullen's dry goods store at Ottumwa recently destroyed the store with its stock, worth $50,000; Prugh & Co.'s wholesale queensware and china store, $15,000; J. G. Meek's dry goods stock, $15,000, and W. J. Donlan & Co.'s stock, $30,000. Other tenants on upper floors lost heavily.

Des Moines dispatch: If there is an early spring Director J. R Sage, of the Iowa Weather and Crop Service, expects to see a large amount of spring wheat sown by Iowa farmers. There are less than 22,300,000 acres of winter wheat in the state, a very small acreage, although sufficient to furnish bread for the entire state. Unless the weather allows sowing the last of this month or the first of April something else will be put in.

A Chicago, Burlington & Quincy express a few days ago struck a man twelve miles east of Chariton, instantly killing him. His head was cut and the bones of his limbs broken. He has a tattoo on his arm of "M. D."; also a receipted bill in the name of M. Dreis, from a Rochester, N. Y., tailor. He is an Irishman, heavy build, sandy moustache, and had spent a night in the county jail at Chariton as a vagrant. The coroner's jury exonerates the railway company.

J. C. Ford, of Des Moines, has recently returned from the Chicago bench show, bringing with him six ribbons as evidence of the merit of his Great Danes. At this show there was the largest exhibit of this notable breed of dogs ever made in this country, and the fact that Mr. Ford won the special for the best Great Dane, as well as one other first, two seconds and one third, winning in every class he competed in, and altogether more prizes than any other kennel of Danes has won with the same number, is a great victory for him.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

LONDON, March 23.—While the Cretan insurgents were engaged in fighting native moslems at Suda, in the presence of the European fleet, the Turkish vessels in the harbor opened a heavy fire on the insurgents. The sultan has proclaimed the autonomy of Crete under the suzerainty of the Porte.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 23.—The Turks at Tokar attacked the Armenians and fifteen were killed. It is feared this presages a renewal of Armenian massacres.

ATHENS, March 23.—Some of the Greek sharpshooters at Pramanda opened fire on the Turks, and it was only by the most urgent efforts of the Greek officers that a conflict was averted. The Greek military preparations on the frontier continue with ceaseless activity. At Kopraina the officials seized 1,000 sacks of flour destined for the Turkish troops at Sangora.

ATHENS, March 24.—War preparations in Greece continue night and day, and there are no indications of a backdown. Money does not appear to be lacking for Greek equipment. Large supplies of arms and ammunition are forthcoming, from what source is not clear.

LONDON, March 24.—The Daily Mail publishes a dispatch from Braila, Roumania, which says that the Russian volunteer fleet has been ordered to concentrate itself in the ports of the Black sea nearest Constantinople, and to hold itself in readiness to sail. The Russian army corps which has been stationed in the province of Bessarabia is now moving toward Odessa.

CONSTATINOPLE, March 25.—The steps taken by the sultan to punish the Turkish officials responsible for the massacre of 100 Armenians at Tokat are not satisfactory to the powers and the sultan has been warned that unless satisfactory action is taken at once the attitude of the powers toward Turkey and Greece may change. He is also warned that if fresh outbreaks occur public opinion in France, Great Britain and Italy will compel those governments to take summary action against the Turks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 26.—The Turkish squadron, consisting of three armored frigates of 6,000 tons and ten guns each, one ironclad corvette of 2,000 tons and five guns, one river gunboat, one cruiser, three torpedo boats and two torpedo-destroyers, which has been lying at Galliopolis for the past few days, awaiting orders, has been ordered to proceed to Smyrna and Salonica. The sultan has issued an irade summoning into active service forty-four battalions of the reserves of the Second army corps and the whole of the contingent of 1897.

CONTANTINOPLE, March 26.—The British admiral has been notified not to send any British warships to participate in the proposed blockade of the Greek ports but in order to avoid the appearance of open rupture, to acquiesce in the blockade.

CANEA, March 26.—The insurgent forces besieging the Mussulman fort at Malaxa opened fire on the fort with artillery and after an all-day battle succeeded in blowing up the blockhouse and setting fire to it. The fleets fired ninety shells upon the insurgents, who, however, were not deterred in their purpose and finally captured the fort.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 28.—The Greek patriarch issues an official report that there were 700 persons killed, including a number of Greeks, in the recent massacre at Tokat. The porte, fearing an outbreak here, has arrested eighty Armenian suspects. It is stated that the sultan is soliciting an explanation through the Turkish ambassador at St. Petersburg, of the concentration of Russian troops upon the Turkish frontier.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 27.—The diplomatic corps greatly apprehends serious complications in Macedonia which will jeopardize the peace of Europe. The proposals of Great Britain to establish a neutral zone on the Greek frontier is impracticable. It is urged it is preferable to immediately blockade Greece and thus nip the development of complications in Macedonia.

ATHENS, March 27.—A royal decree appointing Crown Prince Constantine to the command of the army on the Thessalian frontier has been published.

ATHENS, March 28.—The government has handed to the representatives here of the several powers a note protesting against the blockade of Crete. The note declares that in view of the bonds uniting the Greeks and Christians of Crete, the blockade, which is depriving the island of provisioning itself, is contrary to the sentiments of humanity inspiring the powers.

LONDON, March 29.—A dispatch from Athens says: It is stated on the best of authority that war may be expected to break out at any moment, most probably near Arta and less probably near Larissa. It is believed in diplomatic circles that the presence of Crown Prince Constantine will have a restraining influence on the troops.

CUBA LOST TO SPAIN.

Decaying Empire No Longer Able to Stand the Strain.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Spain is at the end of her string and Cuban independence is in sight. This is the news which has been received in official circles in Washington. Weyler's campaign in the eastern province has been a failure. The insurgents still control two-thirds of the island. The Spanish troops are poorly fed and unpaid. The credit of Spain is gone and the treasury is empty. The rebellions in Cuba and the Philippines are costing from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 per month. Spain has made up her mind that she must either lose the Philippines or Cuba, and has concluded to let the latter go. Before doing so, however, she will first negotiate through the United States to get the insurgents to accept autonomy, and, finding that proposition rejected, will propose that the Cubans guarantee the war debt and accept independence. It remains to be seen whether the insurgents will accept the latter proposition or, feeling their position secure, reject it, and take by arms the land that is now practically theirs.

MADE A GALLANT RESCUE.

Life-Savers Take Thirty-Five Persons From the Foundered Saginaw.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—A gallant rescue was affected by the crew of the life saving station at Long Beach, N. J. Superintendent Kimball, of the life saving service, received a telegram from the keeper there, saying that the Clyde line steamer Saginaw, of New York, from Hayti for New York, with a cargo of logwood and cotton, went ashore one and a half miles from the station. The thirty-five persons on board, including one passenger, were saved. The keeper adds that when the rescue was made, the sea was rough, the wind northeast and the atmosphere foggy. It is thought the steamer will float at the next high tide.

More Help for Cubans.

HAVANA, via Key West, March 27.—An expedition carrying arms, ammunition and heavy field pieces has been landed successfully at Boca de Jaruco, to the northwest of Havana. Famine has commenced to invade the district of Sancti Spiritus. The failure of the sugar crop is the principal cause. The planters have abandoned all hope of grinding this season.

Applications for Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Since the change of administration over 80,000 applications for postoffices have been filed at the postoffice department. The number is said to be somewhat smaller than four years ago. All the papers have been received and classified and the cases made up to date.

Congressman Clark Will Retire.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Congressman Clark, of Keokuk, has formally announced to his colleagues that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself as the representative of the First district in congress. It is presumed that he will soon make a formal announcement of his retirement.

For Relief of Unemployed.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Senator Quay has introduced a bill by request authorizing the president to employ men who may be abruptly thrown out of employment, "together with all so-called tramps," in the construction of public works.

Twenty-one Drowned.

CORRUNNA, Spain, March 27.—A dispatch from Ferrol says: A boat with thirty occupants sank in a collision with a steamer. Twenty-one were drowned.

"Oliver Optic" Dead.

BOSTON, March 28.—William T. Adams, the well-known writer of juvenile literature, known throughout the country as "Oliver Optic," is dead.

The Czarovitch Hopelessly Ill.

LONDON, March 29.—A private telegram from Algiers says that the condition of the czarovitch, the czar's brother, is hopeless.

BREVITIES.

The largest diamond in the world has arrived in London from Kimberly, South Africa. It is said to be worth $2,500,000 uncut.

Representative Maxwell, of Nebraska, has recently introduced in congress a bill to encourage the erection of mills for the manufacture of sugar and syrup from beets. The bill provides that for every ton of sugar made from beets there shall be paid a bounty for a period of nine years. The amount for three years to be 75 cents a ton, for the second three years 50 cents, and the last three 25 cents.

A Berlin cable says: The discussion of the naval estimates was resumed in the reichstag, which eventually adopted, by a vote of 245 to 91, the first credit, 1,000,000 marks, for a new ironclad. The minority was composed of socialists, radicals and German people's party, Poles and members of the Bavarian peasants' federation. Later the reichstag rejected, by a vote of 204 to 143, the credit for the first cruiser, and the credit for the second cruiser was rejected without debate.

THE GRAY FALCON

BY M. T. CALDOR.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XXIV.—(CONTINUED.)

"Oh, yes, my young lady. I'll tell you all about it; and indeed, it warms up the old man's heart to see that pleasant smile of yours again—so much that I can tell it briskly. You remember the terrible night—there, there, I won't talk of it! I won't say a word more than I can help, it makes me shiver myself. We servants were half frightened to death, such of us as were not in that wretch of an M. Pierre's plot, and we huddled together, not knowing what to do, for they wouldn't let us fly away from the chateau. We guessed what terrible thing was happening, but couldn't get near you to see, until the new band came, the masked men, which drove M. Pierre's folks away. Then, while they were fighting outside, I crept into the chapel. My old blood quite froze in my veins at the sight I saw; I thought you were all killed. I was going to try to bring a little life to those who showed no wounds; but I heard some one coming through the broken window, and I ran away as fast as I could; I thought I should be killed for being there, so I ran and hid away till everything was quiet. When I came out I found most of the servants gone; but there lay poor Victorie's body right in the corridor.

"The masked men were most of them outside, keeping guard, I thought, and some were getting together blankets and food, and piling them into baskets; I crept back softly and looked into the chapel. A tall man in a mask was there giving directions about burying the bodies. He seemed to feel dreadfully about the murder, and the curse he uttered against that villainous Pierre made me feel sure he was friendly to your family. I couldn't see anything of my young mistress, and this man kept asking where she was. One of his men said that they must have carried her off, and then he started and went out as fast as he could go. The men followed him, and so I hurried in and took my last look, as I expected, of my dear mistress. While I was bending over her, I saw a little fluttering beating at her throat. I put my ear hastily to her heart; it was a minute before I could make sure, then I knew she was not dead. I stood a moment wringing my hands, not knowing what to do; then some good saint put it into my head to think of Victorie lying there dead. I tore out into the corridor and brought the body in, changed the ornaments and mantles, and put the long training silk skirt of the countess on the dead girl, and the peasant cloak I wrapped around my mistress.

"The masked people came and carried the poor Victorie to the grave instead of her mistress. They seemed expecting M. Pierre every moment, and paid no attention to the rear door. Taking my mistress in my arms, I ran off through the darkness, on that side, and got safely to my cottage. I could not trust a soul, but telling my daughter it was Victorie, I laid her on a bed, and gave her the best cordial I could find. She laid so all the next day, just breathing a little, enough to show she was not dead, but never opening her eyes.

"I went over the spot where the chateau had stood the next day. It was a terrible sight, that smoking ring of charred ground; but my heart was too full of the fear of the knowledge of what I had done getting to M. Pierre, to feel so badly as I should have done any other time.

"I found out from the other servants that it was M. Pierre who struck Victorie, because she begged the mistress' life, but none of 'em seemed to know she was dead. Perhaps some of his men gave the last blows which made the face so none could have told who it was.

"He came up to me, and asked me if I knew what had become of the young mistress. I could answer innocent enough there, and I pointed to the grave.

"'No, no,' said he; 'there are two bodies missing. The old woman is dead fast enough, but the other has escaped,' and with a terrible oath he warned me not to harbor her.

"I shook like a leaf with fear, and asked meekly enough if he cared about my keeping Victorie, that she was at my cottage sick.

"'Keep her as long as you like,' said he, 'but mind you, keep clear of any other.'

"I went home, trembling you may believe, but the saints seemed to help me. My lady never came to herself for three long, dreary weeks, so as to know anything, I mean, and I managed to keep everybody out, and my daughter and I took all the care of her. They were such wild times folks had enough to do to manage for themselves, without meddling with their neighbors' affairs. M. Pierre came to the cottage once, but he only glanced into the room where he supposed Victorie was sick. He kept a guard around my place, I know, so no one should come to me, and he had me watched wherever I went; but he never thought I had her all the time in my cottage.

"When my lady woke up to know herself, she was like a little child. I had dreaded it—not being sure but the shock would kill her; but when she asked for her daughter, I told her she was safe (the saints know I meant in Heaven), and she was so feeble, she asked no more. I waited till she was strong again, and that wasn't for months, before I let her know what had happened, and sorry enough was I, that I didn't go on cheating her; I thought she would just die after all my saving her, for lack of trying to live. When she was able to go about, we fixed up just such a patch as Victorie would have had to wear, and there she lived in my cottage, no one mistrusting but it was Victorie, and she never stepping her foot out of that room, except at midnight. I made up a story that Victorie was so hurt at her scarred face she wouldn't allow any one to see her; and the poor wench had been such a proud-spirited piece they all believed it. I was dreadful uneasy, though, expecting every day that something would happen to let M. Pierre know of the truth. Many's the night I've laid awake planning; but I never should have got the chance if M. Pierre hadn't suddenly taken himself off to Paris. Something very queer had happened at the Little Forest, which he had been guarding night and day, and he went off in wrath, vowing vengeance on everybody, they said.

"Then I went to work in earnest. I got all the money I could, and gave out that Victorie had taken a notion to go away, and that I was going to journey with her to Calais. I dressed her all up, and put a thick veil on, so they could only see the great patch, and my lady and I set off on foot. We had a terrible time of it; it was only now and then we got a ride in a cart or on a donkey; but after sleeping in sheds and begging for dogs' victuals, we made our way to Lyons. There I stopped a good while, because of the troubles we heard of all about Paris. I got some work, and we just kept from starving, because I had to lay by enough to help her to a passage to England, if ever we could get to the coast."

"Noble, faithful Jeannot!" exclaimed Felicie, catching his hand, and kissing it fervently.

"Noble, indeed; he has not told you half the self-sacrifice and devotion!" echoed the countess.

CHAPTER XXV.

POOR old Jeannot tried to conquer the sudden weakness that came over him at this earnest gratitude, but the tears came pouring over his wrinkled cheeks, and his voice broke down entirely.

Jules had stood gazing blankly, from one to another.

"Monsieur Emile," said he, suddenly, as a momentary silence ensued; "I don't understand this at all. You told me that Chlotilde was your niece; I understood that she was of peasant birth."

Emile smiled proudly.

"I adopted her for my niece when I believed her friendless—now her mother has returned she must go back to her true name. Will it matter to you, who asked me for my niece, though I warned you of my peasant origin, that she comes from a noble family?"

"Ah, not to me, who looked upon her while Chlotilde as the peer of our proudest duchess; but I am penniless, stripped of everything—her mother may object."

"I see you are still mystified; but what does the lady say herself?" and he touched the hand of Lady Felicie gently.

She smiled, blushed and then, looking up with tears still sparkling in her eyes, she answered:

"I say I would rather remain Chlotilde, always if another name will take me from the love of Jules, or his betrothal vow."

Then turning to the countess, she said eagerly:

"My mother surely will not consider it any hindrance, that he I love has no claim to noble birth, when his nature has proved to be thoroughly heroic and grand."

"Heaven forbid!" answered the countess, earnestly, "but I am perplexed—"

"So are we all. Let me unravel a little of the mystery. Jules, allow me to introduce you to the bride who can now claim your heart as well as nuptial vow. Gentle hearted, devoted little maiden, willing to waive so generously the claims of birth and fortune, know who in truth is this Jules you have promised to love and cherish with a wife's tenderness. Lady Felicie Languedoc, the Marquis Edward Jules De Berri. I hope you duly appreciate each other's claims."

They stared at each other in amazement.

"The marquis I dreaded and feared," uttered Felicie.

"The Lady Felicie I so thoroughly detested!" stammered Edward Jules.

Emile smiled joyously, and bending down to the countess began a whispered explanation.

"I knew that they were prejudiced against each other; I saw it was your wish they should be united. When I found the young marquis was only stunned by the blow on his head, I knew I must keep them together in my secret retreat, and I formed this plan, foreseeing how it would end."

"Our benefactor and preserver always," said the countess, softly; "alas! we have no reward to give in return." Emile opened his lips eagerly, and then closed them again, murmuring, as he turned away:

"It is no time now; I can afford to wait."

Edward, leading the smiling Felicie, came to the countess.

"Dearest mother, will you give us your blessing, though I come stripped of coronet, fortune, estate; of everything except a devoted love, a strong arm, and resolute will."

"A thousand times more joyfully, my dear boy, than I could have done in the Chateau Languedoc on that fatal evening; you will give my Felicie the priceless offering it was not then in your power to bestow, a loving and appreciating heart," answered the countess.

"As regards the fortune," observed Emile, "the package of diamonds remains untouched, just as your hapless father secured it in readiness for leaving France. I have kept it on my person day and night through many perils and vicissitudes, but it is safe, and so are all the valuable gems of the Languedoc family. You may lack the grandeur of the old days, but poverty you will never need to fear."

"Noble, generous Emile!" echoed one and all; "you have done all for us, nothing for yourself."

He smiled dreamily.

Lady Felicie drew his stately head down to her lips, and whispered something in his ear.

He smiled again, kissed her fondly, and turned away hastily.

"What did you say, my child?" asked the countess.

"I made him a promise; sometime I'll tell you what it was. Oh, mamma, mamma, how can we be thankful enough for this joyful ending of our troubles!"

The other passengers had discreetly retired. Jeannot had retreated after Emile, and now Edward Jules discovered it were judicious for him also to leave the agitated mother and daughter to themselves. It was a long and perfectly open conversation which ensued.

And the good ship sped on her way, and bore them all safely to the friendly English shore.

They found a pretty country seat a little distance from the seashore, but whose cupola gave a glimpse of the blue waves stretching toward their poor, distracted, but still dearly beloved France, and thither they all went.

Jules and Felicie were to be married at once, in the most private and unostentatious manner. Emile was very grave, and very restless after the day was actually fixed upon.

Lady Felicie had watched him anxiously, and one morning she suddenly seized his hand, and with an arch smile, though a dewy eye, she led him to the easy chair where her mother sat looking out thoughtfully into the sunny garden.

Her new found happiness, and clothing becoming her station, had wrought a marvelous change in the appearance of the countess. A soft color restored the youthful outline to her face, the peaceful look in the dark eyes, the becoming head dress, all had restored as if by magic, her olden beauty.

"Try, dearest Emile, and remember that I have promised it," cried Felicie, and ran hastily away.

What followed was too sacred for Felicie even to inquire about, much more, then, for me to give to pen description. But in a little more than an hour, they came out to the garden where Felicie and Edward were waiting in painful suspense.

A single glance showed the young couple what had happened.

What a serene peace deepened the tints of Emile's eagle eyes, what a sweet content nestled around the lips of the countess!

"Felicie," said Emile, "my child indeed; we will have a double wedding."

Felicie kissed them both in extravagance of delight.

And so both members of the haughty count's family parted with the proud name of Languedoc. Neither ever repented it. They lived in England in peace and quiet, until tranquillity returned to France, when they sought again her beloved shores.

[The End.]

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, March 22.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate: Joseph L. Bristow, Kansas, fourth assistant postmaster general; Binger Herman, Oregon, commissioner of the land office; Earnest G. Timme, Wisconsin, fifth auditor of treasury; Commodore J. N. Miller, rear admiral. The senate adopted a resolution requesting the president for information relative to the imprisonment and death of Dr. Ruiz in Cuba. Lodge reported the bill restricting immigration and Pettigrew reported bill for free homes on public lands.

HOUSE.

The house immediately went into committee of the whole on the tariff bill, the reading of which occupied over two hours. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, then opened the debate in favor of the bill. He was followed by Wheeler, of Alabama, who opposed its passage. Hopkins, of Illinois, followed Wheeler in advocacy of the bill and the house then adjourned until evening. Then the minority report was presented by Bailey, of Texas, and speeches in opposition to the bill were made by Robinson, Green, Carmach and Buckner.

SENATE.

Washington, March 23.—Allen offered a resolution for an investigation of the dismissal of microscopists from the bureau of animal industry at Omaha, because, as he alleged, of their free silver sentiments. It was amended so that the committee should also investigate whether in their opinion the civil service law should be continued, amended or repealed. It was then referred. Turpie advocated the election of senators by the people. Hoar offered a constitutional amendment making the 30th of April inauguration day. The bill to amend the act repealing timber culture law passed.

HOUSE.

The tariff debate was continued to-day, the speakers being McLaurin, Gibson, Dockery, Newlands, Lacey, Swanson, Cochran, Dolliver, Howard, Adamson, Clardy and Kelly.

SENATE.

Washington, March 24.—Cullom introduced a bill for a monument to Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg, Pa. Allen introduced a bill to repeal the civil service act. Hoar introduced a bill to forbid the carrying through the mails or by inter-state commerce of kinetoscope representations of prize fights.

HOUSE.

The speakers in the tariff debate to-day were McMillin, Grosvenor, Fox, Williams, Terry, Sayers, Johnson, Evans, Maddox, Adams, Walker and Castle.

SENATE.

Washington, March 25.—After a short, open session the senate went into executive session on the arbitration treaty. The Torrey bankruptcy bill was taken up after the executive session and read, but no action taken.

HOUSE.

The four days' general debate on the tariff bill closed to-night. To-morrow the bill will be open to amendment under the five minute rule. Nineteen congressmen participated in the debate to-day.

SENATE.

Washington, March 26.—A resolution was adopted asking the president for information as to the death of two Americans at Santiago de Cuba; also, resolutions asking the attorney general for information of proposition to sell the Union Pacific railroad. In executive session the senate discussed the arbitration treaty.

HOUSE.

Nine pages of the tariff bill were to-day disposed of under the five-minute debate rule. All amendments offered by democrats were rejected and three slight committee amendments were adopted, one increasing the duty on white lead from 1½ to 3 cents per pound.

HOUSE.

Washington, March 27.—The progress of the house on the tariff bill was even slower than yesterday. Only five more pages of the 162 pages of the bill were disposed of, making fourteen pages in all in two of the five days allowed for consideration under the five minute rule. Only amendments of minor importance were adopted.

The Mississippi Floods.

VICKSBURG, Miss., March 29.—The rise in the river now seems the most serious danger to the levees, being without a precedent at this stage of the water. The situation is daily more grave and a crisis seems near at hand. The people everywhere are displaying the most devoted courage and endurance.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, March 25.—An act amending the laws relating to patents and approved March 3, 1897, changes section 4894 so as to limit the time for completing an application to one (1) year in place of two (2) years as it has been heretofore. A Des Moines inventor has filed an application for a patent for a method and apparatus for the electric transmission of numbers, letters, words, diagrams, pictures, etc., in rapid succession. A person at one end of a wire may give a written description of an object or person and also a picture of the subject at the other end of the line. J. T. B., Macksburg, Iowa, asks: What is the fine and result for infringing a patent? Answer: The result of violating law by infringing a patent may be a suit in the U. S. court for an injunction and damages and costs of suit assessed against the infringer. The measure of damages is generally the amount of profit the owner of the patent is deprived of on account of the infringer's action. An injunction by a court to restrain an infringer, if disregarded, may result in imprisonment of the infringer. Our practice is not confined to Iowa. Inventors in other states can have our services upon the same terms as Hawkeyes.

WOMAN'S STRUGGLE.

All women work.

Some in the homes.

Some in church, and some in the whirl of society.

Many in the stores and shops, and tens of thousands are on the never-ceasing treadmill earning their daily food.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbances; there is serious derangement in the womb. Lydia E. Pinkham's "Vegetable Compound" is the unfailing cure for this trouble. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, "bearing-down," disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and you will again be free.

From Wallaces' Farmer.

In the last issue of the Farmer Mr. James Walton inquired a remedy for the cure of egg-eating fowels. This habit is caused by a lack of shell producing food, or it may be acquired by feeding egg shells that have not been browned. If Mr. W. will feed his fowels plenty of shells, meat scraps, ground bone and lime after constructing a proper nest they will get over this. The box should be of two compartments, the upper one, which is the ordinary box, should slope towards a hole in the center. The lower one should be highest at the center and covered with some soft substance to prevent the eggs from breaking .Then the egg will fall through the hole into the lower box and roll off to one side where the hen can't get at it.

Dayton, Ohio, March 29.—G. G. Crouse arrived here today with two fine chestnut sorrel horses. He bought one in Rendolph county and the other in Noble county, Indiana, for E. L. Haymaker, who met him here and received the horses. They are fine animals, 5 years old and perfectly matched. The horses are for President McKinley. It is said that he intends to drive them as a tandem team. They will be shipped to Canton tomorrow, and from there to Washington, D. C—Cedar Rapids Republican.

Two men drowned in the Boone river at Eagle Grove last Friday. Dr. Travis and Mr. Kirkberg were the victims. Dr. Travis was on the way to Mr. Kirkberg's on a professional visit, when the team was swept down the stream and both men met their fate.—Belmond Herald.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails. when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yeild to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at Harr's Drug Store.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry St., Alton, Ill., suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

SYMPATHY FOR THE GREEKS, SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text: "I Am Debtor Both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians"—Romans 1:14—Thermopylae and Bunker Hill.

AT this time, when that behemoth of abominations, Mohammedanism, after having gorged itself on the carcasses of a hundred thousand Armenians, is trying to put its paws upon one of the fairest of all nations, that of the Greeks, I preach this sermon of sympathy and protest, for every intelligent person on this side of the sea, as well as the other side, like Paul, who wrote the text, is debtor to the Greeks. The present crisis is emphasized by the guns of the allied powers of Europe, ready to be unlimbered against the Hellenes, and I am asked to speak out. Paul, with a master intellect of the ages, sat in brilliant Corinth, the great Acro-Corinthus fortress frowning from the height of sixteen hundred and eighty-six feet, and in the house of Gaius, where he was a guest, a big pile of money near him, which he was taking to Jerusalem for the poor. In this letter to the Romans, which Chrysostom admired so much that he had it read to him twice a week, Paul practically says: "I, the Apostle, am bankrupt. I owe what I cannot pay, but I will pay as large a percentage as I can. It is an obligation for what Greek literature and Greek sculpture and Greek architecture and Greek prowess have done for me. I will pay all I can in installments of evangelism. I am insolvent to the Greeks." Hellas, as the inhabitants call it, or Greece, as we call it, is insignificant in size, about a third as large as the state of New York, but what it lacks in breadth is makes up in height, with its mountains Cylene, and Eta, and Taygetus, and Tymphrestus, each over seven thousand feet in elevation, and its Parnassus, over eight thousand. Just the country for mighty men to be born in, for in all lands the most of the intellectual and moral giants were not born on the plain, but had for cradle the valley between two mountains. That country, no part of which is more than forty miles from the sea, has made its impress upon the world as no other nation, and it today holds a first mortgage of obligation upon all civilized people. While we must leave to statesmanship and diplomacy the settlement of the intricate questions which now involve all Europe, and indirectly all nations, it is time for all churches, all schools, all universities, all arts, all literature to sound out in the most emphatic way the declaration, "I am debtor to the Greeks."

In the first place, we owe to their language our New Testament. All of it was first written in Greek, except the Book of Matthew, and that, written in the Aramean language, was soon put into Greek by our Savior's brother, James. To the Greek language we owe the best sermon ever preached, the best letters ever written, the best visions ever kindled. All the parables in Greek. All the miracles in Greek. The sermon on the mount in Greek. The story of Bethlehem and Golgotha and Olivet and Jordan banks and Galilean beaches and Pauline embarkation and Pentecostal tongues and seven trumpets that sounded over Patmos, have come to the world in liquid, symmetric, picturesque, philosophic, unrivaled Greek, instead of the gibberish language in which many of the nations of the earth at that time jabbered. Who can forget it and who can exaggerate its thrilling importance, that Christ and heaven were introduced to us in the language of the Greeks? the language in which Homer had sung and Sophocles dramatized and Pluto dialogued and Socrates discoursed and Lycurgus legislated and Demosthenes thundered his oration on "The Crown?" Everlasting thanks to God that the waters of life were not handed to the world in the unwashed cup of corrupt languages from which nations had been drinking, but in the clean, bright, golden lipped, emerald-handled chalice of the Hellenes. Learned Curtius wrote a whole volume about the Greek verb. Philologists century after century have been measuring the symmetry of that language, laden with elegy and philippic, drama and comedy, Odyssey and Iliad; but the grandest thing that Greek language ever accomplished was to give to the world the benediction, the comfort, the irraditation, the salvation of the Gospel of the Son of God. For that we are debtors to the Greeks.

And while speaking of our philological obligation, let me call your attention to the fact that many of the intellectual and moral and theological leaders of the ages got much of their discipline and effectiveness from Greek literature. It is popular to scoff at the dead languages, but 50 per cent of the world's intellectuality would have been taken off if, through learned institutions our young men had not, under competent professors, been drilled in Greek masterpieces. Hesiod's "Weeks and Days," or the eulogium by Simonides of the slain in war, or Pindar's "Odes of Victory," or "The Recollections of Socrates," or "The Art of Words," by Corax, or Xenophon's Anabasis.

From the Greeks the world learned how to make history. Had there been no Herodotus and Thucydides, there would have been no Macaulay or Bancroft. Had there been no Sophocles in tragedy, there would have been no Shakespeare. Had there been no Homer, there would have been no Milton. The modern wits, who are now or have been out on the divine mission of making the world laugh at the right time, can be traced back to Aristophanes, the Athenian, and many of the jocosities that are now taken as new had their suggestions twenty-three hundred years ago in the fifty-four comedies of that master of merriment. Grecian mythology has been the richest mine from which orators and essayists have drawn their illustrations and painters the themes for their canvas, and although now an exhausted mine, Grecian mythology has done a work that nothing else could have accomplished; Boreas, representing the north wind; Sisyphus, rolling the stone up the hill, only to have the same thing to do over again; Tantalus, with fruits above him that he could not reach; Achilles, with his arrows; Icarus, with his waxen wings, flying too near the sun; the Centaurs, half man and half beast; Orpheus, with his lyre; Atlas, with the world on his back, all these and more have helped literature, from the graduate's speech on commencement day to Rufus Choate's eulogium on Daniel Webster at Dartmouth. Tragedy and comedy were born in the festivals of Dionysius at Athens. The lyric and elegiac and epic poetry of Greece five hundred years before Christ has its echoes in the Tennysons, Longfellows and Bryants of eighteen and nineteen hundred years after Christ. There is not an effective pulpit or editorial chair or professor's room or cultured parlor or intelligent farmhouse today in America or Europe that could not appropriately employ Paul's ejaculation and say, "I am debtor to the Greeks."

The fact is this, Paul had got much of his oratorical power of expression from the Greeks. That he had studied their literature was evident, when standing in the presence of an audience of Greek scholars on Mars' Hill, which overlooks Athens, he dared to quote from one of their own Greek poets,either Cleanthus or Aratus, declaring, "As certain also of your own poets have said, 'for we are also his offspring.'" And he made accurate quotation, Cleanthus, one of the poets, having written:

"For we thine offspring are. All things that creep
Are but the echo of the voice divine."

And Aratus, one of their own poets, had written:

"Doth care perplex? Is lowering danger nigh?
We are his offspring, and to Jove we fly."

It was rather a risky thing for Paul to attempt to quote extemporaneously from a poem in a language foreign to his, and before Greek scholars, but Paul did it without stammering, and then acknowledged before the most distinguished audience on the planet his indebtedness to the Greeks, crying out in his oration, "As one of your own poets has said."

Furthermore, all the world is obligated to Hellas more than it can ever pay for its heroics in the cause of liberty and right. United Europe today had not better think that the Greeks will not fight. There may be fallings back and vacillations and temporary defeat, but if Greece is right all Europe cannot put her down. The other nations, before they open the port-holes of their men-of-war against that small kingdom had better read of the battle of Marathon, where ten thousand Athenians, led on by Miltiades, triumphed over one hundred thousand of their enemies. At that time in Greek council of war five generals were for beginning the battle and five were against it. Callimachus presided at the council of war and had the deciding vote, and Miltiades addressed him, saying:

"It now rests with you, Callimachus, either to enslave Athens, or by insuring her freedom, to win yourself an immor- of Marathon, where ten thousand Athenians, led on by Miltiades, triumphed danger as they are at this moment. If they bow the knee to these Medes, they are to be given up to Hippias, and you know what they will then have to suffer; but if Athens comes victorious out of this contest, she has it in her power to become the first city of Greece. Your vote is to decide whether we are to join battle or not. If we do not bring on a battle presently, some factious intrigue will disunite the Athenians and the city will be betrayed to the Medes, but if we fight before there is anything rotten in the state of Athens, I believe that, provided the gods will give fair field and no favor, we are able to get the best of it in the engagement."

That won the vote of Callimachus, and soon the battle opened, and in full run the men of Miltiades fell upon the Persian hosts, shouting, "On! Sons of Greece! Strike for the freedom of your country! Strike for the freedom of your children and your wives, for the shrines of your father's gods, and for the sepulchres of your sires! All, all are now staked on the strife." While only one hundred and ninety-two Greeks fell, six thousand four hundred Persians lay dead upon the field, and many of the Asiatic hosts who took to the war vessels in the harbor were consumed in the shipping. Persian oppression was rebuked, Grecian liberty was achieved, the cause of civilization was advanced, and the western world and all nations have felt the heroics. Had there been no Miltiades, there might have been no Washington.

Also at Thermopylae, three hundred Greeks, along a road only wide enough for a wheel track between a mountain and a marsh, died rather than surrender. Had there been no Thermopylae, there might have been no Bunker Hill. The echo of Athenian and Spartan heroics was heard at the gates of Lucknow, and Sebastopol, and Bannockburn, and Lexington, and Gettysburg. English Magna Charta, and Declaration of American Independence, and the song of Robert Burns, entitled, "A Man's a Man for a' That," were only the long-continued reverberation of what was said and done twenty centuries before in that little kingdom that the powers of Europe are now imposing upon. Greece having again and again shown that ten men in the right are stronger than a hundred men in the wrong, the heroics of Leonidas and Aristides and Themistocles will not cease their mission until the last man on earth is as free as God made him. There is not on either side of the Atlantic today a republic that cannot truthfully employ the words of the text and say, "I am debtor to the Greeks."

But there is a better way to pay them, and that is by their personal salvation, which will never come to them through books or through learned presentation, because in literature and intellectual realms they are masters. They can out-argue, out-quote, out-dogmatize you. Not through the gate of the head, but through the gate of the heart, you may capture them. When men of learning and might are brought to God they are brought by simples story of what religion can do for a soul. They have lost children. Oh, tell them how Christ comforted you when you lost your bright boy or blue-eyed girl. They have found life a struggle. Oh, tell them how Christ has helped you all the way through. They are in bewilderment. Oh, tell them with how many hands of joy heaven beckons you upward. "When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war," but when a warm-hearted Christian meets a man who needs pardon and sympathy and comfort and eternal life, then comes victory. If you can, by some incident of self-sacrifice, bring to such scholarly men and women what Christ has done for their eternal rescue, you may bring them in. Where Demosthenic eloquence and Homeric imagery would fail, a kindly heart-throb may succeed. A gentleman of this city sends me the statement of what occurred a few days ago among the mines of British Columbia. It seems that Frank Conson and Jem Smith were down in the narrow shaft of a mine. They had loaded an iron bucket with coal, and Jim Hemsworth, standing above ground, was hauling the bucket up by windlass, when the windlass broke and the loaded bucket was descending upon the two miners. Then Jim Hemsworth, seeing what must be certain death to the miners beneath, threw himself against the cogs of the whirling windlass, and though his flesh was torn and his bones were broken, he stopped the whirling windlass and arrested the descending bucket and saved the lives of the two miners beneath. The superintendent of the mine flew to the rescue and blocked the machinery. When Jim Hemsworth's bleeding and broken body was put on a litter and carried homeward, and some one exclaimed: "Jim, this is awful!" he replied: "Oh, what's the difference so long as I saved the boys!" What an illustration is was of suffering for others, and what a text from which to illustrate the behavior of our Christ, limping and lacerated and broken and torn and crushed in the work of stopping the descending ruin that would have destroyed our souls! Try such a scene of vicarious suffering as this on that man capable of overthrowing all your arguments for the truth, and he will sit down and weep. Draw your illustrations from the classics, and it is to him an old story, but Leyden jars and electric batteries and telescopes and Greek drama will all surrender to the story of Jim Hemsworth's, "Oh, what's the difference so long as I saved the boys?"

The man who minds his own business will always have something to do.

Fell a Victim.

Baron—"Did you hear about Bachelor?"

Egbert—"No; what now?"

"I hear he fell a victim to woman's charms."

"You don't say so!"

"Yes; he was riding his wheel and he turned round to see what the woman had on, when he fell."—Yonkers Statesman.

Cheap and Filling.

Seedy Willie (to barkeeper)—Your refusal, sir, to trust me to a paltry drink of whisky fills me with astonishment and indignation.

Barkeeper—All right, sir; you can fill yourself up with astonishment and indignation, and it won't cost you a copper, but if you want to fill yourself with whisky, you will have to pay cash.

What He Wanted.

Shopkeeper: "What can I show you, sir?"

Absent-minded Professor: "I want—let me see, what do I want? Dear me! I can't for the life of me remember what it is. . . . Well, well, it doesn't matter; give me the nearest thing you have to it."

Arrested Development.

Mrs. Goodsole—"I can see, my poor man, that you never had the advantage of education or a good home. You started early in life on the stony path—a sad case of arrested development."

Lonely Straggles—"I should t'ink it wuz, mum. I wuz in jail before I wuz 14 years old."—Judge.

A Thoughtful "Thought."

Old Gentleman—"Oh, say, Mr. Staylate; its snowing hard, so I thought I'd give you this snow shovel, as you will need it by the time you go, to clear a path to the gate."

Too Dull.

"A great many people sleep between these walls," said the guide showing the visitor through the ancient English church where the noble families were interred.

"Same way over in our country," replied the visitor; "why don't you get a better preacher?"—Judy.

Nobody Believes It.

If you really believe that foolish French epigram, "The unexpected always happens," why don't you back your opinion? It is easy to get odds that it will not. For instance, snowstorms in July are unexpected. Are you willing to wager there will be some this year?

The New Pugilism.

"I'm tired of wasting words with Bluening about this proposed battle," said the champion pugilist.

"Well, what do you propose doing?" asked his backer.

"Send a substitute."—Philadelphia North American.

A Touching Plaint.

"My trouble is deep-seated, your honor," said Mr. Tiff, who was applying for a divorce.

"Give particulars," answered the judge.

"She won't patch my pants."

He got his decree.

Plenty of Reasons.

The Judge—Have you anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be pronounced upon you?

Teddy O'Reilly—Faith, yer honor, Oi have given distinct raisons, iny wan of which would convince mesilf if Oi was only yer honor.

Another Century Run.

"I think——" (it was old Father Time who thought he was thinking) "that it will not be long—indeed, I know that it will not be long—before I finish another century run. I was a cycler long before the bicycle was invented."

Hard to Please.

"The weather is very trying for everybody," said the physician.

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "I don't see how my wife is going to bear up under it. When the sun doesn't shine it gives her the blues, and when it does she says it's fading the carpet."

A Point of Grammar.

First Girl—Gladys has had triplets.

Second Ditto (absent-mindedly)—You don't say. Who are the father?—Pick-Me-Up.

The average weight of a man's skeleton is fourteen pounds.

Encouraging.

Fred—He married the girl I was engaged to.

Arthur—Well, don't worry. You'll get over it before he does.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 22.—The senate spent the day in consideration of the bill relating to criminal procedure and it was passed with no important changes. Senate concurred in house amendments to soldiers' home bill.

HOUSE.

Bill relative to fish and game passed. Bill relative to attachments and garnishments was reconsidered and after several minor amendments was passed. Bill on mines and mining and bill relative to procedure in supreme court also passed. The committee appointed to investigate the implied charges against Speaker Byers and other members of the house in connection with the building and loan bill submitted a report completely vindicating the speaker and the house, and recommending that the house denounce the practice of lobbying. The report was unanimously adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 23.—Senate took up the bill relating to printing and binding. An amendment was adopted which requires the governor to cause all reports to be carefully examined before being printed and to omit all unimportant matter from the printed volume. The number of copies of various reports is cut down and there is a slight cut in the price paid the printer, by which the committee in charge claims the state will save $15,000 to $20,000 for each biennial period. The bill passed.

HOUSE.

The house passed the building and loan bill, leaving the law as it is now except that associations are to have the right to appeal from the decision of the executive council in regard to their admission to do business in the state. The appeal is to the Polk county district court, and from that to the supreme court. No person who is an officer of a building and loan association is to be allowed to sit on the executive council while it is considering building and loan matters. The text book law, as reported by the conference committee on schools, was passed. The bill relating to railroads was under consideration most of the day and an amendment was adopted cutting the salaries of the railroad commissioners from $3,000 to $2,200. Very little change was made in the law.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 24.—Bill relating to practice of medicine came up and salaries of members of the pharmacy board were reduced from $10 to $8 per day. An amendment permitting osteopaths to practice without passing the regular examination required of physicians failed to pass. Another amendment requiring itinerant doctors or medicine venders to procure certificates and pay an annual fee of $250 was adopted. The senate also passed the bill relating to fish and game. It provides for a state game and fish warden, requires all dams to have fishways, and makes it a punishable offense to destroy the nests of harmless birds at any time in the year. Bill relating to school for deaf passed without amendment.

HOUSE.

The house resumed consideration of the bill on criminal procedure. The so-called Kelley army section was passed after the house had made it more drastic by providing that if ten, instead of twenty men should be formed together without means of subsistance, whether organized or unorganized, intending to live off the people, they shall be imprisoned from six months to three years. After passing the bill the house rejected the conference report on the bill relating to county and township government.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 25.—The bill relating to mechanics' liens was passed without any important changes. Senate concurred in house amendment cutting railroad commissioners' salaries to $2,200. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the printing and binding bill passed the senate, with a view to making it operative at once instead of waiting until 1899, failed. The bill relating to roads, bridges and ferries was then taken up, but no changes had been made at time of adjournment.

HOUSE.

The election bill was taken up and a motion to strike out the anti-fusion section inserted by the senate was defeated, 57 to 39. Another amendment provides that cities under 3,500 population shall not be required to register their voters. No other changes of importance were adopted and the bill passed. Lambert, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the prices paid to state printer and binder presented the report of the committee. Temple and Brant asked time to file a minority report and it was granted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 26.—Senate continued consideration of the bill relating to roads and highways. An amendment was adopted relieving counties of liability for damages in cases where accidents occur in crossing bridges or culverts in the public road, and the bill passed. Bill relating to the normal school passed with little change. The committee on railroads made majority and minority reports on the Temple amendment, the majority recommending a substitute drawn by Senator Berry, and the minority favored the Temple amendment.

HOUSE.

House took up senate bill relating to practice of medicine. It was passed without amendment. Bill on banks and banking came next. An amendment to compel private banks to become subject to inspection by the state auditor was defeated.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 27.—Senate took up house bill relative to internal improvements and the taking of private property for that purpose and it was passed with only minor amendments. Bill relating to state library was passed. The bill takes the appointive power from the governor and places it in the hands of the board of library trustees. The salary is also reduced from $1,200 to $1,000.

HOUSE.

The minority report of the committee on investigation of printing and binding was submitted and placed on file. A motion to reconsider the vote on the bill relative to private banks carried, and the bill then went over.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

Over 1,000,000 cat skins are used every year in the fur trade.

The Maine bear is fast becoming a tradition. There is talk of abolishing the $5 bounty on bear.

A Philadelphia woman has sued her heartless husband for divorce because he has forbidden her to eat pie.

A pearl that was afterward sold to a jeweler for $75 was found in the gizzard of a turkey in London recently.

MARCH AND APRIL

Are the Most Disagreeable Months of the Year in the North.

In the south they are the pleasantest and most agreeable. The trees and shrubs put forth their buds and flowers; early vegetables and fruits are ready for eating, and in fact all nature seems to have awakened from its winter sleep. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company reaches the Garden Spots of the South, and will on the first and third Tuesdays of March and April sell round-trip tickets to all principal points in Tennessee, Alabama, and West Florida, at about half rates. Lane's Family Medicine

Moves the bowels each day. In order to be healthy, this is necessary. Acts gently on the liver and kidneys. Cures sick headache. Price 25 and 50c.

Statistics show that women marry later in life than they used to.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? .. .. ..

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

Warner's Safe Cure

puts the kidneys in perfect health, and nature does the rest.

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

Be self-convinced through personal proof.

Adamant is like wax in comparison with a miser's heart.

As soon as a man gets his first gray hairs he begins to boast to his wife of the business worries he has.

Delaware recently has voted against woman suffrage, 17 to 7; Nevada, 15 to 5, and Idaho, 13 to 3. That's certainly odd.

There were more than three thousand failures in the United States last year, not including Roosevelt, Dr. Parkhurst and Sister Grannis' failure to "reform" New York.

Look out that the cultivation of beans and potatoes on vacant lots doesn't resolve itself into a scheme to dodge taxes on the ground that the property is used for charitable purposes.

The anti-pool selling bill, which absolutely prohibits the selling of pools on horse races of any kind, passed the Alabama house by a vote of 82 to 5. All the poolrooms at once closed. The bill passed the senate unanimously and will receive the governor's signature and become a law.

A clever workman in a cutlery factory in Sheffield, England, has recently made a dozen pairs of shears each so minute that they all together weigh less than half a grain. That is about the weight of a postage stamp. Each pair was perfect and would cut if sufficiently delicate material could be found. Lying on a piece of white paper they seemed no larger than fleas.

Along with the prevalent talk about the unfriendliness of the rich toward the poor comes the statement that a very wealthy man of New York City, whose riches fully entitle him to be classed among the "plutocrats," has decided to give the city the best system of cheap lodging-houses for men in the world. The two houses to be built immediately are to cost more than a million dollars. They are not to be for tramps, but for sober, industrious men, who, when they have employment, will be able to pay just about what the accommodations received will be worth.

The advantages possessed by railway travelers in this country over those on the continent of Europe are the subject of a recent report by Consul Monaghan of Chemnitz. The consul's facts and figures are taken from the recently published results of an investigation made by an imperial German commission. Summarized, the report shows that compared with American roads the German, and, indeed, all continental railroads lack speed and comfort, and it is more expensive to travel in Europe than in America. The German commissioners while here traveled a great deal, covering over 8,000 miles. As a standard American road the New York Central is instanced with its express train to Chicago, covering 1,560 kilometers (969 miles) in twenty hours, an average of 48½ miles per hour, going over one part—29.8 miles—at an average of 64 miles per 60 minutes. A special run of 180 kilometers (111.8 miles) is instanced which was done in one hour. This is about the distance from Berlin to Dresden, which takes nearly three hours on a fast German train.

Interest in the projected international exposition at Paris three years hence is beginning to show itself at the French capital. Inquiries from all quarters of the globe are pouring in, and nations other than the United States have manifested an intention of taking a conspicuous part. American merchants and manufacturers, however, are greatly interested, and for that reason, Consul-General Morss has made an extended report on the subject to the State Department. Preparations for the exposition are even now well advanced. The works of demolition and construction, for which the period of a little more than three years remaining will barely suffice, have begun and will be vigorously prosecuted. The exposition will open April 15, 1900, and will close November 5, nearly seven months later. The site will comprise the public grounds on both sides of the Seine from the Place de la Concorde, the great monumental square in the very center of the city, to a point beyond the Pont d'Jena, embracing the Champ de Mars, the Trocadero Palace and Park (site of the exposition of 1889), the Esplanade des Invalides, the Quai d'Orsay, the Quai de la Conference, the Cour la Reine and a large section of the Champs Elysees, including the site of the Palais de l'Industrie, the great building erected for the international exposition of 1855, the first of the series. "No other city in the world contains, in its very center, an equal area available for a great exposition."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

FELL WITH A CRASH.

Big Building of a Des Moines Implement Firm Collapsed.

DES MOINES, April 4.—The building occupied by the Deering Harvester company at the intersection of West Second street and the Des Moines Union tracks, fell in with a crash. About $160,000 worth of machinery and binding twine was buried in the wreck, the rear portion of the building was wholly demolished, two workmen employed by the harvester company had a race for their lives and three horses were buried in the debris, one of them being killed and the other two escaping with but slight injuries.

OLD LAKES FILLING UP.

Farmers Who Pre-empted Dry Beds Driven Out by the Floods.

SIOUX CITY, April 3.—For a number of years small lakes in northwestern Iowa, northeastern Nebraska and the Dakotas have been drying up, and farmers have improved the beds and erected buildings thereon. The heavy floods of this season, however, seem to have supplied the springs again, and the lakes are filling up. In many of the lakes there are now 15 to 20 feet of water, and there is no likelihood that they will drain off under two or three years.

SUED FOR DAMAGES.

Dora Golliday Thinks $20,000 Would Cure Her Bleeding Heart.

MT. AYR, April 3.—Albert Snodgrass, son of Richard Snodgrass, a Jasper county farmer, who worked in Ringgold county the past year, got a license January 25 to marry Dora Golliday, of Benton. His father interfered and took him back to Jasper county. He is now held to the grand jury for seduction and a damage suit for $20,000 for breach of promise is now pending.

AN UNEXPECTED ENDING.

Case Against Dr. S. M. King, Charged With Murder, is Dismissed.

OTTUMWA, April 4.—The case against Dr. S. M. King for complicity in the murder of Mrs. Elmer Daughterty at Albia ended in a big surprise. After resting the case the state moved to dismiss the case owing to insufficient evidence. The judge ordered a verdict of not guilty. James Hazelett and William Franklin were sentenced to five years each for killing Joe Wright.

SHERBURNE BANK ROBBER.

Kellihan Convicted of Murder in the First Degree.

FAIRMOUNT, Minn., April 2.—The jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree against Lewis Kellihan, who killed the cashier of a bank at Sherburne, while robbing it, and recommended him to mercy. His attorney asked for a stay of sentence to prepare a bill of exceptions. A stay of sentence was granted until April 12, when the argument will be heard.

Battle With a Burglar.

OSKALOOSA, April 3.—A colored burglar, supposed to be Tom Coombs, of Oskaloosa, entered D. Wetsman's home and, when cornered, stabbed M. S. Handler and R. Grossman with a knife. Mrs. Wetsman made a hard fight to hold the burglar after he had disabled the two men, but he was too much for her. Thirty cents in money is all that is missing. Handler loses an eye, but aside from that the wounds are not dangerous.

Ike Cohen Acquitted.

WATERLOO, April 3.—The jury in the Cohen arson case returned a verdict for acquittal, after having been out eighteen hours. There are still three more indictments against Ike Cohen, but these will in all probability be continued over to the September term of court. Mike Cohen was found guilty and sent to the penitentiary for a term of years, but looks to the supreme court for a reversal of his case.

Recommends Manufacture.

DES MOINES, April 2.—The senate is to have an opportunity of voting on a manufacturing bill. The senate committee on suppression of intemperance voted to recommend a bill providing for the manufacture of intoxicating liquors for passage. The vote was 7 to 6. The bill is a substitute for the one which passed the house. It was prepared by Senator Ellis and is said to be a much more stringent measure than the house bill.

Edgington Not Guilty.

DES MOINES, April 3.—The federal court at Council Bluffs, Judge Woolson presiding, has released Avington A. Edgington, of Avoca, the young medical student of Drake university who was accused of the crime of conspiring to perpetrate a pension fraud.

Iowa at Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Senator Gear has introduced a bill appropriating $17,919 to pay S. C. Lobdell, of Parkersburg, Iowa, for stores and supplies used by federal troops during the war.

GREAT WESTERN WRECK.

Meat Train Crashes Through a Bridge at Gladbrook.

DES MOINES, April 2.—A meat train on the Chicago Great Western road was wrecked three miles north of Gladbrook. The train was running at a high rate of speed when it struck a soft place in the track on the approach to a bridge. The engine passed over in safety, but in doing so spread the rails and the cars following left the track. Eleven cars went off the rails and plowed up the bridge, which was a pile bent affair. The cars went down with the bridge and piled up in a small ravine. Many of them were carried by the momentum of the train nearly off the right of way and were all badly damaged, some being totally wrecked. Their contents, consisting mostly of meats, were scattered over the right of way. No one was injured.

BIG STRIKE OF MINERS.

Refuse to Accept a Ten Cent Cut in Wages.

OTTUMWA, April 5.—Three leading coal companies cut the price of mining coal from 70 to 60 cents. The miners of the White Breast Company at Keb and Chisholm, John S. Evans's men at Avery, and the Chicago & Iowa Company's men at Cedar Mines, about 600 in number, struck. Other companies paying 70 cents will cut, and probably as many more men go out. Operators say they will close their mines, as it is preferable in the present condition of the coal trade to remain idle, without regard to prices paid for mining. The men are orderly.

Murder at Seymour.

OTTUMWA, April 4.—The dead body of Wm. N. Sergent, 20 years old, was found at the bottom of a coal shaft at Seymour a few mornings since. He was last seen with two tramps the previous night. He had a large sum of money in his possession, which was missing from the body. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder. The tramps escaped. Letters indicate that the deceased was a son of J. P. Sergent, of Des Moines.

Train Wrecked.

MASON CITY, April 3.—A wreck occurred on the Chicago Great Western between Shell Rock and Everly. A big freight train went into the ditch. Four men in the caboose were badly shaken up. The property damage was heavy.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Des Moines dispatch: Senator Riggen, who has been considered doubtful upon the manufacturing bill during the recent agitation of the matter, has announced finally that he will vote against a manufacturing bill. This announcement is virtually the assurance of the defeat of the manufacturing bill.

The legislature a few days ago convened in joint session in the house chamber and listened to addresses by John S. Emery, of Harris-Emery Company, Des Moines; H. T. Julius Fuehrman, a noted architect and designer of sugar beet factories, and Professor F. C. Curtiss, of Ames college, in relation to the raising of beets for the production of sugar in Iowa.

Des Moines dispatch: The annual railroad assessment has been completed by the executive council. It shows a slight increase in the aggregate value of railroad property in the state. There are important decreases on the Rock Island and Burlington system, which secure reductions of $1,000 per mile each. The increases are distributed over a number of the smaller roads of the state. The total assessment is made $44,456,197, against a total of $44,381,911 the year before.

A Cherokee dispatch says: Harry Mewhirter, who was shot by Rev. Benedict at Larrabee last fall, is in town making another effort to have Benedict indicted. If he fails in this he says he will sue Benedict for damages. Mewhirter has lost considerable flesh and is looking very bad, all of which he says is caused by the ball which is yet in his body and is causing him considerable pain. The ball is either located just beneath the ribs or close to the left lung. Mewhirter intended having an operation performed some time ago in an effort to find the ball, but has given it up, as it is so close to the heart that the surgeons think it unsafe to make the attempt.

One hundred depositors of the defunct South Ottumwa bank met a few days ago and received the report of a committee which investigated the bank's accounts. The report said that there was little hope for the depositors, that there was hardly any assets and the books of the bank had many discrepancies. It was unanimously decided to make a full investigation and money was subscribed to begin action to force Banker Colt to pay in full. A motion that "no compromise be accepted" prevailed. The court has been asked to set aside the assignment on the ground of fraud, and the assignee himself has asked the court to order an investigation.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

LONDON, March 30.—The special correspondent of the Times at Salonica says that everything there indicates that the situation is becoming more and more critical. Fifty thousand men are now encamped around Elassona, and there are 300 Krupp guns between Elassona and Arta.

ATHENS, March 30.—All the best judges of popular feeling here agree that the determination of the Greek people to accept no solution of the Cretan difficulty but the annexation of Crete is increasing steadily. The cry is for no surrender.

CANEA, March 30.—During the attack on Fort Issenden, near Apokevona, the Italian warships in Suda bay fired upon the Christians and in aid of the Turkish garrison.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 31.—If reports from the Turkish headquarters at Elassona are correct, fighting has already occurred on the Turkish side of the frontier in Macedonia. It is reported the Greek leader, Alexis Taki, crossed the frontier into Macedonia with twenty-five followers. Near Grevena they engaged the advance post of the Turkish troops commanded by Germans. The Turks lost twelve killed and twenty wounded, including a German officer. The Greek loss is unknown. The latter subsequently returned to the Greek territory. The situation is critical.

CANEA, April 1.—The insurgents at Spina Langa have accomplished a most daring feat in sinking a Turkish bark. Carrying explosives with them, the Cretans swam to the vessel and put it to the bottom, escaping unscathed back to the shore.

BERLIN, April 1.—A dispatch to the Berliner Tageblatt from Constantinople says that five of the powers, not including Germany, delivered a note to the sultan requesting the immediate withdrawal of the Turkish troops from the Thessalian frontier.

VIENNA, April 2.—A council of the admirals was held to determine whether and when the port of Athens is to be blockaded. All the powers have consented to that proposition, though nothing has been decided with respect to the blockade of other Greek ports. It is no secret that King George has formally stated to the powers that a declaration of war against Turkey will immediately follow an extension of the blockade to the Greek coast. This fact cannot be left out of consideration. It is believed in some quarters that if the port of Athens is blockaded, popular excitement will compel the king to declare war, even if his own judgment and that of the cabinet were opposed. This has been a leading cause for the delay in securing a unanimous agreement between the powers.

ATHENS, April 3.—The newspapers unanimously urge the government to take prompt action before the powers present an ultimatum. The decision of the government is not yet known, if indeed a final decision has been reached; but it is believed in official circles that the king and the cabinet will favor active measures. It is reported here that there is great excitement among the Macedonians and the Pirotes because of the rumors of the excesses committed by the Turkish troops in Macedonia.

MUST NOT KILL RIVERA.

Secretary Sherman Tells Spain to Spare The Cuban Leader.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Secretary Sherman has protested against the execution of General Ruiz Rivera, the Cuban leader in Pinar del Rio who was recently captured by the Spanish forces. President McKinley and Secretary Sherman discussed the Rivera case, and the latter, at the president's suggestion, communicated with Senor de Lome, the Spanish minister. Secretary Sherman, in his blunt way told the Spanish representative that the execution of prisoners of war was abhorrent to the American people and he wanted the Spanish minister and his government to understand that the execution of Rivera would not tend to promote good feeling for Spain in this country. Already public opinion was much exercised over the threat to shoot the prisoner, and if that threat were carried into execution the indignation throughout the United States might be so great as to embarrass the government.

RECEIPTS PILE UP.

Balance Is On the Right Side of the Ledger for March.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The receipts of the government for the month of March were $9,004,664 in excess of the expenditures for the same period. This increase is attributed to the large importations and the rush of importers to take goods out of bond by the payment of duties before the Dingley bill went into effect.

Tendered to Colonel Grant.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Colonel Fred Grant has been offered the position of assistant secretary of war and has declined.

AN OKLAHOMA CYCLONE.

Twenty-one Persons Reported Killed and Many Injured.

GUTHRIE, Okla., March 31.—Twenty-one lives were lost in a cyclone that swept over Chandler, a town of 1,500 inhabitants, fifty miles east of Guthrie. Only two buildings were left standing—the Mitchell hotel and the Grand Island grocery store. Twenty-one dead bodies have been taken from the ruins. Seventy-five persons are badly injured and a dozen or more of these are reported dying. In addition to those dead, dying and injured, it is believed there are a score or more dead buried beneath the wrecked buildings. Several of the wrecked buildings took fire and the debris burned fiercely. Many of the injured were burned to death while pinned fast under the debris. In one building it is reported five injured people were burned to death and at another place the incinerated remains of three unknown men have been taken out.

GUTHRIE, Okla., April 1.—It transpires that twenty-six persons were killed outright in the cyclone at Chandler, while 170 were injured, many of whom will die. The town is a mass of ruins. At Gradys, Ark., the town was destroyed and five persons were killed.

FOR WAR IN TRANSVAAL.

England Preparing for Eventualities in South Africa.

LONDON, April 5.—The preparations against eventualities in the Transvaal are being steadily pushed forward. It is learned that a general to command the British forces has been selected and has been asked to prepare a plan for the campaign against the Boers, including the number and the description of the troops of different branches of the service, etc., which he judges will be necessary to bring the military operations to a successful conclusion. The general, who is familiar with African fighting, has replied that 10,000 British regulars will be sufficient, as he counts on the 40,000 armed men in the field, and one-half of these, he believes, will be required to guard the towns, forts, etc.

WORK ON TARIFF BILL.

House Measure Will Be Remodelled and Rates Reduced.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The republican members of the senate committee on finance are continuing their work day and night on the tariff bill, with the intention of reporting it to the senate at the earliest possible day. They are not yet prepared to give out any of the results of their investigations, and say, when approached upon the subject, that they have not as yet reached any conclusions upon any schedules of the bill. There is, however, a well defined impression about the senate that the bill will be generally remodelled, and the rates considerably reduced in many of the schedules.

Mississippi Floods.

ST. LOUIS, April 2.—The Post-Dispatch's Greenville, Miss., special says: Ten thousand people are homeless in the flood districts. Three hundred towns and cities are submerged. Desolation reigns over this lovely valley. A dismal waste of water covers the country on every side. Greenville is a desolate island and connected with the outside world by one lone, slender thread of telegraph line to Winona. Railroad communication is cut off north and south.

Suspends His Grandson.

CAPETOWN, April 3.—President Krueger, it is announced from Pretoria, has suspended his grandson, Eloff, from office for making a speech in which he insulted Queen Victoria and Great Britain. The president, in the press, expresses his sincere regret at Eloff's irresponsible reference.

Durrant Denied a Rehearing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 5.—The state supreme court has denied the application of Murderer Theodore Durrant for a rehearing. It previously denied an application for a new trial.

BREVITIES.

Prince Bismarck was 82 years old on the 1st. Emperor William sent congratulations.

Washington dispatch: President McKinley has definitely decided to send a special commissioner to Cuba. He has been looking over the list of available men for the important work, and will in a few days announce the name of the person he has selected. The special object of the special commissioner's proposed visit to Cuba will be to take part in the intended investigation of the alleged murder of Dr. Ruiz, an American citizen. It will be remembered that Consul General Lee has absolutely refused to participate in the investigation of this incident authorized by the Spanish authorities, on the ground that he was already convinced that the Spanish government would not conduct a fair inquiry, and that he felt confident the decision of the committee would be a "whitewash" for all the officials connected with Ruiz's death.

THE TREASURE OF FRANCHARD.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER I.

THEY had sent for the doctor from Bourron before six. About eight some villagers came round for the performance and were told how matters stood. It seemed a liberty for a mountebank to fall ill like real people, and they made off again in dudgeon. By ten Madame Tentaillon was gravely alarmed, and had sent down the street for Doctor Desprez.

The Doctor was at work over his manuscripts in one corner of the little dining-room, and his wife was asleep over the fire in another, when the messenger arrived.

"Sapristi!" said the Doctor, "you should have sent for me before. It was a case for hurry." And he followed the messenger as he was, in his slippers and skull-cap.

The inn was not thirty yards away, but the messenger did not stop there; he went in at one door and out by another into the court, and then led the way by a flight of steps beside the stable, to the loft where the mountebank lay sick. If Doctor Desprez were to live a thousand years, he would never forget his arrival in that room; for not only was the scene picturesque, but the moment made a date in his existence. We reckon our lives, I hardly know why, from the date of our first sorry appearance in society, as if from a first humiliation; for no actor can come upon the stage with a worse grace. Not to go further back, which would be judged too curious, there are subsequently many moving and decisive accidents in the lives of all which would make as logical a period as this of birth. And here, for instance, Doctor Desprez, a man past forty, who had made what is called a failure in life, and was moreover married, found himself at a new point of departure when he opened the door of the loft above Tentaillon's stable.

It was a large place, lighted only by a single candle set upon the floor. The mountebank lay on his back upon a pallet; a large man, with a Quixotic nose inflamed with drinking. Madame Tentaillon stooped over him, applying a hot water and mustard embrocation to his feet; and on a chair close by sat a little fellow of eleven or twelve, with his feet dangling. These three were the only occupants, except the shadows. But the shadows were a company in themselves; the extent of the room exaggerated them to a gigantic size, and from the low position of the candle the light struck upward and produced deformed foreshortenings. The mountebank's profile was enlarged upon the wall in caricature, and it was strange to see his nose shorten and lengthen as the flame was blown about by draughts. As for Madame Tentaillon, her shadow was no more than a gross hump of shoulders, with now and again a hemisphere of head. The chair legs were spindled out as long as stilts, and the boy sat perched atop of them, like a cloud, in the corner of the roof.

It was the boy who took the Doctor's fancy. He had a great arched skull, the forehead and the hands of a musician, and a pair of haunting eyes. It was not merely that these eyes were large, or steady, or the softest ruddy brown. There was a look in them, besides, which thrilled the Doctor, and made him half uneasy. He was sure he had seen such a look before, and yet he could not remember how or where. It was as if this boy, who was quite a stranger to him, had the eyes of an old friend or an old enemy. And the boy would give him no peace; he seemed profoundly indifferent to what was going on, or rather abstracted from it in a superior contemplation, beating gently with his feet against the bars of the chair, and holding his hands folded on his lap. But, for all that, his eyes kept following the Doctor about the room with a thoughtful fixity of gaze. Desprez could not tell whether he was fascinating the boy, or the boy was fascinating him. He busied himself over the sick man: he put questions, he felt his pulse, he jested, he grew a little hot and swore: and still, whenever he looked round, there were the brown eyes waiting for his with the same inquiring, melancholy gaze.

At last the Doctor hit on the solution at a leap. He remembered the look now. The little fellow, although he was as straight as a dart, had the eyes that go usually with a crooked back; he was not at all deformed, and yet a deformed person seemed to be looking at you from below his brows. The Doctor drew a long breath, he was so much relieved to find a theory (for he loved theories) and to explain away his interest.

For all that, he despatched the invalid with unusual haste, and, still kneeling with one knee on the floor, turned a little round and looked the boy over at his leisure. The boy was not in the least put out, but looked placidly back at the Doctor.

"Is this your father?" asked Desprez.

"Oh, no," returned the boy; "my master."

"Are you fond of him?" continued the Doctor.

"No, sir," said the boy.

Madame Tentaillon and Desprez exchanged expressive glances.

"That is bad, my man," resumed the latter, with a shade of sternness. "Every one should be fond of the dying, or conceal their sentiments; and your master here is dying. If I have watched a bird a little while stealing my cherries, I have a thought of disappointment when he flies away over my garden wall, and I see him steer for the forest and vanish. How much more a creature such as this, so strong, so astute, so richly endowed with faculties! When I think that, in a few hours, the speech will be silenced, the breath extinct, and even the shadow vanished from the wall, I who never saw him, this lady who knew him only as a guest, are touched with some affection."

The boy was silent for a little, and appeared to be reflecting.

"You did not know him," he replied at last. "He was a bad man."

"He is a little pagan," said the landlady. "For that matter, they are all the same, these mountebanks, tumblers, artists, and what not. They have no interior."

But the Doctor was still scrutinizing the little pagan, his eyebrows knotted and uplifted.

"What is your name?" he asked.

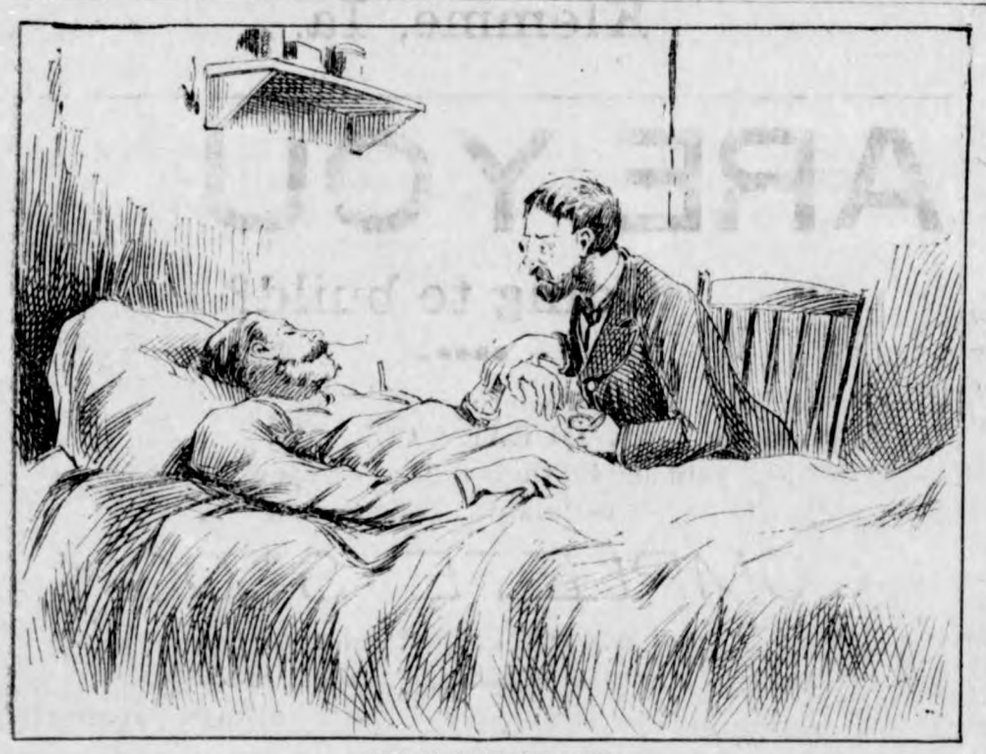
"Jean-Marie," said the lad.

Desprez leaped upon him with one of his sudden flashes of excitement, and felt his head all over from an ethnological point of view.

"Celtic, Celtic!" he said.

"Celtic!" cried Madame Tentaillon, who had perhaps confounded the word with hydrocephalous. "Poor lad! is it dangerous?"

"That depends," returned the Doctor, grimly. And then once more addressing the boy: "And what do you do for your living, Jean-Marie?" he inquired.



FELT HIS PULSE.

"I tumble," was the answer.

"So! Tumble?" repeated Desprez. "Probably healthful. I hazard the guess, Madame Tentaillon, that tumbling is a healthful way of life. And have you never done anything else but tumble?"

"Before I learned that, I used to steal," answered Jean-Marie gravely.

"Upon my word!" cried the Doctor. "You are a nice little man for your age. Madame, when my confrere comes from Bourron, you will communicate my unfavorable opinion. I leave the case in his hands; but of course, on any alarming symptom, above all if there should be a sign of rally, do not hesitate to knock me up. I am a doctor no longer, I thank God; but I have been one. Good night, madame. Good sleep to you, Jean-Marie."

CHAPTER II.

DOCTOR DESPREZ always rose early. Before the smoke arose, before the first cart rattled over the bridge to the day's labor in the fields, he was to be found wandering in his garden. Now he would pick a bunch of grapes; now he would eat a big pear under the trellis; now he would draw all sorts of fancies on the path with the end of his cane; now he would go down and watch the river running endlessly past the timber landing-place at which he moored his boat. There was no time, he used to say, for making theories like the early morning. "I rise earlier than any one else in the village," he once boasted. "It is a fair consequence that I know more and wish to do less with my knowledge."

The doctor was a connoisseur of sunrises, and loved a good theatrical effect to usher in the day. He had a theory of dew, by which he could predict the weather. Indeed, most things served him to that end; the sound of the bells from all the neighboring villages, the smell of the forest, the visits and the behavior of both birds and fishes, the look of the plants in his garden, the disposition of cloud, the color of the light, and last, although not least, the arsenal of meteorological instruments in a louvre-boarded hutch upon the lawn. Ever since he had settled at Gretz, he had been growing more and more into the local meteorologist, the unpaid champion of the local climate. He thought at first there was no place so healthful in the arrondissement. By the end of the second year, he protested there was none so wholesome in the whole department. And for some time before he met Jean-Marie he had been prepared to challenge all France and the better part of Europe for a rival to his chosen spot.

"Doctor," he would say— "doctor is a foul word. It should not be used to ladies. It implies disease. I remark it, as a flaw in our civilization that we have not the proper horror of disease. Now I, for my part, have washed my hands of it; I have renounced my laureation; I am no doctor; I am only a worshiper of the true goddess Hygeia. Ah, believe me, it is she who has the cesius. And here, in this exiguous hamlet, has she placed her shrine; here she dwells and lavishes her gifts; here I walk with her in the early morning, and she shows me how strong she has made the peasants, how fruitful she has made the fields, how the trees grow up tall and comely under her eyes, and the fishes in the river become clean and agile at her presence.—Rheumatism!" he would cry, on some malapert interruption. "O, yes. I believe we do have a little rheumatism. That could hardly be avoided, you know, on a river. And of course the place stands a little low; and the meadows are marshy, there's no doubt. But my dear sir, look at Bourron! Bourron stands high. Bourron is close to the forest; plenty of ozone there, you would say. Well, compared with Gretz, Bourron is a perfect chambles."

The morning after he had been summoned to the dying mountebank, the Doctor visited the wharf at the tail of his garden, and had a long look at the running water. This he called prayer; but whether his adorations were addressed to the goddess Hygeia or some more orthodox deity, never plainly appeared. For he had uttered doubtful oracles, sometimes declaring that a river was a type of bodily health, sometimes extolling it as a great moral preacher, continually preaching peace, continuity, and diligence to man's tormented spirits. After he had watched a mile or so of the clear water running by before his eyes, seen a fish or two come to the surface with a gleam of silver, and sufficiently admired the long shadows of the trees falling half across the river from the opposite bank with patches of moving sunlight in between, he strolled once more up the garden and through his house into the street, feeling cool and renovated.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

In Kentucky travelers say a general store is usually kept by a colonel. This is true in the major portion of the state, if private information can be relied upon.—Somerville Journal.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 29.—Bill in relation to regulation of carriers by railways was read. The old law in regard to the enforcement section was inserted in place of that section in the bill. Section appropriating $10,000 annually for use of railway commissioners in enforcing their orders was stricken out. The bill finally passed. Bill in relation to regents and trustees of state institutions came up and was amended so that no board can be composed entirely of members of one party. Consideration was not completed when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Other than receiving the report of Funk, chairman of the house committee on ways and means, in which the committee recommends a substitute for senate file No. 8, relating to the revenue, and refusing to concur in senate amendments to various bills, little was done.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 30.—The senate passed the bill relating to regents and trustees of state institutions. It provides that itemized statements must be made to the secretary of state.

HOUSE.

The bill on banks and banking was passed after an amendment to place private banks under state supervision had been defeated. Lambert, chairman of the committee to investigate state printing was called upon to deposit with the clerk the papers and evidence secured by the committee, and after protesting did so. Senate bill relating to the judiciary, and incidentally fixing the salaries of the officials in that department, was under consideration throughout the day and was practically agreed to as passed by the senate except in the important particular that the house refused to concur in the senate amendment making the salary of the attorney general $4,000 instead of $1,500 as at present.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 31.—The senate this morning decided that the census should only be an enumeration of the population, voters and militia. The executive council is required to make a complete report of its business, which is to go into the Official Register, along with the census returns. Much time was spent in consideration of the bill in relation to the right of property, but a vote was not reached.

HOUSE.

The house spent almost the entire day in consideration of the revenue bill. There was an avalanche of amendments, but action on them was deferred.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 1.—Senate resumed consideration of the rights of property bill. It was amended so that in case of the sale of a stock of merchandise by a receiver or assignee, or under chattel mortgage, the landlord's prior lien for rent shall be good for only six months' rent. The present law allows the landlord to hold the stock for the rent of the entire period of the lease. Senate concurred in house amendments to election bill, restoring the old law in regard to the prices to be charged for printing legal notice. The report of the joint committee on building and loan investigation was presented and read. The committee found that no money or thing of value was given or offered directly or indirectly to any member of the general assembly by either Jackman or Quimby, who disbursed the money raised by the building and loan association federation and the money was not used in an illegal manner. Bill in relation to property rights passed. Bill relating to insurance was partially considered.

HOUSE.

Lambert introduced a resolution providing for the printing in the journal of the house of the transcribed evidence secured by the committee on investigation of printing and binding. Consideration of the revenue bill was resumed and an amendment by Early relative to taxation of telegraph, telephone, express and sleeping car companies was considered at length. This amendment is practically the Cheshire amendment which was defeated in the senate. It provides that but 2½ per cent of the assessment of such companies shall go to the state and the remainder to the funds of the county, township and municipality through which the same do pass. After a lengthy debate the amendment was adopted, 165 to 28.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 2.—Senate again took up the insurance bill and the entire forenoon session was spent in its consideration without any changes being made. At the afternoon session the house provision holding the company responsible for the acts of the agent performed within the scope of his authority, was adopted.

HOUSE.

Lambert's resolution providing for the printing in the journal of the evidence secured by the printing investigation committee came up and was the cause of a red hot debate. A substitute to refer the whole matter to a committee composed of the members of the printing committee and the members of the investigating committee, was adopted, 64 to 27. The remainder of the session was devoted to consideration of the revenue bill. Numerous amendments were offered other than those recommended, but the only one adopted was that offered by Prentis, of Ringgold, providing that all property shall be valued by the assessor at his actual value.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 3.—Byers offered a resolution looking to the dismissal of a number of committee clerks. Laid over. Senate refused to concur in house provision in insane asylum bill making salaries of superintendents $3,000, and insisted on $2,500. Insurance bill was considered, but no changes made, and it was then laid aside and the bill in relation to common schools taken up. It passed without important changes. The Temple amendment to the railroad bill was made a special order for Wednesday.

HOUSE.

The fish and game bill came up. An amendment placing blackbirds among the birds it is unlawful to kill was adopted and the bill passed.

The Talk of the Town.

From the Advertiser, Clinton, Iowa.

Your reporter has been making inquiries of local parties as to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, their merits and sale in this community. D. B. Snyder, the oldest druggist in Lyons, Iowa, was consulted first. He says they rank very high, that he has sold them for years and has no hesitation in saying they have no superior as a nerve and blood pill, and that in no instance so far as his knowledge extends have they failed to benefit those who have used them. Mr. Snyder says that many cases of rheumatism have been cured by the Pink Pills, and for derangement of the stomach, nervous prostration, etc., they are invaluable.

Another case, Mr. John B. Cook, one of the pioneer settlers of Iowa, a prosperous farmer, now retired and living in Lyons, was wasting away almost to a skeleton with a complication of stomach trouble and rheumatism. After trying almost everything without benefit, finally gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and is to-day as well and strong as ever, excepting the wear of advancing years, and he and his family unhesitatingly attribute his recovery to the Pink Pills. This case I am well acquainted with.

Another case of rheumatism with which the writer is personally familiar is that of Mrs. John Crapser, formerly of Lyons, Ia., but now of De Witt, Ia. Mrs. Crapser was an intimate friend of the writer's family. About four years ago she was prostrated with inflammatory rheumatism and nothing seemed to do her any permanent good. They were well off as far as money was concerned, and nothing was left undone to relieve her and effect a cure. The best medical skill the city could furnish was provided in the vain attempt to conquer the stubborn disease. All to no purpose. She continued to get worse until finally she was entirely helpless, not being able to turn herself in bed and her life was almost despaired of.

Just when the case was in its lowest and most hopeless stage a "Good Samaritan" neighbor, who had witnessed in other persons the great good they had derived under similar circumstances through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, urged them to try just one more remedy. Their faith in the pills was very weak, as it naturally would be after trying so many other medicines and continually growing worse, but finally concluded to give them a trial and by the time the first box was used she began to improve.

Mr. Crapser was in Lyons a few weeks ago and I inquired how his wife was getting along, and to my surprise he said she was nearly well, and then went on to tell me of the wonderfully good effects wrought out by the Pink Pills, and no argument can convince them now that there is another medicine in the wide world that can begin to compare with the magical Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of lagrippe palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Beets for feeding Dairy Stock.

A subscriber from Bancroft, Iowa, writes: "What kind of beets would be the most profitable to grow for feeding dairy cows. That would depend on circumstances. If the land lies low and is subject to frost early in September, we would use the sugar beet but would not grow it on the plan reccommended for growing beets for sugar. We would not aim to grow small beets but large ones. It is not sugar that is wanted for dairy cows so much as a succulent food that has a very considerable amount of albuminoids in the dry matter. If the land is high, say on a level with the high prairie in that section of the country and not liable to early frosts we would grow mangels. They are more easily cultivated, more easily gathered, will yield more and are partically as good for feeding purposes. We have grown both, but abandoned the use of the mangel on one farm because of the liability of frost which stops the growth of the mangel but does not stop the growth of the sugar beet. The mangel grows up out of the ground and hence the frost which we are liable to have in September will stop the growth long before the growing season ends. The sugar beet stays in the ground, does not grow out of it to any extent, hence our sugar beets were entirely uninjured whereas the mangels were practically useless.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Supervisors Fox and Carlson took a run to Independance last week to look up this county's insane patients at the hospital and to investigate the question of keeping the mild insane at the poor farm. Superintendent Hill recommended the following named patients as being such as could be safely taken to the poor farm viz: Andrew Edmenson, Fred Peasley, Herman Mathis, Nelson Granger, Joe Sneijek, Byron Booth and Joseph Heginger. He strongly recommended that Fred Peasly be put to work on a farm as it would be much better for him. It will be a big saving to the insane fund to have those men carred for in our own county poor farm. They also took and investigated the poor farms of Buchanan and Butler counties and secured a good many good ideas for future use, which will be valuable in connection with the improvements to be made on our county poor farm. It is good sense on the part of the board of supervisors to learn from experience of other counties before deciding on the plan for improving Hancock county poor farm.—Hancock Signal.

It should be made a matter of public knowledge that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will speedily cure piles of the longest standing. It is the household favorite for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises and sores of all kinds. Harr.

The board of supervisors held a special meeting last week for the purpose of considering the poor farm matter. After looking over a number of tracts they purchased the north east quarter of section 26 in Garfield township for $25.00 per acre. This tract is just west of J. T. Brown's and close to Duncan station. It is a good quarter of land, well located and we think the board used good jndgement in the purchase.—Hancock Signal.

Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry St., Alton, Ill., suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. She doctored for it nearly the whole of this time, using various remedies recommended by friends, and was treated by physicians, but received no relief. She then used one and a half bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which effected a complete cure. This is published at her request, as she wants others similarly afflicted to know what cured her. RUIN AND RESTORATION, LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"Then Went I Up in the Night by the Brook and Viewed the Wall, and Turned Back and Entered by the Gate of the Valley"—Nem. 2:15.

A DEAD city is more suggestive than a living city — past Rome than present Rome—ruins rather than newly frescoed cathedral. But the best time to visit a ruin is by moonlight. The Coliseum is far more fascinating to the traveler after sundown than before. You may stand by daylight amid the monastic ruins of Melrose Abbey, and study shafted oriel, and rosetted stone and mullion, but they throw their strongest witchery by moonlight. Some of you remember what the enchanter of Scotland said in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel:"

Wouldst thou view fair Melrose aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight.

Washington Irving describes the Andalusian moonlight upon the Alhambra ruins as amounting to an enchantment. My text presents you Jerusalem in ruins. The tower down. The gates down. The walls down. Everything down. Nehemiah on horseback, by moonlight looking upon the ruins. While he rides, there are some friends on foot going with him, for they do not want the many horses to disturb the suspicions of the people. These people do not know the secret of Nehemiah's heart, but they are going as a sort of body-guard. I hear the clicking hoofs of the horse on which Nehemiah rides, as he guides it this way and that, into this gate and out of that, winding through that gate amid the debris of once great Jerusalem. Now the horse comes to dead halt at the tumbled masonry where he cannot pass. Now he shies off at the charred timbers. Now he comes along where the water under the moonlight flashes from the mouth of the brazen dragon after which the gate was named. Heavy-hearted Nehemiah! Riding in and out, now by his old home desolated, now by the defaced Temple, now amid the scars of the city that had gone down under battering-ram and conflagration. The escorting party knows not what Nehemiah means. Is he getting crazy? Have his own personal sorrows, added to the sorrows of the nation, unbalanced his intellect? Still the midnight exploration goes on. Nehemiah on horse-back rides through the fish gate, by the tower of the furnaces, by the king's pool, by the dragon well, in and out, in and out, until the midnight ride is completed, and Nehemiah dismounts from his horse, and to the amazed and confounded and incredulous body-guard, declares the dead secret of his heart when he says: "Come now, let us build Jerusalem." "What, Nehemiah, have you any money?" "No." "Have you any kingly authority?" "No." "Have you any eloquence?" "No." Yet that midnight, moonlight ride of Nehemiah resulted in the glorious rebuilding of the city of Jerusalem. The people knew not how the thing was to be done, but with great enthusiasm they cried out: "Let us rise up now and build the city." Some people laughed and said it could not be done. Some people were infuriate and offered physical violence, saying the thing should not be done. But the workmen went right on, standing on the wall, trowel in one hand, sword in the other, until the work was gloriously completed. At that very time in Greece, Xenophon was writing a history, and Plato was making philosophy, and Demosthenes was rattling his rhetorical thunder; but all of them together did not do so much for the world as this midnight, moonlight ride of praying, courageous, homesick, close-mouthed Nehemiah.

My subject first impresses me with the idea what an intense thing is church affection. Seize the bridle of that horse and stop Nehemiah. Why are you risking your life here in the night? Your horse will stumble over these ruins and fall on you. Stop this useless exposure of your life. No; Nehemiah will not stop. He at last tells us the whole story. He lets us know he was an exile in a far distant land; he was a servant, a cup-bearer in the palace of Artaxerxes Longimanus, and one day, while he was handing the cup of wine to the king, the king said to him, "What is the matter with you? You are not sick. I know you must have some great trouble. What is the matter with you?" Then he told the king how that beloved Jerusalem was broken down; how that his father's tomb had been desecrated; how that the Temple had been dishonored and defaced; how that the walls were scattered and broken. "Well," says King Artaxerxes, "what do you want?" "Well," said the cup-bearer Nehemiah, "I want to go home. I want to fix up the grave of my father. I want to restore the beauty of the Temple. I want to rebuild the masonry of the city wall. Besides, I want passports so that I shall not be hindered in my journey. And besides that," as you will find in the context, "I want an order on the man who keeps your forest for just so much timber as I may need for the rebuilding of the city." "How long shall you be gone?" said the king. The time of absence is arranged. In hot haste this seeming adventurer comes to Jerusalem, and in my text we find him on horseback, in the midnight, riding around the ruins. It is through the spectacles of this scene that we discover the ardent attachment of Nehemiah for sacred Jerusalem, which in all ages has been the type of the Church of God, our Jerusalem, which we love just as much as Nehemiah loved his Jerusalem. The fact is that you love the Church of God so much that there is no spot on earth so sacred, unless it be your own fireside. The church has been to you so much comfort and illumination that there is nothing that makes you so irate as to have it talked against. If there have been times when you have been carried into captivity by sickness, you longed for the Church, our holy Jerusalem, just as much as Nehemiah longed for his Jerusalem, and the first day you came out you came to the house of the Lord. When the Temple was in ruins, like Nehemiah, you walked around and looked at it, and in the moonlight you stood listening if you could not hear the voice of the dead organ, the psalm of the expired Sabbaths. What Jerusalem was to Nehemiah, the Church of God is to you. Sceptics and infidels may scoff at the Church as an obsolete affair, as a relic of the dark ages, as a convention of goody-goody people, but all the impression they have ever made on your mind against the Church of God is absolutely nothing. You would make more sacrifices for it to-day than any other institution, and if it were needful you would die in its defence. You can take the words of the kingly poet as he said: "If I forgot thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning." You understand in your own experience the pathos, the home-sickness, the courage, the holy enthusiasm of Nehemiah in his midnight moonlight ride around the ruins of his beloved Jerusalem. * * *

Again. My subject gives me a specimen of busy and triumphant sadness. If there was any man in the world who had a right to mope and give up everything as lost, it was Nehemiah. You say, "He was a cup-bearer in the palace of Shushan, and it was a grand place. So it was. The hall of that palace was two hundred feet square, and the roof hovered over thirty-six marble pillars, each pillar sixty feet high; and the intense blue of the sky, and the deep green of the forest foliage, and the white of the driven snow, all hung trembling in the upholstery. But, my friends, you know very well that fine architecture will not put down home-sickness. Yet Nehemiah did not give up. Then when you see him going among these desolated streets, and by these dismantled towers, and by the torn-up grave of his father, you would suppose that he would have been disheartened, and that he would have dismounted from his horse and gone to his room and said: "Woe is me! My father's grave is torn up. The temple is dishonored. The walls are broken down. I have no money with which to rebuild. I wish I had never been born. I wish I were dead." Not so says Nehemiah. Although he had a grief so intense that it excited the commentary of his king, yet that penniless, expatriated Nehemiah rouses himself up to rebuild the city. He gets his permission of absence. He gets his passports. He hastens away to Jerusalem. By night on horseback he rides through the ruins. He overcomes the most ferocious opposition. He arouses the piety and patriotism of the people, and in less than two months, namely, fifty-two days, Jerusalem was rebuilt. That's what I call busy and triumphant sadness.

My friends, the whole temptation is with you when you have trouble, to do just the opposite to the behavior of Nehemiah, and that is to give up. You say: "I have lost my child and can never smile again." You say, "I have lost my property, and I never can repair my fortunes." You say, "I have fallen into sin, and I never can start again for a new life." If Satan can make you form that resolution, and make you keep it, he has ruined you. Trouble is not sent to crush you, but to arouse you, to animate you, to propel you. The blacksmith does not thrust the iron into the forge, and then blow away with the bellows, and then bring the hot iron out on the anvil and beat with stroke after stroke to ruin the iron, but to prepare it for a better use. Oh that the Lord God of Nehemiah would rouse up all broken-hearted people to rebuild. Whipped, betrayed, ship-wrecked, imprisoned, Paul went right on. The Italian martyr Algerius sits in his dungeon writing a letter, and he dates it, "From the delectable orchard of the Leonine prison." That is what I call triumphant sadness. I knew a mother who buried her babe on Friday and on Sabbath appeared in the house of God and said: "Give me a class; give me a Sabbath school class. I have no child now left me, and I would like to have a class of little children. Give me real poor children. Give me a class off the back street." That, I say, is beautiful. That is triumphant sadness. At three o'clock every Sabbath afternoon, for years, in a beautiful parlor in Philadelphia—a parlor pictured and statuetted—there were from ten to twenty destitute children of the street. Those destitute children received religious instruction, concluding with cakes and sandwiches. How do I know that that was going on for sixteen years? I know it in this way. That was the first home in Philadelphia where I was called to comfort a great sorrow. They had a splendid boy, and he had been drowned at Long Branch. The father and mother almost idolized the boy, and the sob and shriek of that father and mother as they hung over the coffin resound in my ears today. There seemed to be no use of praying, for when I knelt down to pray, the outcry in the room drowned out all the prayer. But the Lord comforted that sorrow. They did not forget their trouble. If you should go any afternoon into Laurel Hill, you would find a monument with the word "Walter" inscribed upon it, and a wreath of fresh flowers around the name. I think there was not an hour in twenty years, winter or summer, when there was not a wreath of fresh flowers around Walter's name. But the Christian mother who sent those flowers there, having no child left, Sabbath afternoons mothered ten or twenty of the lost ones of the street. That is beautiful. That is what I call busy and triumphant sadness. Here is a man who has lost his property. He does not go to hard drinking. He does not destroy his own life. He comes and says, "Harness me for Christian work. My money's gone. I have no treasures on earth. I want treasures in heaven. I have a voice and a heart to serve God." You say that that man has failed. He has not failed—he has triumphed!

Oh, I wish I could persuade all the people who have any kind of trouble never to give up. I wish they would look at the midnight rider of the text and that the four hoofs of that beast on which Nehemiah rode might cut to pieces all your discouragements, and hardships, and trials. Give up! Who is going to give up, when on the bosom of God he can have all his troubles hushed? Give up! Never think of giving up. Are you borne down with poverty? A little child was found holding her dead mother's hand in the darkness of a tenement house, and some one coming in, the little girl looked up, while holding her dead mother's hand, and said, "Oh, I do wish that God had made more light for poor folks." My dear, God will be your light, God will be your shelter, God will be your home. Are you borne down with the bereavements of life? Is the house lonely now that the child is gone? Do not give up. Think of what the old sexton said when the minister asked him why he put so much care on the little graves, in the cemetery—so much more care than on the larger graves, and the old sexton said, "Sir, you know that 'of such is the kingdom of heaven,' and I think the Savior is pleased when he sees so much white clover growing around these little graves." But when the minister pressed the old sexton for a more satisfactory answer, the old sexton said, "Sir, about these larger graves, I don't know who are the Lord's saints and who are not; but you know, sir, it is clean different with the bairns." Oh, if you have had that keen, tender, indescribable sorrow that comes from the loss of a child, do not give up. The old sexton was right. It is all well with the bairns. Or, if you have sinned, if you have sinned grievously—sinned until you have been cast out by the Church, sinned until you have been cast out by society, do not give up. Perhaps there may be in this house one that could truthfully utter the lamentation of another:

Once I was pure as the snow, but I fell—
Fell like a snowflake, from heaven to hell—
Fell, to be trampled as filth in the street—
Fell, to be scoffed at, spit on and beat;
Praying, cursing, wishing to die,
Selling my soul to whoever would buy,
Dealing in shame for a morsel of bread,
Hating the living and fearing the dead.

A Good Christian.

A good Christian is one who has the spirit of Jesus in him, and manifests that spirit in his actions and belief. He may believe this or that with regard to the origin and rank of the various parts of the Bible. So long as he takes the gold out of the mine and works it up into character, he is the true disciple of the book.—Rev. E. A. Horton.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, March 29.—The president has sent the following nomination to the senate: Charlemagne Tower of Pennsylvania as minister to Austria; Anson Burlingame Johnson of Colorado, consul at Fuchang, China; W. S. Hallenberger of Pennsylvania, second assistant postmaster general, and Henry Clay Evans of Tennessee, commissioner of pensions. Hoar reported a bill to prohibit the reproduction in the district of Columbia and territories by kinetoscope or similar devices, of pugilistic encounters and fights, and it was placed on the calendar. A joint resolution to at once appropriate $250,000 for improvement of the Mississippi river passed. Senate spent some time in consideration of the arbitration treaty.

HOUSE.

The democrats delayed consideration of the tariff bill somewhat by demanding the presence of a quorum. Several committee amendments of minor importance were adopted. During the day two republican members protested against the high tariff on cotton and woolen manufactures. Joint resolution for the appropriation of money for the improvement of the Mississippi river passed.

SENATE.

Washington, March 30.—Senator Foraker introduced a modified form of the Patterson pooling bill which permits railroads under certain restrictions to pool in the matter of transportation of freights. A resolution requesting the president to inform the senate whether letters had been received from Gen. Gomez urging the United States to aid Cuba, was adopted. Allen argued for the adoption of his resolution against imposing tariff duties for the advantage of special classes. Referred to committee on finance. The senate then went into executive session to consider the arbitration treaty. The president sent the senate the nomination of Frank W. Palmer, of Illinois, to be public printer.

HOUSE.

The democrats pressed the question of a duty on hides for the benefit of the farmer with such vigor that Mr. Hepburn, an Iowa republican, was drawn into the debate and he made a strong plea for dutiable hides. He demanded that the house be given an opportunity to vote on this question, and declared that every western republican was in favor of it. Mr. Cannon of Illinois also gave a qualified endorsement to this demand. No action was taken. Thirty-five committee amendments of minor importance were adopted.

SENATE.

Washington, March 31.—Mills offered a resolution calling on the committee on foreign relations for a report on the obligations assumed by the United States in insisting that Cuba should not be annexed to any European power and should remain subject to Spain. Most of the day was spent in executive session.

HOUSE.

An amendment to the tariff bill making the new tariff retroactive, in order that its duties may go into effect April 1, was adopted, 201 to 150. After the committee rose the amendments adopted in committee were all passed. A motion to recommit was defeated, 148 to 196. The vote on the passage of the bill resulted 205 to 122. Two Louisiana and two Texas democrats and one Alabama populist voted for the bill. Adjourned until Saturday.

SENATE.

Washington, April 1.—The tariff bill was received from the house and at once referred to the committee on finance. Joint resolution authorizing the secretary of the navy to transport contributions for the relief of the suffering people in India passed. Allen offered a resolution protesting against the trial by drum head court martial and the execution of the Cuban general, Rivera. Mills's resolution referring to the Gomez correspondence was agreed to. Morgan offered a resolution granting all the rights of belligerents to the contending parties in Cuba. The president sent the following nominations to the senate: Andrew D. White, of New York, ambassador to Germany; Wm. F. Draper, of Massachusetts, ambassador to Italy; Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, commissioner of patents.

SENATE.

Washington, April 2.—The senate spent almost the entire time in executive session considering the arbitration treaty.

HOUSE.

Washington, April 3.—The house held a short session, the only business transacted being the adoption of the senate resolution providing for chartering a vessel to carry donations of food to the famine sufferers of India. Adjourned till Wednesday.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, April 2.—Patents have been allowed but not yet issued as follows: To S. L. Hill, of Moulton, Iowa, for an ingenious cylinder press in which the cylinder is rotated as a reciprocating bed carries a form through under the cylinder to print upon the paper on the form and the bed and form thereon returned to receive ink and paper while the cylinder remains stationary. The intermittent rotary motion of the cylinder and the reciprocating motion of the bed occur while the press is operated by the continuous rotary motion of a single crank to which power is supplied by hand. To Mrs. E. B. Young, of Red Oak, Iowa, for a water bag adapted to enclose ice or water and close it watertight so it can be handled or carried about without leaking. To C. E. Bechtel, of Des Moines, for a manifold autographic register. Inventors in other states can have our services upon the same terms as Hawkeyes.

Reforms Need More Than a Day

To bring them about, and are always more complete and lasting when they proceed with steady regularity to a consummation. Few of the observant among us can have failed to notice that permanently healthful changes in the human system are not wrought by abrupt and violent means, and that those are the most salutary medicines which are progressive. Hostetters Stomach Bitters is the chief of these. Dyspepsia, a disease of obstinate character, is obliterated by it.

WOMAN'S POWER.

IT SHAPES THE DESTINIES OF MEN AND NATIONS.

Where Men Are at a Disadvantage, and "Only a Woman Can Understand a Woman's Ills."

Woman's beauty, love and devotion, rule the world. Grand women; strong mentally, morally and physically, whose ambition and magnetic influence urge men to deeds of grandeur and heroism. Such women are all-powerful. Weakly, sickly, ailing women have little ambition; their own troubles occupy their thoughts, and their one object is to get well.

They have no confidence in themselves, and only too often lose faith in their physicians.

All irregularities, whites, bearing-down pains, nervousness, headache, backache, "blues," distaste for society, sounds in ears, palpitation, emaciation, heavy eyes, "all gone" feeling, dread of impending evil, sleeplessness, etc., should at once be removed and vigorous health assured.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has for twenty years saved women from all this. Hear this woman speak:—

"I wish to publish what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done for me. I had falling of the womb and leucorrhœa, and they have cured me of both. I am a well woman. I suffered dreadfully with such dragging pains in the lower part of the back and extending around the body, irritation of the bladder, pain when walking and painful menstruation; I weakened terribly. I had been treated by three doctors without much help, and it only took five bottles of your Compound and three packages of Sanative Wash to cure me. I can recommend them to all women suffering with complaints like these."—MRS. VANNATTA, 3827 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A COUNTERFEITER CAUGHT.

The Police of Syracuse Make an Important Capture.

On Monday the 15th, Harold Marquisee, of Utica, N. Y., was arrested in Syracuse, N. Y., on a warrant sworn out by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., charging him with forgery. On the 15th of December Marquisee visited a photo-engraver in Syracuse, saying he was the representative of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., and arranged for the making of a full set of plates for the direction sheets, lables, etc., of the famous Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. News of this reached the home office, and no time was lost in arranging for his arrest when he should return for the plates. He returned on the 15th and was accordingly arrested and is now in jail in Syracuse awaiting examination.

This arrest proves to be an important one. In addition to various plunder, such as medical books, typewriters, rugs, etc., found in Marquisee's trunk when arrested, the police also found counterfeit coin both in the trunk and on his person; and in a search of his apartments at Utica found a complete outfit for counterfeiting consisting of crucibles, bellows, nickel, lead, bismuth, antimony, a small blacksmith forge, a charcoal furnace, and several plaster-of-paris molds. The United States marshals want him just as soon as the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. are through with him, and, no doubt, he will be sentenced for a long period.

In selecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for his counterfeiting operations, he showed his knowledge of the proprietory medical business; for these pills are in such great demand that they are easily sold at any drug store in the United States. His scheme was to work the country druggists and sell his imitations at a discount of from 2 per cent to 5 per cent., explaining the reduced price by the fact that he had picked them up in small lots and at a discount from dealers who were over-stocked. By working fast and making long jumps, he would have secured many hundreds of dollars in a short time. The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are most fortunate to have caught the rogue, before he had fairly started, and to have thus kept these spurious goods out of the market.

Bones in a Silver Vein.

If the find of a Colorado silver miner, made half a dozen years ago, be taken into account, there is but little doubt that the human race existed on this continent as long ago as the time when the silver veins were in process of formation. In the Rocky Point mine, at Gilman, 400 feet below the surface a number of human bones were found imbedded in the silver-bearing ore. When taken out over $100 worth of the ore still clung to the bones. An arrowhead, made of tempered copper and four inches long, was also found with the remains.

Ponder Over It.

A prominent building owner, with years of experience, gave the following instructions to his architect: "I have had my experience with kalsomine and other goods claimed to be just as good as Alabastine. I want you to specify the durable Alabastine on all my walls; do not put on any other manufacturers' dope, if they furnish it for nothing. Alabastine is right, and when I cease to use it I shall cease to have confidence in myself or my own judgment."

Smoking Meat Without Fire.

It may sound absurd to make a statement about "smoking meat without a fire," for it is a well known saying that "where there is smoke there must be fire." The advance of science, however, has made this idea obsolete, and to-day with the use of Krauser's Liquid Extract of Smoke it is possible to quickly, economically and successfully smoke meat without a fire. This liquid extract is made by distilling the smoke from hickory wood and is absolutely harmless. In fact, meat smoked by this method has a genuine smoke flavor, remains moist and soft, and is not infested with insects. Every objection of the old method is overcome, every trouble ended and the unsightly and dangerous smoke house is a thing of the past. Krauser's Liquid Extract of Smoke long ago passed the age of experiment, and thousands are using it to-day with profit and satisfaction. By writing E. Krauser & Bro., Milton, Pa., those who are interested can secure free of charge instructive printed matter about methods of curing and smoking all kinds of meats.

SPAIN'S YOUNG KING.

The Youthful Monarch Delights in Strict Military Discipline.

The education of Alphonso XIII. has a strong military character, like that of his father and his ancestors. It happily gives entire satisfaction to his own inclinations, says the London Spectator. He is exceedingly fond of the army and of everything connected with soldiering. He takes a keen interest in the parades, the barracks and the drills. He is simply delighted whenever his mother takes him to see the cantonments near Madrid and calls him to the balcony of the palace to watch the march pass of the battalions departing for Cuba. When the sentries present arms or the guards turn out as he passes he acknowledges their attentions with the most correct military salute. One of his earliest and pleasantest recollections is the first Twelfth Day levee, exclusively attended by the generals and officers, that he was permitted to witness in the palace. Since that occasion he has always been present on Jan. 6. Last year, for the first time, he wore the uniform of a cadet of the general military academy of Toledo, the Castilian Sandhurst. He appeared in the same uniform at the levees held by the queen regent on his saint's day, San Ildefonzo, Jan. 23, and on his birthday, May 17. These are the only state ceremonies, with the opening of the parliament, in which the young king has yet taken part, standing or sitting gravely on his mother's right hand. He has not yet been present at any evening reception or banquets or theatrical performances of any kind, or attended a bull-fight. Much care is taken with his physical training. He has every day half an hour or more of gymnastics and spends about the same time in the riding-school of the palace. He likes horses and riding. Nothing pleases him more than when the queen takes him for a long ride outside Madrid in some of the royal parks. Before he was allowed to have horses he used to ride donkeys. He is very fond of driving a pair of ponies that are kept for his special service. Every afternoon, when the weather permits, he spends a couple of hours in the open air, but is, of course, able to take more exercise and fresh air in San Sebastian during the summer than at Madrid. Last year he enjoyed his sea bathing for the first time, though he can not swim well yet. Fencing is an art he is most anxious to be allowed to learn. Up to the present he has not indulged in cycling, though it is as much the rage in Spain as in any other country. He tried once, at Miramar summer palace, in San Sebastian, a tricycle, which came roughly into contact with stones and caused a slight bruise, without, however, damping his determination to try again. It is said, indeed, that Alphonso XIII. resembles his father in his steadiness of purpose when once he has made up his mind to do anything.

Food of the Eskimos of Alaska.

The Eskimos of Alaska have profited by their contact with civilized people, not only to obtain many of the utensils and appliances of life, and to preserve food and supplies for the long northern winters. The "Sportsman's Review" gives an interesting recital of their progress: "From time immemorial the Eskimos have taken eggs and fowls during the short season they were available. There is no system of canning eggs to determine their grade among the natives. An egg is an egg to them at any period of incubation, and so long as the season lasts they live in riotous plenty. Formerly they were contented with what they could eat during the season, but since they have come in contact with white people they have learned more thorough methods, and now they provide eggs and birds to last the whole year through. They dry or pickle the flesh and the eggs are preserved in barrels of muckaluck—walrus oil. An addled goose egg kept a year in rancid oil appeals to an Eskimo's peculiarly cultivated taste. To an Eskimo an egg taken at any time in the season is eatable; but to be salable to the whites it must be fresh, so the Eskimos divide the territory among themselves, and make a systematic round of the nests each day, taking the fresh eggs, and finally pickling the mother when she refuses to lay any more, capturing her with a noose of wire. Now a part of the regular fare of the Yukon steamboat is wild goose. At the first meal the tourist is apt to regard the bird with great good favor, but as meal after meal passes wild goose ceases to be a joy. This continual depredation of the nests, combined with the Pacific coast market and record hunting, has already depleted the flocks of web-foot birds that one time were to be seen in myriads during the migrating season."

Dime Wasted.

Big Sister—Dick, I wish you would go and get Mr. Nicefellow a glass of water. Mr. Nicefellow—Yes, my boy, and here's a dime for you. Little Brother—Thank you; I'll go pretty soon. Mamma said I shouldn't leave the parlor until she came back.—New York Weekly.

Like a Lady.

"Minnie has been in to see me to-day," said a little five-year-old girl, "and she behaved like a lady."

"And I hope you did, too," said her mother.

"Yes, indeed. I turned somersaults for her on the bed."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

AN EXPRESSION

From the Rev. Charles W. Savidge, the Famous Preacher, Author of "Shots From the Pulpit," and Other Books; Also Founder of the People's Church, Omaha.

Omaha, Neb., March 15, 1897.—I take pleasure in commending Dr. B. J. Kay and his work. Dr. Kay is well known in this and many other states in the union. I believe him to be an honest and honorable man, one thoroughly worthy of the confidence of the people. Those sending money to Dr. Kay may rest assured that they will receive the medicine ordered. He is a professed christian, and I believe a true one. He has been justly noted for his philanthropic and christian work. His gifts at different times through his life have been almost princely. I have good reason to believe that the Dr. Kay's Renovator and Dr. Kay's Lung Balm, which he makes and sells, are valuable to those who need them, as I have seen them used with excellent results. Mr. George W. Hervey, editor of the Omaha Weekly World-Herald, and quite a number of other Omaha people have been cured by these great remedies I write this testimonial because I actually believe that it is deserved.

Sincerely,
Pastor People's Church, Omaha, Neb. Charles W. Savidge.

The Electric Light of Mowerdom

The pine knot—the tallow candle—the oil lamp—gas—these are stages in the evolution of illumination, which today finds its highest exponent in the electric light.

Similar and no less striking has been the evolution of grain and grass cutting machinery. In 1831 the scythe and the cradle were superseded by the McCormick Reaper. The intervening years have seen many improvements, until now we have that model Harvester and Binder, the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, and that veritable electric light of mowerdom, the

One of the greatest events in the history of woodcraft will be the Northern Iowa Picnic to be held at Mason City on May 19th. About 15,000 Woodman belong to this association, and from present indications at least 10,000 visitors will be present. Head Counsul Nyrthcutt is to be the orator of the day. A grand parade, field events and a big basket dinner will be features of the day's entertainment. Everybody will be taken care of and guaranteed a good time.

The M. W. A. banquett Tuesday evening was the most elaborate affair of the kind ever prepared in Klemme, and was heartily enjoyed by about one hundred persons. The tables were loaded with all the good things the season afforded, including strawberries and cream. A short musical program was rendered after which, Lew Lewis welcomed the guests in a few well chosen words. H. T. Walenskey, chief cook, made the announcement that the banquett had been prepared by men, except the baking of the Turkeys and Chickens, Cake and pies, etc. etc. The difference in appearence of the tables before and after eating showed that the people of Klemme are not dyspeptics. Steve Day, Henry Gruetzmacher and ye editor were the three heartiest eaters. There was no leather medal for the champion eater, but if there had been there is no doubt but the editor would have worn it home. We are anxiously looking forward for the next date.

SOMETHING TO KNOW.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable. acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the Liver and Kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood, Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it, Sold by J. L. Harr.

It is a mistake to believe that the devil keeps the busiest in the slums.

The poorest man may give as much as the richest, if he will give all he can.

Commonly we say a judgment falls upon a man for something in him we cannot abide.

There is no more crucial test of a man's piety than to have him chase his hat in a wind storm.

At last accounts Sam Jones, who says he is fighting the devil at Atlanta, was sparring for an opening.

As the late lamented mother of the Mikado of Japan bossed her son's 500 wives, they are likely to greatly miss their mother-in-law.

Sir J. Blundell Maple is the good man who has given $500,000 to a London hospital. The growth of this sort of Maples may well be encouraged.

A Montana legislator has introduced a bill making it unlawful to sell a drink of intoxicating liquor on credit. Here is an iconoclast indeed. Such a law, rightly enforced, would create a drouth in numerous localities.

Among the curious and suggestive surnames in a certain county in North Missouri are the following: Red, White, Blue, Green, Gray, Brown and Black. There are also Kings, Queens, Earls, Dukes, Marquises and Lords. In animated nature are to be found Wrens, Birds, Crows, Hawks, and also Hawkins and Fowlers. Among quadrupeds are Wolfe, Lamb, Lyon, Bull, Stier and Redheffer. At one time in a county in western Kansas there lived Redwine, Sourbeer, Drybread and Pancake.

Marie Corelli is, according to a London writer, a petite blonde, with blue-gray eyes, a short, rather aquiline nose, and quantities of fluffy, flaxen hair, arranged in curls over her forehead and coiled becomingly round the back of her small and shapely head. She dresses with Parisian elegance, and when at home wears "a clinging bebe frock of liberty silk, with turquoise butterflies and emerald butterflies pinned into the lace about the throat, or else trailing garments of sheeny satin and shimmering plush."

Col. John Hay's "Pike County Ballads" are being quoted in England just now as showing what manner of man is to represent us at St. James. If the Briton expects to find in Col. Hay a raw American, of the Joaquin Miller type, who despises book larnin', he will be mistaken. Colonel Hay has, so to speak, "lived down" his early efforts as a writer of dialect. He has in recent years printed occasionally a poem in conventional English, not distinguishable from quantities of verse which appear in American and English periodicals. But he is rarely or never classified as an American poet. He writes an occasional "piece" because he likes it, but he belongs to the school of Gilder, Johnson and company, and is anything but aggressive in what may be called literary Americanism. It will be better for the Briton not to think of Col. Hay as a man of letters at all, but as a gentleman of culture, a polished man of the world, with a deftness in affairs, with high knowledge of public usage, who has done nothing of consequence, outside of his history of Lincoln, simply because "it has not been necessary for him to hustle."

The statistical abstract of the United States, prepared under the direction of the secretary of the treasury, and just issued by that authority, has among its many tabulated statements the following in regard to the decline in prices of domestic iron. The figures cover each calendar year from 1850 to 1895. The quotations on No. 1 anthracite foundry pig iron at Philadelphia in 1850 were $20.88; in 1864, $59.25; in 1887, $20.92, and in 1895, $13.10. Bar iron, best rolled, at Philadelphia in 1850 was quoted at $59.54; in 1864 at $146.46; in 1882, $61.41; in 1892, $41.89, and in 1895, $30.02. Iron rails, standard sections, at mills in Pennsylvania in the year 1850 were quoted at $47.88; in 1864 at $126; in 1873 at $76.67, and in 1882 at $45.50. Steel rails were not made in commercial quantities before the year 1867, and at that date at mills in Pennsylvania were quoted at $166. In 1873 they had dropped to $120; in 1879 to $48.25; in 1880 they made a jump to $67.50; in 1889 they had declined to $29.25, and in 1895 to $24.33. The best prices of wire nails per keg of 100 pounds from factory, f. o. b. Chicago, in 1887 were $3.15; in 1892 they had fallen to $1.49, and in 1895 had risen to $1.69. The ups and downs of these values are to be traced to various causes. It is, however, noticeable that the downward trend has been more steady and less erratic.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

BUCKET SHOPS INDICTED.

Marshall County Grand Jury Returns a True Bill.

MARSHALLTOWN, April 9.—An indictment has been returned by the Marshall county grand jury against the officers of the Equitable Produce and Stock Exchange and the Consolidated Produce and Stock Exchange of Chicago (one and the same concern), and also against two of their recent operators in Marshalltown, J. H. Cole and A. J. Clark. The investigation has been quite thorough, and has occupied several days. J. H. Ross, of Eldora, former editor of the Herald of that place, instituted the cases both here and in Hardin county, and has been backed all through the fight by the Civic Federation of Chicago, represented by John Hill, Jr., chairman of the committee on gambling, and other members. The gambling concern made a stubborn resistance, sending emissaries from Chicago to influence the grand jury in its favor. The effect of this indictment, which is the first procured outside of Chicago against these bucket shop manipulators, will probably be to close all their offices in the state. There are now thirty-eight of them operating in Iowa, and their ill-gotten gains during the past year have been enormous. Mr. Hill returned to Chicago well satisfied with the result so far attained in the attempt to stamp out this nefarious business.

BURNS TO MEET M'LEOD.

Signs Articles for a Match to Be Contested May 6.

DAVENPORT, April 10.—"Farmer" Burns and "Dan" S. McLeod met in Davenport and agreed upon a match for $1,000 a side and the championship of the world, to take place in Davenport or Rock Island May 6. Burns's backers live in this neighborhood and he has always insisted on meeting challengers here. He waived, however, his usual demand for a longer match and two falls out of three, catch-as-catch-can will decide the contest. After Burns had signed the articles, McLeod took them to Chicago for the approval of his own backers.

MURDERED HER CHILD.

Wanted to Keep the Evidence of Her Shame From the World.

CRESTON, April 10.—The "baby in the well" mystery, which has been agitating this community, has been solved. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tarr, who occupied the premises last, confessed that she gave birth to the child, concealing its birth from every member of her family. She hid the baby under her bed, passed it out of her bed room window at night, concealed it under a porch for a week, and then threw it in the well, thinking it would not be discovered there.

WANT SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Miners of Polk District Adopt Uniform Price for All Coal.

DES MOINES, April 10.—At a mass meeting of miners a resolution was adopted which provides that the miners of Polk district will stand by the action of the state convention at which time it was decided that the miners would ask a uniform price of 75 cents, for all coal, high and low, that is mined in the district. This means that a portion of the miners in this district are on a strike until the 75 cents is assured them by the operators.

CHILD IS KILLED.

Runaway Team at Des Moines Runs Over a Child.

DES MOINES, April 9.—The 4-year-old daughter of Charles Mote, of East Second and Market streets was run over by a runaway team. The child was playing in the road when the horses dashed down the street. The little one was knocked down and one leg was broken and her face and form badly mangled. A doctor was called after the little one had been carried into the house, but it was too late.

Banker Colt Settles.

OTTUMWA, April 11.—A compromise was effected between P. P. Colt, of the South Ottumwa bank, and the depositors. He succeeded in raising enough cash to pay them 75 cents on the dollar and the depositors will quash all proceedings against him, both civil and criminal.

Chief Witness Disappears.

CLINTON, April 9.—John Patrick Murphy, the tramp to whom it is alleged Eckerlebe made a confession of the murder of Mina Keil, made his escape from the Jackson county jail at Maquoketa and is still at large.

Sad Tragedy at New London.

NEW LONDON, April 10.—Miss Clara Holland, a handsome young lady of 18 years, was fatally shot in the side by the accidental discharge of a shot gun which her father, Arlington Holland, was removing from a closet.

BRUTAL MURDER DONE.

A. D. Bolland Found Dead in the Road North of Maquoketa.

MAQUOKETA, April 11.—A. D. Bolland, a farmer living nine miles north of Maquoketa, was most foully murdered on the road between his dwelling and the house of a neighbor. What time it happened or who committed the deed is a mystery, but this much is certain, it was done by some person who knew him well and was well acquainted with his habits and by one who bore him a grudge. Bolland was a widower and lived by himself in a two-room shack. Indications are that the murderer lay in wait for him, and as he approached suddenly pounced upon him and dealt him three severe blows on the head. One blow struck him on the left temple, inflicting a wound nearly eight inches in length, fracturing the skull; another landed on the top of the head, and the third struck him on the left ear, cutting that member in two, and it must have been a descending blow, as all the skin on the left side of the face is entirely removed. No other cause for the committing of so dastardly a crime can be ascribed than that of an old grudge, because his clothing was not deranged a particle, and in his pocket was found his watch and other things that would have been carried away had the crime been done for the purpose of robbery. He was a quiet and inoffensive man, and was not known to have had an enemy on earth, save a neighbor with whom he quarreled a few days ago. The club with which the deed was done was found about ten rods distant from where the body lay. It was about 2 feet 6 inches long, and was a portion of an ironwood rack stake. Several of the same kind can be found on the place of the suspect.

FOR THE "Q" ROAD.

Payment from Relief Fund Bars Employes from Recovery from the Road.

DES MOINES, April 8.—The supreme court decided that the Voluntary Relief association maintained by the Chicago Burlington & Quincy railroad is an organization maintained for the benefit of the employes of the road who are its members and for the benefit of the road itself through this medium. It is decided that the employe who is a member of the association, when paid all the benefits to which he is entitled by virtue of his membership, is barred from action for damages against the railroad company by reason of his acceptance of this amount. He has the alternative of accepting the relief money or suing the company. It is pointed out in clear words that he cannot receive the money and recover from the company. The Temple amendment to the railroad laws was aimed at this association.

THE BATTLESHIP IOWA.

The Great Vessel Makes Seventeen Knots Per Hour.

BOSTON, April 8.—The battleship Iowa, the last of the premium built battleships of the navy, earned for her builders, Messrs. Wm. Cramp & Son, of Philadelphia, $200,000 by making an average of seventeen even knots an hour over the regular government course off the Massachusetts coast in the four hours speed trial required by the government under the contract. The Iowa, by her grand work, proved herself to be superior to either the Indiana or Massachusetts by a considerable fraction of a knot and is to-day the acknowleged queen of the American navy, if not the most formidable battleship afloat.

MUSCATINE DYNAMITE CASES.

Trial of One of the Alleged Perpetrators Now in Progress.

MUSCATINE, April 12.—The trial of Adam Vondresky, charged with conspiracy in connection with the dynamite outrages which occurred in Muscatine the night of May 10, 1893, in which the homes of John Mahin, editor of the Journal; E. M. Kessinger and Attorney N. Rosenberger were completely wrecked, is now in progress in the district court, presided over by Judge House, of Maquoketa. This is a re-trial of this particular case, the jury in the former trial, last December, having failed to reach an agreement and were discharged by Judge Brennan, who presided at the November term of this court.

IOWA CONDENSED.

The city council of Des Moines has authorized impeachment proceedings against Police Judge Phillips for misconduct in his office. Failure to account for funds is part of the charge.

Carl Leveke, a stone mason, was dangerously, if not fatally injured in a saloon quarrel with Fred Reil at Des Moines. Reil struck Leveke over the head with a heavy beer glass, commonly known as a "schooner" and he went down like a log. The skull was crushed in and Leveke is now in a critical condition. Leveke and Reil are old time acquaintances. They are both stone masons and they have always borne the reputation of being honest and hard working laboring men. They quarreled over a trivial matter and the result is as above.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

CANEA, April 6.—The admirals held a conference and arrived at a unanimous agreement as to most of the details of carrying out the blockade of certain Greek ports. Admiral Canevare, however, has been instructed by the Italian government that he must not agree to act as the senior officer of the international fleet in this undertaking. These instructions have raised the important question of who is to occupy the post. The reluctance of the Italian government, already much too prominently associated with coercion, is due to the Italian sympathy to Greece, and to the financial strain already involved.

ATHENS, April 7.—The seventy-sixth anniversary of the raising of the standard of the cross against the Crescent, on April 6, 1821, beginning the war against the Turks, which resulted in the independence of Greece, was celebrated throughout the kingdom yesterday with great enthusiasm.

ATHENS, April 8.—Each of the foreign representatives has handed M. Skouzes, the Greek minister of foreign affairs, the following note:

"The undersigned, in connection with instructions from his government, has the honor to announce to M. Skouzes, minister of foreign affairs for the Greek government, that in case of armed conflict on the Greeco-Turkish frontier, all responsibility will rest with the aggressors. He is also instructed to say that whatever results may arise from such a conflict, the powers are firmly resolved to maintain the general peace, and have decided not to allow the aggressor in any event to reap the slightest benefit from his action."

The ambassadors at Constantinople have presented to the sublime porte a note similar to the foregoing.

ATHENS, April 8.—There is a rumor that Russia proposed that if Greece would withdraw her troops from Crete, Russia would have Turkey withdraw her forces, and would see that Prince George of Greece be sent to organize a Cretan constabulary. It is said that Greece promptly rejected these propositions.

LONDON, April 9.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says the sultan has addressed an autograph letter to the czar expressing his extreme satisfaction at the energy which the czar has displayed in getting the powers to adopt the principal of his integrity of Turkey. The sultan hopes that neither Russia or the other powers will abandon that attitude.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 9.—An extraordinary council of ministers of the empire was held at the palace. It is understood that as a result of it the Turkish government will reinforce the troops at Salonica with thirty-two battalions of Redifs from Anatola, making a total of 23,000.

ATHENS, April 9.—It is believed that some decided change in the political situation must take place before long, as the Turkish government has plainly intimated to the representatives of the powers that the existing conditions can not be allowed to prevail much longer. Every day of delay now benefits Greece, which country was not so well prepared as Turkey for war.

ELASSONA, Macedonia, April 10.—Bands of Greek brigands entered Turkey at Krania. The Turkish troops have been engaged with them and fighting is proceeding. At Turkish headquarters this news is looked on as of the gravest description in view of the excitement here. Edham Pasha sent orders to have everything ready to relieve the Turkish army in force. The invading Greeks number 1,000 and are holding their own. The Greek regulars have not taken part in the scrimmage.

ATHENS, April 12.—The latest reports from the front say that the firing between the Greek and Turkish outposts has ceased. It is reported that artillery was used on both sides. Four Turkish posts were destroyed. On the Greek side Evzones did the principal fighting.

LONDON, April 12.—A dispatch to the Observer from Rome says that it was reported at midnight that war had been declared between Turkey and Greece.

ATHENS, April 12.—The invasion of Turkish territory by Greek insurgents is believed to be the forerunner of a declaration of war. It is added that in spite of the numerous forces already at the front, two further classes of the Greek army reserves have been called out.

Rivera Arrives at Havana.

HAVANA, April 10.—General Ruiz Rivera, accompanied by Col. Bacellao, arrived by train at Rigla. They were conveyed to Cabana fortress. Both seemed in excellent spirits.

Disapproves It.

NEW YORK, April 10.—The Greater New York charter has been returned to the legislature with the disapproval of the mayors of New York and Brooklyn.

SENATOR VOORHEES IS DEAD.

Distinguished ex-Senator a Victim of Rheumatism of the Heart.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Daniel W. Voorhees, ex-United States senator from Indiana, is dead. Senator Voorhees had been in poor health for several years, suffering from rheumatism of the heart. Friends, therefore, expected to hear of death suddenly. At last reports, however, he was showing signs of improvement. Death, therefore, while not entirely unexpected, came with a shock. Senator Voorhees was 76 years old. Prior to retirement from public life March 4th last, he was for many years one of the most picturesque figures in the senate. He was born in Ohio and taken by his parents in infancy to his pioneer home in Wabash Valley, Indiana, with which, under the sobriquet "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," his name has since been associated throughout a long and honorable political career.

MORE FUN FOR SPAIN.

Porto Rico Takes Up Arms Against the Mother Country.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The Herald says Doctor Julio Henna, president of the Porto Rican revolutionary committee, received information to the effect that Porto Rico had taken up arms against Spain, the revolution having started in Yauco and Adjuntas. The revolution, though expected, was not anticipated so soon. Porto Rico has a population of 955,000, of whom 76,000 are native Spanish. The promised reforms in the administration lately put in effect there by Spain have been found to amount to nothing and apparently precipitated the revolution.

Only One Bid for Armor Plate.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The navy department has received only one bid for supplying the 8,000 tons of armor for the battleships Illinois, Wisconsin and Alabama, and this one is so irregular in form as to be far wide of the advertisement. This bid is from the Illinois Steel Company, of Chicago, which proposes to supply the armor desired at $260 a ton on condition that it be given a twenty-year contract to supply all naval armor. In such a case the remainder of the armor will be supplied at $240 a ton, the armor to be paid for in gold coin. The alternative proposition is the contemplated erection of an armor plant by the government, and it to be supplied with steel by the Illinois company. No awards have been made. The whole matter will probably be referred to congress. Should the Illinois Steel Company succeed in obtaining the contract, it would mean the employment of upwards of 3,000 men and a pay roll approximating $500,000 monthly. According to the act of congress passed at the last session, the cost of armor plate must not exceed $300 per ton.

W. J. Bryan Injured.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., April 10.—Hon. W. J. Bryan was injured here by the caving in of the piazza from which he was speaking. Nearly 400 men and women were precipitated about 20 feet to the ground and many of them were injured, but none fatally. Mr. Bryan was picked up unconscious, and removed to a physician's office, where an examination revealed that he had received no injuries of a serious character.

Corrupt Bankers.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Warrants for the arrest of Charles W. Spaulding, president; A. D. Averill, vice-president; and C. E. Churchill, cashier of the defunct Globe Savings Bank, were sworn out by Frank E. Stone, of the firm of Stone & Francis, depositors in the institution. Mr. Stone went before Justice W. T. Hall and a complaint, charging the officers of the bank with embezzlement, was drawn up.

Rivera Will Not Be Shot.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Secretary Sherman stated that he had assurances that General Rivera, the insurgent leader, would not be executed, but would be treated as a prisoner of war.

BREVITIES.

The New York senate passed the anti-cartoon bill, which prohibits newspapers publishing the portrait of any person without his consent.

A dispatch from Venezuela says the congress of Venezuela has unanimously ratified their Guiana arbitration treaty with Great Britain which was negotiated by the United States, and that President Crespo will sign it.

The recent mayoralty election in Chicago resulted in a decisive victory for the democratic party, its candidate, Carter H. Harrison, having more votes than all the other candidates combined. Carter H. Harrison is the son and namesake of the late Mayor Harrison, who was assassinated during the closing days of the World's Fair. Harlan, ind. rep., ran second; Sears, rep., third, and Hesing, ind. dem., fourth.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER II.—(CONTINUED.)

On one of the posts before Tentaillon's carriage entry he espied a little dark figure perched in a meditative attitude and immediately recognized Jean-Marie.

"Aha!" he said, stopping before him humorously, with a hand on either knee. "So we rise early in the morning do we? It appears to me that we have all the vices of a philosopher."

The boy got to his feet and made a grave salutation.

"And how is our patient?" asked Desprez.

It appeared the patient was about the same.

"And why do you rise early in the morning?" he pursued.

Jean-Marie, after a long silence, professed that he hardly knew.

"You hardly know?" repeated Desprez. "We hardly know anything, my man, until we try to learn. Interrogate your conscience. Come, push me this inquiry home. Do you like it?"

"Yes," said the boy, slowly; "yes, I like it."

"And why do you like it?" continued the Doctor. "(We are now pursuing the Socratic method.) Why do you like it?"

"It is quiet," answered Jean-Marie; "and I have nothing to do; and then I feel as if I were good."

Doctor Desprez took a seat on the post at the opposite side. He was beginning to take an interest in the talk, for the boy plainly thought before he spoke, and tried to answer truly. "It appears you have a taste for feeling good," said the Doctor. "Now, there you puzzle me extremely; for I thought you said you were a thief; and the two are incompatible."

"Is it very bad to steal?" asked Jean-Marie.

"Such is the general opinion, little boy," replied the Doctor.

"No; but I mean as I stole," exclaimed the other. "For I had no choice. I think it is surely right to have bread; it must be right to have bread, there comes so plain a want of it. And then they beat me cruelly if I returned with nothing," he added. "I was not ignorant of right and wrong; for before that I had been well taught by a priest, who was very kind to me." (The Doctor made a horrible grimace at the word "priest.") "But it seemed to me, when one had nothing to eat and was beaten, it was a different affair. I would not have stolen for tartlets, I believe; but any one would steal for baker's bread."

"And so I suppose," said the Doctor, with a rising sneer, "you prayed God to forgive you, and explained the case to Him at length."

"Why, sir?" asked Jean-Marie. "I do not see."

"Your priest would see, however," retorted Desprez.

"Would he?" asked the boy, troubled for the first time. "I should have thought God would have known."

"Eh?" snarled the Doctor.

"I should have thought God would have understood me," replied the other. "You do not, I see; but then it was God that made me think so, was it not?"

"Little boy, little boy," said Doctor Desprez, "I told you already you had the vices of philosophy; if you display the virtues also, I must go. I am a student of the blessed laws of health, an observer of plain and temperate nature in her common walks; and I cannot preserve my equanimity in presence of a monster. Do you understand?"

"No, sir," said the boy.

"I will make my meaning clear to you," replied the Doctor. "Look here at the sky—behind the belfry first, where it is so light, and then up and up; turning your chin back, right to the top of the dome, where it is already as blue as at noon. Is not that a beautiful color? Does it not please the heart? We have seen it all our lives, until it has grown in with our familiar thoughts. Now," changing his tone, "suppose that sky to become suddenly of a live and fiery amber, like the color of clear coals, and growing scarlet toward the top—I do not say it would be any the less beautiful; but would you like it as well?"

"I suppose not," answered Jean-Marie.

"Neither do I like you," returned the Doctor, roughly. "I hate all odd people, and you are the most curious little boy in all the world."

Jean-Marie seemed to ponder for a while, and then he raised his head again and looked over at the Doctor with an air of candid inquiry. "But are not you a very curious gentleman?" he asked.

The Doctor threw away his stick, bounded on the boy, clasped him to his bosom, and kissed him on both cheeks.

"Admirable, admirable imp!" he cried. "What a morning, what an hour for a theorist of forty-two! No," he continued, apostrophizing heaven, "I did not know that such boys existed; I was ignorant they made them so; I had doubted of my race; and now! It is like," he added, picking up his stick, "like a lovers' meeting. I have bruised my favorite staff in that moment of enthusiasm. The injury, however, is not grave." He caught the boy looking at him in obvious wonder, embarrassment, and alarm. "Hello!" said he, "why do you look at me like that? Egad, I believe the boy despises me. Do you despise me, boy?"

"O, no," replied Jean-Marie, seriously; "only I do not understand."

"You must excuse me, sir," returned the Doctor, with gravity; "I am still so young. O, hang him!" he added to himself. And he took his seat again and observed the boy sardonically. "He has spoiled the quiet of my morning," thought he. "I shall be nervous all day, and have a febricule when I digest. Let me compose myself." And so he dismissed his preoccupations by an effort of the will which he had long practiced, and let his soul roam abroad in the contemplation of the morning. He inhaled the air, tasting it critically as a connoisseur tastes a vintage, and prolonging the expiration with hygienic gusto. He counted the little flecks of cloud along the sky. He followed the movements of the birds round the church tower—making long sweeps, hanging poised, or turning airy somersaults in fancy, and beating the wind with imaginary pinions. And in this way he regained peace of mind and animal composure, conscious of his limbs, conscious of the sight of his eyes, conscious that the air had a cool taste, like a fruit, at the top of his throat, and at last, in complete abstraction, he began to sing. The Doctor had but one air—"Malbrouck s'en va-t-en guerre;" even with that he was on terms of mere politeness; and his musical exploits were always reserved for moments when he was alone and entirely happy.

He was recalled to earth rudely by a pained expression on the boy's face. "What do you think of my singing?" he inquired, stopping in the middle of a note; and then, after he had waited some little while and received no answer, "What do you think of my singing?" he repeated, imperiously.

"I do not like it," faltered Jean-Marie.

"Oh, come!" cried the Doctor. "Possibly you are a performer yourself?"

"I sing better than that," replied the boy.

The Doctor eyed him for some seconds in stupefaction. He was aware that he was angry, and blushed for himself in consequence, which made him angrier. "If this is how you address your master!" he said at last, with a shrug and a flourish of his arms.

"I do not speak to him at all," returned the boy. "I do not like him."

"Then you like me?" snapped Doctor Desprez, with unusual eagerness.

"I do not know," answered Jean-Marie.

The Doctor rose. "I shall wish you a good-morning," he said. "You are too much for me. Perhaps you have blood in your veins, perhaps celestial ichor, or, perhaps you circulate nothing more gross than respirable air; but of one thing I am inexpugnably assured:—that you are no human being. No, boy"—shaking his stick at him—"you are not a human being. Write, write it in your memory—'I am not a human being—I have no pretension to be a human being—I am a dive, a dream, an angel, an acrostic, an illusion—what you please, but not a human being.' And so accept my humble salutations and farewell!"

And with that the Doctor made off along the street in some emotion; and the boy stood, mentally gaping, where he left him.

CHAPTER III.

MADAME DESPREZ who answered to the Christian name of Anastasie, presented an agreeable type of her sex; exceedingly wholesome to look upon, a stout brune, with cool, smooth cheeks, steady, dark eyes, and hands that neither art nor nature could improve. She was the sort of person over whom adversity passes like a summer cloud; she might, in the worst of conjunctures, knit her brows into one vertical furrow for a moment, but the next it would be gone. She had much of the placidity of a contented nun; with little of her piety, however; for Anastasie was of a very mundane nature, fond of oysters and old wine, and somewhat bold pleasantries, and devoted to her husband for her own sake rather than for his. She was imperturbably good-natured, but had no idea of self-sacrifice. To live in that pleasant old house, with a green garden behind and bright flowers about the window, to eat and drink of the best, to gossip with a neighbor for a quarter of an hour, never to wear stays or a dress except when she went to Fontainebleau shopping, to be kept in a continual supply of racy novels, and to be married to Doctor Desprez and have no ground of jealousy, filled the cup of her nature to the brim. Those who had known the Doctor in bachelor days, when he had aired quite as many theories, but of a different order, attributed his present philosophy to the study of Anastasie. It was her brute enjoyment that he rationalized and perhaps vainly imitated.

Madame Desprez was an artist in the kitchen, and made coffee to a nicety. She had a knack of tidiness, with which she had infected the Doctor; everything was in its place; everything capable of polish shone gloriously; and dust was a thing banished from her empire. Aline, their single servant, had no other business in the world but to scour and burnish. So Doctor Desprez lived in his house like a fatted calf, warmed and cosseted to his heart's content.

The midday meal was excellent. There was a ripe melon, a fish from the river in a memorable Bearnaise sauce, a fat fowl in a fricassee, and a dish of asparagus, followed by some fruit. The Doctor drank half a bottle plus one glass, the wife half a bottle minus the same quantity, which was a marital privilege, of an excellent Cote-Rotie, seven years old. Then the coffee was brought, and a flask of Chartreuse for madame, for the Doctor despised and distrusted such decoctions; and then Aline left the wedded pair to the pleasures of memory and digestion.

"It is a very fortunate circumstance, my cherished one," observed the Doctor—"this coffee is adorable—a very fortunate circumstance upon the whole—Anastasie, I beseech you, go without that poison for to-day; only one day, and you will feel the benefit, I pledge my reputation."

"What is this fortunate circumstance, my friend?" inquired Anastasie, not heeding his protest, which was of daily recurrence.

"That we have no children, my beautiful," replied the Doctor. "I think of it more and more as the years go on, and with more and more gratitude toward the Power that dispenses such afflictions. Your health, my darling, my studious quiet, our little kitchen delicacies, how they would all have suffered, how they would all have been sacrificed! And for what? Children are the last word of human imperfection. Health flees before their face. They cry, my dear; they put vexatious questions; they demand to be fed, to be washed, to be educated, to have their noses blown; and then, when the time comes, they break our hearts, as I break this piece of sugar. A pair of professed egoists, like you and me, should avoid offspring, like an infidelity."

"Indeed!" said she; and she laughed. "Now, that is like you—to take credit for the thing you could not help."

"My dear," returned the Doctor, solemnly, "we might have adopted."

"Never!" cried madame. "Never, Doctor, with my consent. If the child were my own flesh and blood, I would not say no. But to take another person's indiscretion on my shoulders, my dear friend, I have too much sense."

"Precisely," replied the Doctor. "We both had. And I am all the better pleased with our wisdom, because—because—" He looked at her sharply.

"Because what?" she asked, with a faint premonition of danger.

"Because I have found the right person," said the Doctor firmly, "and shall adopt him this afternoon."

Anastasie looked at him out of a mist. "You have lost your reason," she said; and there was a clang in her voice that seemed to threaten trouble.

"Not so, my dear," he replied; "I retain its complete exercise. To the proof; instead of attempting to cloak my inconsistency, I have, by way of preparing you, thrown it into strong relief. You will there, I think, recognize the philosopher who has the ecstacy to call you wife. The fact is, I have been reckoning all this while without an accident. I never thought to find a son of my own. Now, last night, I found one. Do not unnecessarily alarm yourself, my dear; he is not a drop of blood to me that I know. It is his mind, darling, his mind that calls me father."

"His mind!" she repeated, with a twitter between scorn and hysterics. "His mind, indeed! Henri is this an idiotic pleasantry, or are you mad? His mind! And what of my mind?"

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, April 5.—The resolution offered by Allen in regard to the drumhead court martial on General Rivera in Cuba, precipitated quite an animated Cuban debate in the senate. It was finally adopted. Elkins took the floor and addressed the senate in support of his bill to allow rebates of 10 per cent on the import duties of goods imported on United States vessels. The bankruptcy bill was considered briefly.

SENATE.

Washington, April 6.—Allison reported the sundry civil bill with amendments. Earl, dem, asked a reorganization of the senate committees, so as to give representation to those not placed upon any committee. Vest asked immediate consideration of a resolution asking the secretary of state whether he had issued any orders under the retroactive clause of the Dingley bill and if so, upon what authority. Laid over. Morgan made an extended speech on his resolution recognizing the existance of a state of war in Cuba. The appointment of Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, to be assistant secretary of the navy was received from the president.

SENATE.

Washington, April 7.—A special message was received from the president urging an immediate appropriation for the Mississippi flood sufferers. A resolution by Jones of Arkansas making an appropriation of $150,000 was at once passed. When it came back from the house with the amount raised to $200,000 the senate concurred. Morgan resumed his speech on his resolution to recognize Cuban belligerency. After a short executive session the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The house acted promptly on the president's message and adopted a joint resolution authorizing the secretary of war to expend $200,000 for the relief of the flood sufferers of the Mississippi valley. Jerry Simpson criticised the speaker for not appointing the committees and warned the house that no more business would be done by unanimous consent. The speaker replied that he was carrying out the wishes of the majority.

SENATE.

Washington, April 8.—Morgan continued his speech on his resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba. Nelson spoke for two hours in opposition to the Torrey bankruptcy bill. A resolution for an investigation of attorneys' fees in connection with the interstate commerce commission was adopted.

HOUSE.

Washington, April 10.—The house, without transacting any business, adjourned until Wednesday.

FIRE AT KNOXVILLE.

Awful Conflagration Causes Immense Loss of Property.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 9.—Fire started in a big hotel here and after destroying it spread in all directions, destroying the very heart of the city at a loss of probably $1,000,000. Five or six persons were burned to death in the hotel and many narrow escapes are reported.

Revolution in South Africa.

LONDON, April 9.—Dispatches from Pretoria and Delago say that the whole of Gazaland is in open revolt. Twenty-five thousand natives have rebelled against the Portuguese government. The principal rising is only about forty miles from the Transvaal border. The Portuguese troops are mobilizing rapidly, and the situation is regarded as most serious.

Higher Than Ever Before.

JACKSON, Miss., April 10.—Telegrapic communication with Greenville, Miss., has been lost. The city for days has been seriously threatened by the Mississippi river floods. Startling rumors are current.

Bribery Charged.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 12.—Charges of bribery are made against Dr. W. G. Hunter, nominee of the republicans for United States senator, and it is expected that the grand jury will return an indictment.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, April 10.—The venerable Geo. Schramm, of Des Moines, has been granted a copyright for his "New Versification of the Immortal German National Hymn, 'The Watch on the Rhine.'"

J. W. Billings, of Grinnell, Iowa, has been allowed a patent for a toy gun in which the barrel is adjustably connected with the breech in such a manner that a wafer cap can be inserted in the breech chamber and exploded to fire a ball from the barrel to shoot squirrels from high trees, etc.

J. A. M. Tyler, of Lexington, Neb., has been allowed a patent for an improved mechanism for raising and lowering a buggy top.

A patent has been allowed to L. Fleishman, of Des Moines, for a nut lock consisting of a nut that has an angular bore and a circular screw thread of larger diameter at one end of the angular bore in combination with a bolt having an angular portion and a second nut having an internal screw to engage the internal screw in the angular bore of the first mentioned nut.

A Merited Fate.

He was an aspirant for honors as an amateur humorist, and he had invited in a few of his friends to give them some specimens of his genius.

"Now," blandly he began, "what was the greatest physical feat ever performed in the United States?"

Nobody spoke.

"Why, Wheeling West Virginia, of course," he said, triumphantly.

The silence was ominous.

"Now," he continued, not one whit abashed, "what was the greatest surgical operation ever performed in this country?"

If anything, the silence was still ominous.

"Lansing Michigan!"

Then they fell upon him and rent him limb from limb, and scattered the fragments of him from Wheeling, W. Va., to Lansing, Mich.

Considerate.

"You say," remarked the debonnaire debtor, "that I am owing more money than anybody else that your firm has on its books?"

"Yes, sir," replied the collector.

"And that I am about the only person with whom they have trouble in getting their money?"

"That's what they told me."

"Young man, I like your looks and I like your manners, and I'm going to be a friend to you. I hate to have that debt knocking around my accounts, but for your sake I'll put up with it. If I were to pay up, the chances are ten to one that your firm would find collections so easy that they would discharge you and then I should never forgive myself."—Washington Star.

Didn't Know When to Stop.

"Darling," said she, "do you love me as much as ever?"

"Yes, dearie," said he, with his nose buried in his newspaper.

That ought to have satisfied her, but she had to ask "Why?"

"Oh, I dunno. Habit, I guess."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Belle—Clara exhibited some of her paintings to Mr. Dauber and asked for his criticism.

Mamie—Well, what did he say?

Belle—He said, "Miss Clara, you do paint well."

Mamie—I suppose Clara was delighted with the compliment.

Belle—Not exactly. He looked right in her face when he said it.

A Good Boy.

Father—Well, what has Tommy been doing today?

Mother—He cut off a piece of the cat's tail, broke three windows, blackened the cook's eye and built a bonfire in the cellar.

Father—Is that all? Tommy must have been a good boy today.

Stands Alone.

H. N. Merrick assessor of Ell township, reports the number of cattle in 1895, 1006 head, and in 1897, 1406, a gain of 400 head in two years. In horses a gain of 115 in the two years. The number of hogs in 1895 were 1555, in 1897, 1361 alive and 2218 lost by desease which shows that the hogs have gained in two years over 2000 head. This last season 2218 hogs in Ell township have died, which represents an enormous loss to the farmers of Ell township.

THE ARMY WORM.

Webster City, April 12.—Farmers in this section report the reappearance of the army worm in vast numbers. crawling out from under the dead grass, old fences and brush heaps. Yesterday and today the sun has been shining brightly. Last year the worm was plentiful in this and other parts of the state for a few weeks about harvest time and did considerable damage in fields where it preceded the farmer's reaper. Its principal mission then, however, seemed to be to lay its eggs, and its early appearance this year is the cause of considerable worry. Those who have studied the movements of the worm in the destructive years, when it marches in countless numbers for many miles, destroying every green thing in its path. Some think that it may turn into a moth and fly away to some other sectien before the crops begin to grow.—Cedar Rapies Republican.

GOOD NEWS FOR HAMPTON.

Hampton, April 8. —Special: It is now practically assured that the Chicago Great Western will build an extention of their system this year, constructing a line from here to Sioux City. The right of way was secured last year and the surveys were made and it is now understood that the work will be commenced at an early date. The line will run through Clarion, Webster and Fort Dodge and the branch will be called the Hampton. Clarion & Webster railway. — Cedar Rapids Republican.

The west end of the mill dam was washed out by high water and the probabilities are that it will never be thoroughly repaired as a new dam would cost more than an engine.—Iowa Valley Press.

SORT THE CORN.

We are satisfied that many farmers are very sadly mistaken as to the condition of their corn. A number of farmers were together in a railroad train the other day that was waiting for connections at the depot, and one of the officers of the road made the assertion that ninety per cent of the corn crop on his line was in good condition. A dealer heard the remark and said, "I will show you in twenty minutes that you are mistaken. I can go into any crib of corn of 1896 and show you plenty of rotten corn." suiting the action to the world he went out and in a few minutes returned with an armful of corn taken out of a crib which was utterly worthless for any purpose.

If these things are done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry? What shall we say of the condition of the corn piled on the ground or standing in open cribs that has taken all these rains? It was soft to begin with and immature. It has not had the drying winds of March to evaporate the surplus water. There have been no drying winds this year, instead the atmosphere has been saturated with moisture which the corn has taken up. And as if that were not sufficient it has been deluged with rain and now that warm weather is coming on it is absolutely essential that farmers go through, sort out, and throw away the sour corn and do the best they can to save the best of it. Our prediction is that in twenty days the stock of good corn in farmers' hands will show a reduction greater than had there been the usual amount of feeding. With prospect of a short crop in sight, corn may be corn next year. A word to the wise is sufficient. — Wallaces' Farmer.

PERSONAL.—The gentleman who annoyed the congregation last Sunday by continually coughing will find instant relief by using One Minute Cough Cure, a speedy and harmless remedy for throat and lung troubles. Harr.

It should be made a matter of public knowledge that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will speedily cure piles of the longest standing. It is the household favorite for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises and sores of all kinds. Harr.

AN EASTER ROMANCE.

(By Alice Chasemore.)

AUNT HETTY was only twenty-six when I came to live with her. There was only a difference of two years between us, but somehow she always seemed middle-aged to me, she was so quiet and serious and so different from my restless, excited self.

She was so sad at times that I could not help wondering if some time in her life she had not experienced some serious sorrow, for she had means and friends enough to make her life worth living, and should have been happy.

One day I found her weeping quietly with a little red book in her hand. I endeavored to calm her, to find out the reason for her sorrow, and then she told me this story:

"It happened when I was only eighteen. I was engaged to be married. My lover was four years older than myself; he was a mate of a ship, and a fine, dashing young fellow named Edward Blake. We had been engaged six months and were to be married a month later. The day was fixed, and Edward had arranged to give up the sea and take a situation on land. We were as happy as two young people could possibly be; but, unluckily, just a month before the time fixed for our wedding day, a picnic was gotten up by some of our friends, and Edward and I were of the party. There was a handsome young fellow there named Percy Sandys, the son of a neighboring clergyman. He was fresh from college, and full of fun and frolic. I chanced to be placed next to him at luncheon, and not knowing, as I afterward discovered, that I was engaged, he was specially attentive to me. I did not care for his attentions in the least, but I was in high spirits and only bent on the enjoyment of the moment, and I did not check him as, perhaps, I ought to have done. Presently, I caught sight of Edward's face, and saw that he was looking terribly cross and angry. Foolishly I thought it rather good fun to make him jealous, and, on purpose to tease him, I pretended to take all the more notice of Mr. Sandys. When we finished luncheon the party scattered and strolled about the woods in various directions. I naturally expected Edward to accompany me, but he rather rudely, as I thought, held aloof, and, to punish him, I paired off with Mr. Sandys. When the party got together again Edward looked so savage that I thought it better not to provoke him any further.

"I shook off Mr. Sandys, and, walking away with Edward, began to scold him for his unreasonable jealousy. Of course, I did not think I myself was in fault; nobody ever does. A loving word would have made me penitent directly. Unfortunately, he was white with anger, and began to reproach me in a way that roused my temper, too, for I was quick enough to take offence in those days, Ruth, though I have learned better since. I can remember, as if it were yesterday, the nook in the woods where we stood, the sunshine glinting through the trees and lighting up Edward's flushed face and angry eyes. He reproached me bitterly—more bitterly, I think, than I deserved. He called me a heartless coquette, and I called him little-minded and told him he had made himself ridiculous by his unreasonable jealousy. We got hotter and hotter, and finally he declared that if I did not admit that I had been wrong, and promise to behave differently for the future, all must be over between us. I did not care a straw for Mr. Sandys, and would fifty times sooner have had Edward with me, but I would have died sooner than have told him so then. So I gave him a bitter answer, and we both grew angrier still. His last words, uttered with all the intensity of passion, ring still in my ears. I can tell you them word for word: 'Hetty, if you let me go now, understand clearly you will never see my face again.' I did not quite believe him. Perhaps if I had I should still have let him go. At any rate, I was far too angry to give way then. 'Go, by all means, if you wish it,' I said, and in another moment he was gone. I had been tearing to pieces, in my passion, a little spray of hawthorne he had given me earlier in the day. I had pulled off the leaves one by one, and when he left me the bare stem was left in my hand, with one leaf only remaining. See, here it is, the last relic of my first and last love. God grant that in your whole life, my Ruth, you may never weep such tears as I have wept over that one faded leaf."

She opened the little red prayer book in her lap and showed me, hidden in a tissue paper pocket, the yellow hawthorne leaf.

"This little book," she said, "was Edward's gift to me, and this old dry leaf is my only relic of the day when we parted in the wood, never to meet again in this world. Stay, I have one more treasure, see!"

She drew from her bosom a quaint old locket and put it in my hand. It was a miniature painting representing a young man in an old-fashioned naval costume. It was a handsome face, but stern and proud-looking, and I could very well believe that the original would have behaved as Aunt Hetty had described.

"But did you really part like that, auntie?" I said. "Did you never see him again?"

"Never. He did not go back to the picnic party, but joined an outward-bound ship the next day, leaving a brief note for my mother, stating that we had fortunately found out in time that we were unsuited to each other, and had, therefore, by mutual consent, put an end to our engagement."

"But that was very cruel, auntie."

"I thought so then. Perhaps it was a little; but afterward I blamed myself far more than him. I had given the provocation; and I knew in my heart of hearts that one word of regret on my part would have made all right between us. But I was too proud to say it. I let him go with my eyes opened, and I have been justly punished."

"But have you never heard from him since, dear auntie?"

"Once or twice, but only indirectly.

"GO, IF YOU WISH IT."

He had no relatives in our part of the country. I know that he gave up the sea and obtained a commission in some Indiana regiment. When last I heard of him he was a captain; but that is many years ago, and I do not know whether he is alive or dead. So ends my poor little romance. There is one thing I should like to ask, Ruth, and that is partly why I have told you my story. You have seen my relics. They have been my greatest treasure in life, and I should like them put in my coffin when I die. Will you remember this, dear?"

I could not answer for tears, but I kissed her hand and she was content.

Two months ago, tired of our humdrum country life, auntie and I resolved to visit foreign parts. Accordingly, we went to Boulogne and took up our abode in a quiet boarding house in the Rue des Vieillards. There were a good many visitors staying in the house, but they were mostly in families or parties, and we did not mingle with them. Our vis-a-vis at table was a tall gentleman of soldierly appearance, who was always spoken of as the major. When he ventured to address an order to the waiting maids in French, the difficulties he got into were dreadful, and he always ended by getting angry with himself and them. I ventured to help him out of a difficulty once or twice, and in this manner a slight acquaintance sprung up between us. It had, however, gone no farther than a friendly nod or a remark across the dinner table. With other visitors he fraternized even less.

So matters stood until the night of Easter Sunday came, when we went to the little English church in an adjoining street. We were ushered into one of the pews appropriated for strangers and a minute or two later the major was shown into the same pew and sat down beside us. During the service the major, by an accidental movement of his arm, threw down auntie's little red prayer book. He picked it up, and was about to replace it, but as he held it in full view under the gas, his eyes chanced to fall upon it, and he started as though he had seen a ghost. He laid the book down, but he glanced from it to Aunt Hetty, as if trying to satisfy himself on some point. The sermon came to an end, and the benediction followed, but I fear the major had no part in it. He took advantage of the moment when all heads were bowed to do a very unmannerly thing. He slyly put up his eyeglasses and read the name inside auntie's book. It was quickly done, and might have escaped notice, but I watched him closely. I could even read the name myself. It was in a bold, manly hand: "To Hester; June 28, 18—." I was aghast at such an act of impertinence, and glanced at auntie to see if she would resent it; but she had probably not noticed it, for she made no sign.

The congregation began to disperse, and we went out, but we were scarce-

"Will You Tell Me How You Came by the Red Prayer-book You Use?"

ly in the street when the major spoke to auntie.

"Madam, I am going to ask you a very singular question, but let me assure you that I have a deep personal interest in asking it. Will you tell me how you came by that red prayer-book you use?"

I shall never forget auntie's quickly-given answer, but I could tell by the faint flush on her usually pale face how deeply she was moved.

"You gave it to me, yourself, Major Blake, years ago."

Surprise, delight and incredulity struggled for the mastery in the major's face. He took off his hat and stood bare-headed, and that one little gesture told more plainly than the most passionate protestations could have done, that the old love had been kept a treasured and sacred thing. I think, from the smile on her mouth, as she looked at him, that the same thought came to auntie.

"And you are Hetty! Yes, I know you now," he said.

"You had forgotten the eight years, Major Blake. I knew you from the first."

"And would you really have let me go without a word?"

"Why not? How could I know you would wish to be reminded of old times?"

"Reminded! I have never forgotten. I tried my hardest to forget and couldn't. Although you preferred another"——

"Another! What other?"

"Didn't you marry young Sandys?"

"I have never seen him since."

At this stage of the conversation it struck me that I was de trop. Major Blake, side by side with auntie, was walking slowly homeward, and on reaching a convenient street corner, I went off for a stroll in an opposite direction. When I reached home I found auntie and the Major sitting in the courtyard under the trees. The Major lifted his hat at my approach and said:

"Miss Danvers, your aunt and I are very old friends; indeed, many years ago we were engaged to be married, but an unfortunate misunderstanding separated us. We have lost many happy years, but I hope some still remain to us. I trust we shall have your good wishes."

I looked from one to the other.

"You dear, darling auntie, then you really are going to be married after all? Of course I wish you joy, and Major Blake too, from the very bottom of my heart!"

I don't know how the secret oozed out, but before another day had passed every one in the house knew that the handsome English major had met an old love in the person of the gentle little lady with the sweet smile and the soft gray hair, and that after a separation of eight years they were engaged to be married, and they were accordingly promoted to all the privileges of engaged lovers.

I must pass over the homeward journey and the astonishment of our friends at Fairfield when auntie returned engaged to be married. Some few of them had known Major Blake, but to most of them he was a stranger. Many were the questions and explanations before everything was accounted for to everybody's satisfaction; but it was done at last. And then came the preparation of the trousseau; and at last the happy pair have been made one, and auntie is off to the Isle of Wight to spend her honeymoon. Before going she called me to her room and said:

"Ruth, dear, I am going to give you this little red prayer book as a parting remembrance. You know how I have treasured it, and you won't value it the less, I am sure, for having been so dear to me. And if, when Mr. Right comes, Ruth, you are tempted to be willful or wayward, or to pain a heart that loves you truly, think of your Aunt Hetty, and the faded leaf, for not every mistake in life ends as mine did on Easter Day."

EASTER MORNING.

(By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.)

Easter dawning!
Oh, the glory
And the sweetness
Of the story!
Light from darkness,
Joy from sadness
Ring, oh, ring,
Ye bells, with gladness!

Ring, and send out
Cheerful greeting;
Notes from other
Joy-bells meeting,
Till the whole world,
Filled with wonder,
Sees the clouds
All rent asunder.

Easter beauties!
How they cluster!
Lending fragrance
To their luster.
Emerald verdure,
Buds and flowers,
Hidden deep
Through Lenten hours!

Easter lilies
Smiling faintly,
Tall and slender,
Sweet and saintly;
Snow-white flocks
By nature molded,
Seem they, meek
And all unfolded!

Easter music
Sing, ye dear ones,
Lift your voices,
Far and near ones,
Men and maidens
Join the chorus,
Joy and gladness
Should reign o'er us.

Little children
Sing in gladness,
For your young hearts
Know no sadness;
Not a sorrow
Dims your morning,
Yet you love
The Easter dawning.

Easter dawning!
Oh! the glory
And the sweetness
Of the story!
Light from darkness,
Joy from sadness—
Ring, oh, ring,
Ye bells, with gladness!

Had a Long Nap.

A chick who had just learned to creep
Came out of its shell and said: "Peep!
It is good, I declare,
To breathe the fresh air.
I must have had a long sleep."

Easter to the Unfortunate.

To those who have small satisfaction in this life, whose conditions are those of misery or of dull vacuity, to whom life is a sad mistake and an injustice if it is not to give them further opportunity, fuller expression, larger compensation, the day, if it has any significance at all, stands as the pledge of existence under other conditions, where their cramped and hindered powers can perhaps have fuller scope, and they have at least the hope of that.—George William Curtis.

There is something wrong with the man who goes home from church mad whenever the preaching is aimed squarely at the face of sin.

SOME LATE NEW THINGS.

A new bicycle crank has a V-shaped slot to attach it to the shaft, a bolt extending through the ends of the V to fasten it.

The combination of a bench, ironing-board and step-ladder was recently patented, one of the supports being fitted with steps.

To prevent a cuspidor from tipping over, a new device consists of a wire frame with projecting flanges, in which the cuspidor is placed.

A recently designed shirt has the bosom in two sections, one section being buttoned on the front of the shirt to make it easily removable.

A coliapsible rack for bicycles has the upright portion fixed in a groove at the base so as to slide to one end and fold flat when not in use.

A new design in bicycle tires, invented by a woman, has a large number of solid rubber balls placed close together around the rim of the wheel, no covering being used.

A handy device to use in kindling fires consists of a mass of noncombustible, absorbent material, like asbestos, to contain oil fastened in a wire frame with a handle attached.

The combination of a bicycle stand and mudguard for the rear wheel was recently patented, the wire brace being easily detached from the fabric and turned down to the ground.

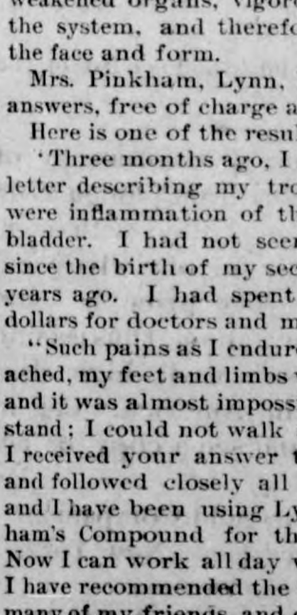
"SHE DRESSES WELL."

But Her Clothes Often Cover a Living Death.

Beauty Is the Shrine of Men's Worship, and Women Vie With Each Other to Make Themselves Attractive.

The remark, "She dresses elegantly," is a very common one in this age of wealth and progress.

Women vie with each other in making themselves attractive, for men admire a stylishly dressed woman.



Good clothes add to the charms of the woman in perfect health, but are ill-befitting those who through ignorance or carelessness have suffered the inroads of female diseases to stamp them as physical wrecks. It is unfortunate, but true, that some physicians allow women to suffer needlessly, because man can only work from theory, and at best only patch up, without removing the cause.

Proof is abundant that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removes the cause, gives strength to the weakened organs, vigorous health to the system, and therefore beauty to the face and form.

Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., gladly answers, free of charge all letters.

Here is one of the results:

"Three months ago, I wrote you a letter describing my troubles, which were inflammation of the womb and bladder. I had not seen a well day since the birth of my second child, 16 years ago. I had spent hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicines.

"Such pains as I endured. My back ached, my feet and limbs were swollen, and it was almost impossible for me to stand; I could not walk any distance. I received your answer to my letter, and followed closely all your advice, and I have been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound for three months. Now I can work all day without pain. I have recommended the Compound to many of my friends, and gladly recommend it to all women in any way afflicted with female troubles."—LYDIA BATIE, 227 Spring St., Greensburg, Pa.

From the Noted Philanthropist and Worker Among the Poor, N. J. Smith, the Founder of the Omaha Rescue Home. This Noble Man Is Spending His Life Among the Unfortunate—Rescuing the Fallen and Helping Those In Distress.

To the Public:

Having had considerable dealings with the Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., and used their remedies with remarkable success, I have no hesitancy in saying that I have the utmost confidence in the reliability of the company and the personal integrity of the doctor, as well as the merit of his great remedies, Dr. Kay's Renovator and Dr. Kay's Lung Balm. In my work among the unfortunate I find many sick and suffering who have not the means to purchase necessary medicine. Dr. B. J. Kay cheerfully offered to supply whatever medicine was needed in such cases free of charge, and through the kindness of the generous doctor I have carried relief to many a poor despondent heart. All persons who send money to this company for any of their remedies will, I am sure, receive honorable treatment and the goods will be sent as promptly as ordered.

Fortune Seeking Emigrants.

Many a poor family that seeks the western wilds in the hope of winning a fortune is preserved from that insidious foe of the emigrant and frontiersman—chills and fever—by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. So effectually does that incomparible medicinal defense fortify the system against the combined influence of a malafious atmosphere and miasma-tainted water, that protected by it the pioneer, the miner or the tourist provided with it, may safely encounter the danger.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 6.—The senate enacted some new and very beneficial legislation in the interest of the purchasers of insurance. It restricts the grounds upon which a company can declare a policy void. Foreign companies can only write business in the state through resident agents and contracts made outside of the state are void. Where a loss is pro rated among several companies all companies are to be held for the full amount of their policy until the loss is settled in full. The valued policy section which passed the house was changed to make the company responsible for the full value of the property at the time of the loss unless it exceeds the face of the policy. Heirs are given two years in which to file proof of death. Consideration of the bill was not completed.

HOUSE.

The house refused to allow legalizing acts to be introduced and refused to reconsider the medical practice act. Representative Brant offered a resolution calling for open sessions of the printing committee with stenographic reports for the press. The bill in relation to common schools was reconsidered and passed. The pharmacy bill also passed.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 7.—Bell's resolution looking to the discharge of a number of committee clerks was laid on the table. The Temple amendment to the railroad bill came up under a special order. The majority and minority reports of the committee to which it was referred were read. The majority report commended the Berry amendment, the essence of which is to legalize the relief departments maintained by railroads and which bars action for damages in case of accepting benefits. The minority report was signed by Garst and Hobart. A motion to substitute the minority for the majority report was argued at length. By a vote of 19 to 28 the senate refused to substitute the minority for the majority report, which affords the members of the relief a few more advantages than they at present enjoy but in effect destroys the entire aim of the Temple amendment.

HOUSE.

Garver offered a substitute for the Brant resolution in relation to holding an open investigation of the printing and binding matter. The revenue bill came up and finally passed. One of the most important amendments to the bill offered from the floor was that of Cornwall, imposing a tax of 5 per cent upon the premiums and assets of certain insurance companies, and another presented by Brant, in the same line. Another amendment requires assessors to fix all property at its cash value, and provides that it shall be assessed at one-fourth of its assessed value for purposes of taxation.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 8.—The attention of the senate was devoted to a consideration of the Berry substitute for the Temple amendment which was offered as the majority report of the railroad committee. Early in the consideration debate was cut off and the substitute adopted by a vote of 25 to 21. A few minor amendments to the railroads laws were adopted and the insurance bill was then taken up and passed, 40 to 2. The building and loan association bill was taken up and it was considered at length without action.

HOUSE.

The numerous senate amendments to the bill pertaining to the executive department were considered, and not more than half were concurred in. The roads and highways bill contained a provision absolving counties from liability by reason of the breaking down of bridges or culverts under the weight of steam threshers. This was knocked out. Reading of the cities and towns bill was begun.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 9.—Senate resumed consideration of the building and loan association bill. The house had included a provision that no member of the executive council who was interested in a building and loan association should act with the council in deciding upon the right of a company to do business. This was stricken out, as was also the right of appeal. The regularity of the adoption of the Berry substitute for the Temple amendment was taken up and after much discussion and explanation and several roll calls, the vote by which all the amendments to the railway bill were adopted was reconsidered and the final vote on the adoption of these amendments set for next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. This is for the purpose of giving the senators who voted under a misapprehension a chance to make a straight record. An amendment to the building and loan bill limiting the rate of interest which such associations can charge to 12 per cent on judgments entered against borrowers of building and loan associations on the net amount received by the borrower, was adopted.

HOUSE.

House again took up the bill on cities and towns. A compromise on the division of the bridge fund was reached in an amendment by Dowell that cities have control of such tax only as is levied and raised upon property lying within city limits. The bill passed with very few changes.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 10.—The senate passed the military bill with only slight changes from the house bill. The bill contains two entirely new sections, one of which cuts down the number of officers on the governor's staff and the other provides for the establishment of a medical department and staff in connection with the National Guard. The crimes and punishments bill was taken up and read, a few minor committee amendments being adopted. Senator Berry offered an amendment to strike out the death penalty, but the resolution was defeated. Henderson offered an amendment making it a misdemeanor for any public officer to accept free passes on railroads, franking privilege or discrimination in passenger, telegraph, or telephone rates from any person, joint stock association or corporation, or make use of it himself or in connection with another. Laid over.

HOUSE.

House passed the bill in relation to regents and trustees with only slight changes. The house then took up the code publication bill, merely discussing it and referring it to the judiciary committee to pass upon its legal status.

The United States Supreme Court to the pools: "Dry up!"

Too many members of the Kentucky legislature up and die at critical times.

The New York newspapers need sense or something like it worse than they need censors.

Since everybody seems to be in favor of using convict labor in improving the public highways why isn't it done?

Mr. Cleveland will be at liberty to shoot ducks anywhere in the purlieus of Princeton, but he must not camp on the campus.

While our senate was busily engaged in rejecting the arbitration treaty England's Camperdown was shelling Christian insurgents struggling for liberty.

The valued Washington Post thinks putting sausage on the free list would be protection to the American dog. Would putting ham on the free list be protection to the American actor?

A very wealthy man of New York recently said that the sacrifices made by capitalists in recent years in order that their employes might not suffer hardship would amount in the aggregate to an enormous sum. A manufacturing concern with which he is associated, he said, has suffered to the extent of a little more than one hundred thousand dollars from the determination of himself and his associates to keep their workingmen employed.

Miss Shillaber, of Boston, following the example of many others in the field of literature, is about to go upon the platform with reminiscences of her father's life and readings from his writings. Such a venture should be a great success, for there are many who remember with affectionate pleasure the sayings of Mrs. Partington, the delightful American Mrs. Malprop, which Mr. B. P. Shillaber created. Mrs. Partington's humor was delightfully refreshing and the reader soon learned to love her for her goodness of heart as well as for her solecisms. While Mr. Shillaber's fame grew out of his creation of Mrs. Partington, he was a writer of stories which pleased the readers of a generation ago with their quiet sketches of character, their pathos, and their pure and elevated tone.

United States Consul Norris, at Ghent, has reported an interesting fact to the State Department regarding the manufacture of incandescent lamps. It is that the most expensive product in the world is the charcoal thread employed in the lamps to furnish the light. This will be interesting news to the people who use electric light nightly without being cognizant of such a proximity of wealth. It is, for the most part, manufactured at Paris and comes from the hands of an artist. This product is sold at wholesale by the gramme, and, reducing this price to the basis of pounds, it is easily found that the filaments for lamps of twenty candle-power are worth $8,000 per pound, and for the lamps of thirty candle-power the fabulous sum of $12,000 per pound. The former have a diameter of twenty-thousandths of one millimeter, or 7,874-ten-millionths, and the latter less than one-fifth of this size.

Secretary Sherman has sent to the Senate a note received from Mr. Botassi, Consul General of Greece at New York, transmitting a cablegram from the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs, in acknowledgment of the resolution agreed to by the Senate before the expiration of the last session, expressing sympathy with the Cretan revolutionists. The cablegram is as follows: "To the United States Senate: The warm thanks of the Greek nation, as well as of the government of Greece, are due for the expression of its sympathies, which are a most valuable assistance to us, toward the accomplishment of our national aspirations." The Consul General adds on his own behalf that the resolution has made a most favorable impression on the Greeks in the United States, "who, while enjoying the blessings of liberty in this country, under her liberal laws, are in hearty sympathy with their motherland in her efforts to free their oppressed brethren."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

HE FEARED DISGRACE.

Dr. J. A. Scroggs, of Keokuk, Leaves for Parts Unknown.

KEOKUK, April 15.—Dr. J. A. Scroggs, member of the state board of medical examiners and secretary of the Keokuk Medical college, disappeared recently from his home in Keokuk. He was last heard from at St. Paul, from which place he wrote that he would have killed himself had he been compelled to remain in Keokuk and face the disgrace he imagined was upon him. He was short some $2,300 in his accounts with the college, but the faculty had arranged a satisfactory settlement and had no intention of prosecuting him or giving the matter publicity, as they were convinced no criminal intention existed. It is believed that the doctor's mind is unbalanced. No other explanation can be given for his strange conduct. He is supposed to have started for Alaska or the western mining regions.

HEAVY DAMAGES ASKED.

Welsbach People Think Their Patents Have Been Infringed.

KEOKUK, April 18.—Alleging an infringement of the patent on their incandescent gas light, the Welsbach Light company, of Gloucester, N. J., to-day began suit in the federal court against the Burlington Gas and Fuel company, asking damages in the sum of $10,000 and injunction from further use of the Welsbach patent.

Marshal Brady, having notified Judge Woolson of the federal court, that insufficient funds are on hand to pay the jurors for the Keokuk and Des Moines terms, the judge notified the attorney general he had dismissed the jurors summoned to appear, and would omit jury cases unless the government provided funds to pay the jurors.

RELIEF FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS.

Governor Appealed to for Aid by Sufferers in Louisa County.

DES MOINES, April 17.—M. H. King appeared before Governor Drake in behalf of the flood sufferers of Louisa county, and asked that steps be taken for their relief. Many of the sufferers are sub-contractors and laborers and their families, who were employed in the government work in the vicinity of Oakville and Keithsburg, in the construction of which Mr. King was interested as a contractor. At their request he interceded for them with the governer. Governor Drake assured Mr. King he would intercede with the secretary of war and endeavor to obtain the needed relief.

WILL STAMP IT OUT.

Government Takes Steps Looking to the Extermination of Hog Cholera.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The agricultural department has taken steps looking to the extermination of the hog cholera. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has written the governors of Iowa and Tennessee asking the co-operation in the experiment to determine how economically to stamp out the malady. If they accede to his request the department will send representatives of the bureau of animal industry to one or two counties in each state most affected.

Seven Women and Two Boys Arrested.

BURLINGTON, April 17.—Officers arrested Bert Dupree, aged 16; Walter Calhoun, aged 15; Mrs. Dora Anderson, Mrs. Huthinson, Mrs. White, Mrs. Sinclair, Mrs. Crowell, Mrs. Powell, and Mrs. Hendricks, all charged with grand larceny and the receiving of stolen goods. The property stolen consists of nearly $1,000 worth of old family silver owned by Mr. Frank Chamberlain, manager of the opera house. The boys stole the goods and the women bought it. The case looks dark for all concerned. Many recent burglaries are also traced to the boys.

Charles Budd Leads Them All.

ATCHISON, Kansas, April 18.—At the Erhardt shooting tournament some very good averages were made. Out of 160 targets, C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, and R. O. Heikes, of Dayton, O., broke 152 each; W. S. Duer, Hastings, Neb., 149; Fred Gilbert, Spirit Lake, Ia., 147; Charles Grimm, Clear Lake, Ia., 146, and J. W. Barre, Louisiana, Mo., 146. Budd got in on the side purse for the five high runs on each day of the shooting and made the best average.

Young Wife Drowns Herself.

MT. AYR, April 17.—Mrs. James Hickey, who lived with her husband some five miles east of Mt. Ayr, committed suicide by drowning in a small pond of water near her home. When found by her husband and father she was dead, and the water was so shallow that her clothing was floating on the surface of the water, the pond not being deep enough to conceal them. The deceased was a bride of only a few weeks. There is no cause known for her actions.

A Daylight Burglary.

INDEPENDENCE, April 17.—The safe in the lumber office of Blamer & Wackerbath was blown open by tramps in broad daylight and $260 taken. One was captured and the other will probably be apprehended.

NEW TESTIMONY GIVEN.

Elmer Daugherty Allowed His Tongue to Run Too Fast.

CENTERVILLE, April 17.—The only new evidence that has yet come out in the Daugherty murder trial, now in progress here, is that of Miss Minnie Henry, who testified to having a conversation with Daugherty just before the grand jury set, in which he asked her if she had been subpoenaed. She said that she had and was sorry, as she did not want to testify. Witness said that he told her that that didn't matter; they would not do anything with him, as he had too much money to go the penitentiary. This created some little furor in the ranks of the defense and a motion was made to strike out the evidence, but it was overruled.

DR. SCROGGS HEARD FROM.

Telegraphs That He Will Return Home to Keokuk.

KEOKUK, April 19.—Mrs. Scroggs received a telegram from her husband Dr. J. A. Scroggs, dated at Spokane Wash., saying that he will leave for home at once. Dr. Scroggs, who is a member of the state board of medical examiners, and secretary-treasurer of the Keokuk Medical College, disappeared April 8, going north. The reason for his disappearance was a shortage in his accounts with the college. No explanation is contained in the telegram, which caused almost as great a sensation as the news of his defalcation and disappearance, as few expected to ever hear of him again.

Von Dresky is Acquitted.

MUSCATINE, April 19.—The jury in the Von Dresky conspiracy case returned a verdict of not guilty. There was no direct evidence in the case, it being wholly circumstantial, and mainly based on the declarations of the defendant, which the jury seemed to have regarded as made loosely and inconsiderately. The verdict is a general surprise. Von Dresky was charged with conspiracy in connection with the Mahin dynamite outrage.

Des Moines Doctor Arrested.

DES MOINES, April 16.—Dr. J. W. Kime, editor of the Iowa Medical Journal and a member of the faculty of the Drake Medical school, has been arrested on the charge of sending obscene matter through the mails.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Theodore Schreiner, next to Grand Secretary T. S. Parvin the most widely known Mason of Iowa, died a few days ago in Mexico.

Ex-Secretary of State W. M. McFarland fell on the steps of his residence at Des Moines recently and sustained serious injuries, suffering a bad scalp wound just behind the right ear and the base of the skull. He is threatened with congestion of the brain.

The famous and sensational Brooks-Seevers bastardy case, on trial at Oskaloosa has been finally settled—so far as the district court is concerned—Judge McCoy allowing Mrs. Brooks $2,160 for the support of the twin babies. The suit was for $10,000.

At Fairmont, Minn., recently Judge Quinn sentenced to hang, August 12, Louis Kellihan, of Mason City, Iowa. Kellihan and his brother robbed a bank at Sherburne, in November, and killed two men. They fled on bicycles and were caught three days later. The brother was killed at the capture.

Fort Dodge dispatch: Farmers in this section report the reappearance of the army worm, which is crawling out from under dead grass, fences and brush heaps. Last year the worm was quite plentiful in this and other parts of the state for a few weeks about harvest time, and did considerable damage in fields where it preceded the farmer's reaper. Its principal mission then, however, seemed to be to lay its eggs, and its early appearance this year is the cause of considerable worry. Those who have studied the movements of the worm in other states say that the second year is its destructive year, when it marches in countless numbers for many miles, destroying every green thing in its path. Some think that it may turn into a moth and fly away to some other section before the crops begin to grow.

Guernsey dispatch: Later developments in the Kirker poisoning case disclose the fact that Mrs. Kirker was poisoned with strychnine. The coroner took the stomach, heart, liver and one kidney to be analyzed. The analysis was given to the jury. Only one five-hundredth grain of strychnine was found in the stomach, but the glands examined were rank with the poison. The jury returned a verdict of poison by strychnine and accused Kirker of placing the poison in the medicine. The poisoning of Mrs. Kirker was particularly atrocious. Kirker had apparently become tired of his wife and treated her cruelly. Recently in a family quarrel he struck her down, terribly injuring her. Later, when her injuries did not prove fatal, he is believed to have administered poison. Advices from Montezuma bring the news that Kirker has just died there, where he was being treated for cancer of the stomach.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN CRETE.

PARIS, April 13.—A telegram from Larissa says that the presidents of the Greek chamber of deputies and the national federation, together with a number of Greek deputies, have arrived there, and that everything indicates that a great crisis is at hand.

LARISSA, April 13.—The invaders continue to block Baltino. It is reported that Turkish reinforcements are now enroute for Disgata. The remainder of the insurgents have taken up strong positions near the mountains. The latest details at hand are that the invaders dynamited the Turks opposite Phonika and Perliangia. There has been an outbreak of small pox among the Turks, and many deaths are reported at Damasi.

LONDON, April 14.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish version of the fighting at Baltino has been published in the newspaper Ikdam, which states that 5,000 Greek troops were allowed to attack the place. Their retreat was then cut off and the Greeks were finally worsted, leaving 2,000 dead and dying upon the field. The Ikdam adds: "Out of pure magnanimity the Turks took no prisoners."

ST. PETERSBURG, April 14.—The Novo Vremya declares that all coercion of Greece by the powers will cease as soon as war is declared. Otherwise it would appear like a pro-Turkish intervention.

VIENNA, April 15.—The best informed diplomats here regard war as inevitable. They say the strain cannot much longer be borne by either Turkey or Greece, and that the time has passed for the powers to attempt to intervene. In view of the dangerous position assumed by Greece, the question is reiterated, "Where does she count upon some power coming to her support at the crucial moment?"

LARISSA, April 16.—There is no truth in the Turkish reports that the Greek "irregulars" were driven out of Macedonia. Some of the members were unable to keep up with the main body and returned into Greek territory, but the main force continues successful operations against the Turks. This body captured Nipur, north of Baltino, and advanced to Pigavitza, where there is an important bridge across the mountain torrent. Chief Davelis then dispatched detachments of Italians to the left, who captured the important strategic position, Zlovof, and at once began fortifying it against an attack from the Turks. At the same time another column was dispatched to the right, and after a sharp fight captured Sitovon, another strategic position of importance. The Greek "irregulars" now hold all four roads leading from the Thessalian frontier in the direction of Grevena and have vastly improved the Greeks' strategic position for the commencement of hostilities.

LONDON, April 17.—A dispatch to the Daily Chronicle says that the Turks have reoccupied Baltino and other stations. Their sentries fire on every one trying to cross the frontier.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 19.—The council of ministers, after a session at the palace, declared that war had broken out on the frontier, owing to the incursion by the Greeks on Turkish territory, and Edham Pasha, the Turkish military commander, was ordered to assume the offensive.

LONDON, April 18.—The Greco-Turkish situation is understood here to be substantially as follows: War has not been officially declared between Turkey and Greece, but it has been officially declared to "have broken out." It is considered in London that war between Turkey and Greece has actually begun. Turkish declarations that war has "broken out" being merely for the purpose of diplomatically putting the cause of the war on the kingdom of Greece.

WOOL GROWERS' WANTS.

Western Senators Firm for a Change in the Dingley Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Western senators, after several conferences, have reached an agreement to stand together for important changes in the wool schedule of the Dingley bill. The senators most prominently identified with the movement are Messrs. Mantle, Carter, Shoup, Warren and Burrows. They have not only agreed upon a line of amendments, but have decided to insist on their inclusion in the bill. The meetings held have also been attended by many prominent wool growers.

Big Crevasse in the Levee.

VICKSBURG, April 19.—The crevasse at Biggs's levee, four miles below Delta, La., is nearly a mile wide at this hour, and the roaring torrent is spreading over the lowlands of Madison parish with startling rapidity. This is unquestionably the most destructive break that has yet occurred, and the loss to property and live stock will be enormous.

NEW POLICY OF POPULISTS.

They Will Seek to Compel Republicans to Maintain a Quorum.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The populist members of the house have decided to undertake the policy of forcing the republicans to keep a quorum in the city. Without a quorum, to carry motions to adjourn for two days, it will be necessary for the house to meet every day. After an informal conference of the populists, letters were sent to those of their own party who are absent from the city, urging them to return at once. There are twenty-two populists in the house, and Mr. Simpson asserts that he expects enough democrats will work with them to make an effective minority. Speaker Reed is urging republican members not to leave the city.

AWFUL TRAGEDY.

Man, Woman and Daughter Murdered and House Set on Fire.

PASCOAG, R. I., April 16.—A horrible tragedy was enacted at the home of Edward Reynolds, near the town of Oakland. Mrs. Reynolds, her husband and an adopted daughter, Servilla, were brutally murdered, and the house was then set on fire, presumably to cover the crime. Martin Mowry, the hired man employed by Reynolds, who is undoubtedly a raving maniac, was found hiding in a barn near Oakland and was at once placed under arrest. The bodies were horribly mutilated. Neighbors arrived in time to quench the flames.

BOLD BANK ROBBERS.

Cashier Murdered and All the Cash in the Vault Taken.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H. April 17.—While resisting the entry of two desperate and determined robbers, and during a heroic but futile struggle to protect $150,000 or more of money and securities in the compartments of the open vault of the Great Falls National Bank of Somerworth, Cashier Joseph A. Stickney was struck down and brutally murdered in broad daylight near the desk which he had occupied for years. The robbers then secured more than $6,000 in cash and escaped.

DEPENDS ON DAY.

President Will Act Upon His Recommendations Regarding Cuba.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—It is semi officially announced that nothing new need be expected in the Cuban situation till Personal Representative Day shall have gone to Cuba, returned, and made his report to McKinley. Upon that report the president will act. If the personal representative advises that the belligerency of the Cubans be recognized it is believed by the president's close friends that such recognition will be forthcoming.

Dr. Hunter Indicted.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 19.—The grand jury has returned true bills against Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, republican candidate for United States senator; ex-Congressman John H. Wilson, eleventh district, Hon. E. T. Franks, second district; Noel Gaines and his brother-in-law, Thomas Tanner. The indictments are for conspiracy to bribe. All the accused parties are republicans except Gaines and Tanner. This action is regarded as fatal to Hunter's prospects. The feeling is very bitter.

German Chancellor Resigns.

BERLIN, April 19.—Prince Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, recently forwarded his resignation to Emperor William. As reasons animating him to resign, Prince Hohenlohe urges his inability to carry out his solemn promise to submit to the reichstag and the diet two bills, one regulating political meetings upon a more liberal basis, and the other reforming the procedur of military trials.

BREVITIES.

The New York assembly passed the Greater New York charter bill over Mayor Strong's veto by a vote of 106 to 32.

The president has recently appointed Senator Edward O. Wolcott, of Colorado; Hon. Charles J. Paine, of Boston, Mass., and ex-Vice President Adlai Stevenson, as commissioners to an international monetary conference. The appointments are made under the act approved March 3, last, "for the promotion of an international agreement for bimetallism." It is authoritively stated that the commission will not go abroad before May 1.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has recently issued orders for the purchase by his department of several hundred pounds of the finest creamery butter made in Iowa, Illinois and one or two other states and for its shipment to England, where it is to be sold by the agent of the United States. This is to be repeated from time to time with an idea to learning the English taste relative to butter and ultimately creating a market there for our butter. England now gets most of her butter from Denmark.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"A RESURRECTION MISTAKE" EASTER SUNDAY SUBJECT.

From the Text: "She, Supposing Him to Be the Gardener, Saith Unto Him: Tell Me Where Thou Hast Laid Him and I Will Take Him Away"—John 20:15.

HERE are Mary Magdalen and Christ, just after his resurrection. For four thousand years a grim and ghastly tyrant had been killing people and dragging them into his cold palace. He had a passion for human skulls. For forty centuries he had been unhindered in his work. He had taken down kings and queens and conquerors, and those without fame. In that cold palace there were shelves of skulls, and pillars of skulls, and altars of skulls, and even the chalices at the table were made of bleached skulls. To the skeleton of Abel had been added the skeleton of all the ages, and no one had disputed his right until one good Friday, about eighteen hundred and sixty-seven years ago, as near as I can calculate it, a mighty stranger came to the door of that awful place, rolled back the door, and went in, and seizing the tyrant threw him to the pavement and put upon the tyrant's neck the heel of triumph.

Then the mighty stranger, exploring all the ghastly furniture of the place, and walking through the labyrinths, and opening the dark cellars of mystery, and tarrying under a roof the ribs of which were made of human bones—tarrying for two nights and a day, the nights very dark and the day very dismal, he seized the two chief pillars of that awful palace and rocked them until it began to fall, and then laying hold of the ponderous front gate hoisted it from its hinges, and marched forth crying, "I am the Resurrection!" That event we celebrate this Easter morn, Handelian and Beethovean miracles of sound added to this floral decoration which has set the place abloom.

There are three or four things which the world and the church have not noticed in regard to the resurrection of Christ. First, our Lord in the gardener's attire. Mary Magdalen, grief-struck, stands by the rifled sarcophagus of Christ, and turns around, hoping she can find the track of the sacrilegious resurrectionist who has despoiled the grave, and she finds some one in working apparel come forth as if to water the flowers, or uproot the weeds from the garden, or to set reclimbing the fallen vine—some one in working apparel, his garments perhaps having the sign of the dust and dirt of the occupation.

Mary Magdalen, on her face the rain of a fresh shower of weeping, turns to this workman, and charges him with the desecration of the tomb, when lo! the stranger responds, flinging his whole soul into one word which trembles with all the sweetest rhythm of earth and heaven, saying, "Mary!" In that peculiarity of accentuation all the incognito fell off, and she found that instead of talking with an humble gardener of Asia Minor, she was talking with Him who owns all the hanging gardens of heaven. Constellations the clusters of forget-me-nots, the sunflower the chief of all, the morning sky and the midnight aurora, flaring terraces of beauty, blazing like a summer wall with coronation roses and giants of battle. Blessed and glorious mistake of Mary Magdalen. "She supposing him to be the gardener." What does that mean? It means that we have an every-day Christ for every-day work in every-day apparel. Not on Sabbath morning in our most seemly apparel are we more attractive to Christ than we are in our every-day work dress, managing our merchandise, smiting our anvil, ploughing our field, tending the flying shuttles, mending the garments for our household, providing food for our families, or toiling with weary pen, or weary pencil, or weary chisel. A working-day Christ in working-day apparel for us in our every-day toil. Put it into the highest strain of this Easter anthem, "Supposing him to be the gardener."

If Christ had appeared at daybreak with a crown upon his head, that would have seemed to suggest especial sympathy for monarchs; if Christ had appeared in chain of gold and with robe bediamonded, that would have seemed to be especial sympathy for the affluent; if Christ had appeared with soldier's sash and sword dangling at his side, that would have seemed to imply especial sympathy for warriors; but when I find Christ in gardener's habit, then I spell it out that he has hearty and pathetic understanding with every-day work, and every-day anxiety, and every-day fatigue.

Roll it down in comfort all through these aisles. A working-day Christ in working-day apparel. Tell it in the darkest corridor of the mountain to the poor miner. Tell it to the factory maid in most unventilated establishment at Lowell or Lancaster. Tell it to the clearer of roughest new ground in the western wilderness. Tell it to the sewing woman, a stitch in the side for every stitch in the garment, some of their cruel employers having no right to think that they will get through the door of heaven any more than they could through the eye of a broken needle which has just dropped on the bare floor from the pricked and bleeding fingers of the consumptive sewing-girl. Away with your talk about hypostatic union, and soteriology of the Council of Trent, and the metaphysics of religion which would freeze practical Christianity out of the world; but pass along the gardener's coat to all nations that they may touch the hem of it and feel the thrill of the Christly brotherhood. Not supposing the man to be Caesar, not supposing him to be Socrates, but "supposing him to be the gardener."

Oh, that is what helped Joseph Wedgwood, toiling amid the heat and the dust of the potteries, until he could make for Queen Charlotte the first royal table service of English manufacture. That was what helped James Watt, scoffed at and caricatured, until he could put on wheels the thunderbolt of power which roars by day and night in every furnace of the locomotive engines of America. That is what helped Hugh Miller, toiling amid the quarries of Cromarty, until every rock became to him a volume of the world's biography, and he found the footsteps of the Creator in the old red sandstone. Oh, the world wants a Christ for the office, a Christ for the kitchen, a Christ for the shop, a Christ for the banking-house, a Christ for the garden, while spading and planting and irrigating the territory. Oh, of course, we want to see Christ at last in royal robe and bediamoned, a celestial equestrian mounting the white horse, but from this Easter of 1897 to our last Easter on earth we most need to see Christ as Mary Magdalen saw him at the daybreak, "supposing him to be a gardener."

Another thing which the church and the world have not noticed in regard to the resurrection of Christ is that he made his first post-mortem appearance to one who had been the seven-deviled Mary Magdalen. One would have supposed he would have made his first posthumous appearance to a woman who had always been illustrious for goodness. There are saintly women who have always been saintly, saintly in girlhood, saintly in infancy, always saintly. In nearly all our families there have been saintly aunts. In my family circle it was aunt Phebe; in yours saintly aunt Martha or saintly aunt Ruth. One always saintly. But not so with the one spoken of in the text.

While you are not to confound her with the repugnant courtesan who had made her long locks do the work of towel at Christ's footwashing, you are not to forget that she was exorcised of seven devils. What a capital of demonology she must have been. What a chorus of all diabolism. Seven devils—two for the eyes, and two for the hands, and two for the feet, and one for the tongue. Seven devils. Yet all these are extirpated, and now she is as good as once she was bad, and Christ honors her with the first posthumous appearance? What doth that mean? * * *

There is a man seven-deviled—devil of avarice, devil of pride, devil of hate, devil of indolence, devil of falsehood, devil of strong drink, devil of impurity. God can take them all away, seven or seventy. I rode over the new cantilever bridge that spans Niagara—a bridge 900 feet long, 850 feet of chasm from bluff to bluff. I passed over it without anxiety. Why? Because twenty-two locomotives and twenty-two cars laden with gravel had tested the bridge, thousands of people standing on the Canadian side, thousands standing on the American side to applaud the achievement. And however long the train of our immortal interests may be we are to remember that God's bridge of mercy spanning the chasm of sin has been fully tested by the awful tonage of all the pardoned sin of all ages, church militant standing on one bank, church triumphant standing on the other bank. Oh, it was to the seven-deviled Mary that Christ made His first post-mortem appearance.

There is another thing that the world and the church have not observed in regard to this resurrection, and that is, it was the morning twilight.

If the chronometer had been invented and Mary had as good a watch as some of the Marys of our time have, she would have found it was about half-past 5 o'clock a. m. Matthew says it was in the dawn. Mark says it was at the sunrising; Luke says it was very early in the morning; John says it was while it was yet dark. In other words, it was twilight. That was the o'clock at which Mary Magdalen mistook Christ for the gardener. What does that mean? It means there are shadows over the grave unlifted, shadows of mystery that are hovering. Mary stooped down and tried to look to the other end of the crypt. She gave hysteric outcry. She could not see to the other end of the crypt. Neither can you see to the other end of the grave of your dead. Neither can we see to the other end of our grave. Oh, if there were shadows over the family plot belonging to Joseph of Arimathea, is it strange that there should be some shadows over our family lot? Easter dawn, not Easter noon.

Shadow of unanswered question! Why were they taken away from us? why were they ever given to us if they were to be taken so soon? why were they taken so suddenly? why could they not have uttered some farewell words? why? A short question, but a whole crucifixion of agony in it. Why? Shadow on the graves of good men and women who seemed to die before their work was done. Shadow on all the graves of children because we ask ourselves why so beautiful a craft launched at all if it was to be wrecked one mile outside of the harbor? But what did Mary Magdalen have to do in order to get more light on that grave? She had only to wait. After a while the Easter sun rolled up, and the whole place was flooded with light. What have you and I to do in order to get more light on our own graves and light upon the graves of our dear loved ones? Only to wait.

After Christ's interment every cellular tissue broke down, and nerve and artery and brain were a physiological wreck, and yet he comes up swarthy, rubicund and well. When I see after such mortuary silence such radiant appearance, that settles it that whatever should become of the bodies of our Christian dead, they are going to come up, the nerves restrung, the optic nerve reillumined, the ear drum a-vibrate, the whole body lifted up, without its weakness and worldly uses for which there is no resurrection. Come, is it not almost time for us to go out to meet our reanimated dead? Can you not hear the lifting of the rusted latch?

Oh, the glorious thought, the glorious consolation of this subject when I find Christ coming up without any of the lacerations, for you must remember He was lacerated and wounded fearfully in the crucifixion—coming up without one. What does that make me think? That the grave will get nothing of us except our wounds and imperfections. Christ went into the grave exhausted and bloodless. All the currents of His life had poured out from His wounds. He had lived a life of trouble, sorrow, and privation, and then He died a lingering death. His entire body hung on four spikes. No invalid of twenty years' suffering ever went into the grave so white and ghastly and broken down as Christ, and yet here He comes up so rubicund and robust she supposed Him to be the gardener.

Ah! all the side-aches, and the head-aches, and the back-aches, and the leg-aches, and the heart-aches we will leave where Christ left His. The ear will come up without its heaviness, the eye will come up without its dimness, the lungs will come up without oppressed respiration. Oh, what races we will run when we become immortal athletes! Oh, what circuits we will take when all earthly imperfections subtracted and all celestial velocities added we shall set up our residence in that city which, though vaster than all the cities of this world, shall never have one obsequy!

Standing this morning round the shattered masonry of our Lord's tomb, I point you to a world without hearse, without muffled drum, without tumulus, without catafalque, and without a tear. Amid all the cathedrals of the blessed no longer the "Dead March in Saul," but whole libretti of "Hallelujah Chorus." Oh, put trumpet to lip and finger to key, and loving forehead against the bosom of a risen Christ. Hallelujah, Amen. Hallelujah, Amen!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

The Junior Society of Christian Endeavor was thirteen years old on March 27. On March 20 there were enrolled on Secretary Baer's books 11,537 societies, with 346,110 members. The first society was organized in Tabor, Iowa, by Rev. John W. Cowan. The first signer of the Junior pledge is now a clergyman.

"She hath done what she could." The members of the Christian Endeavor society in the Indiana state prison at Michigan City have no money to contribute toward state Christian Endeavor work, but the other day the state treasurer received from this society fifty-two stamped envelopes. One of these envelopes is issued to each prisoner every two weeks and an extra one is given instead of a ration of tobacco. By abstaining from the luxury of correspondence, and from the use of tobacco, the men were enabled to fulfill their pledge.

An endeavor after apostolic fashion is recorded of a native Christian Endeavor society in Shaingay, West Africa. The young men of the society set out, two by two, to preach the gospel throughout all their district, a region forty by seventy miles in extent. They held 238 services and reached 4,572 hearers, and all without a penny of expense. The young men had many interesting experiences. One of them philosophically remarked, when deterred from crossing a river by the alligators in the stream, "The Lord sent us to preach the gospel, not to feed these fellows."

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 12.—The bill on crimes and punishments was taken up and the house amendment prohibiting cousins from marrying was stricken out. Amendments preventing Sunday base ball or foot ball and the exhibition of kinetoscope pictures of prize fights was adopted.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 13.—Bill relating to crimes was again taken up. The chapter on offenses against public health was amended to make it a crime for a person having cows for the purpose of producing milk for sale to stable them in an unhealthy place. Bull thistles were excluded from the kinds of thistles which must be destroyed under penalty. The bill was then laid aside and the senate voted to insist on its amendment to the judiciary bill making the office of supreme court appointive. House amendments to fish and game bill were concurred in. The senate voted to reconsider the vote by which the senate passed the building and loan bill. It was only slightly amended and then passed. Bill relating to criminal procedure was again taken up and senate also refused to concur in the house amendment providing against the invasion or organization of bands of men like Kelley's army.

HOUSE.

The horticultural bill was passed without argument, as was also the library bill. An amendment to reduce the salary of the librarian from $1,200 to $1,000 per year was defeated and the old law passed. Merriam presented a bill making it the duty of the executive council to compel a settlement of all debts and credits between the state and its officers annually or at any time at its discretion. It also provides that the executive council shall publish annually as soon after January 1st as is convenient an itemized statement of all moneys paid out by the state treasurer. Said report shall be so arranged as to show the itemized cost of each department or office of the state, of each state institution, and the disposition by items of all state funds and supplies. House refused to concur in the senate amendment cutting down the scope of the census.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 15.—The senate took up the banking bill. A number of important amendment were offered and it was laid over till tomorrow. The senate passed a bill abolishing the office of state oil inspector and placing the inspection of oils in this state under the supervision of the state board of health. The fourteen deputy inspectors who are now appointed by the oil inspector are to be appointed by the governor. The salary of the physician of the Anamosa penitentiary was restored to $100 a month. The house had cut it down to $75. The per capita allowance of the Anamosa penitentiary was reduced from $10 to $9.50.

HOUSE.

The report of the Funk investigating committee was adopted unanimously. The house then took up the railroad bill and after concurring in several senate amendments refused, by a vote of 68 to 19 to concur in the Berry substitute for the Temple amendment. The manufacturing bill was made a special order for next Wednesday.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 16.—Private banks will not be examined or required to report to the auditor of state. The senate so voted, 33 to 18. The house had already voted that way. But the Healy amendment that all corporations doing a banking business must comply, in all important particulars, with the banking law, was adopted. The senate stood by the Berry substitute for Temple amendment by a viva voce vote, without opposition, and a conference committee was appointed. The bill relating to the editing, printing, annotating, publishing and distribution of the code passed. The bill provides for the state publishing its own code, for getting out its own annotations, for copyrighting the annotations and arrangement, for the prohibition of any private publication issuing prior to the state's edition coming out, and for the state printer and binder to do the work.

HOUSE.

Representatives Funk, Cornwall, Wood, Baker and Byington were delegated to act as a commitee to draw up a bill embodying such economies in the state as suggested by the Funk investigating committee's report. The house had the insurance bill before it, concurring in nearly all the senate amendments. The senate substitute for the Blanchard anti-combine law was not accepted. The senate amendment allowing foreign accident insurance companies having $100,000 capital and $100,000 surplus to do business in Iowa was rejected.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 17.—Bill relating to construction and operation of telegraph and telephone companies passed without material amendments. Bill in relation to notes and bills was taken up and a substitute for the house bill passed. The old law was re-enacted about word for word.

HOUSE.

The Merriam bill requiring a more careful system in the different departments of state passed. House declined to concur in the senate amendment to the building and loan bill which denies the right of appeal from the decision of the executive council.

Plague Decreases in Bombay.

BOMBAY, April 17.—There has been a great decrease in the virulence of the plague. There were only 390 cases and 194 deaths in the city last week, against 360 cases and 323 deaths in the preceding week.

Everybody Can Have Strawberries.

J. L. Todd, of Atlantic, Iowa, one of the largest strawberry growers in the United States, who has several million plants to sell, will send to any readers of this paper, express prepaid, during April and May, 100 choice strawberry plants, 25 each of 4 best and most reliable kinds, for only $1.00. For a club of three he will send 10 each or 30 extra plants of a new and valuable kind. Cut this out and send with your order and he will guarantee you to receive the finest lot of plants you ever saw. Mr. Todd is a well known nurseryman and perfectly reliable. Besides he will send you his 40-page book telling how to plant and raise them and other valuable information.

Two Remarkable Statements from Anamosa, Iowa.

From the Eureka, Anamosa, Iowa.

A reporter of the Anamosa Eureka called upon Mr. S. Wm. Walton, the popular marble man, to inquire as to the success he had had in the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, having known that Mr. Walton's wife had been ill for several years and for the last year had improved rapidly and was able to be around the house and attend to her own household duties. Mr. Walton made the following statement:

"Yes, Mr. Lake, you have known me for nearly fifteen years, and, of course, know I am an Englishman. My wife has been in poor health for years until recently, having suffered from a cancerous growth, which she had removed. The operation left her with shattered nerves, frequent headaches, her bowels constipated and her system greatly run down. We expected her recovery would be very doubtful, and you remember you mentioned in the Eureka that she could not live. The physicians attended her, and at last we tried all kinds of medicines, until finally I sent for a package of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She began taking them and the result was phenomenal. The effects of them could be seen before the first package was gone. They regulated her bowels, the headache disappeared, and her system was generally toned up, and at present we would just as soon think of being without butter in the house as without Pink Pills. My wife not only takes them, but I take them and all of my children take them.

"You know I travel a good deal looking up business, and when away from home if I get a bad headache or feel bad from being constipated, or from rheumatic pain, caused by riding in the country, I go to the nearest drug store and get a package of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and never find it necessary to take all of one package before I feel as good as new. We have had as high as fourteen boxes of them in the house at one time. I have recommended them to a number of my English friends and others, all of whom tell me the pills have done as well for them as they do for me. Yes, we continue to keep them on hand for immediate use."

(Signed.) S. WM. WALTON.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence this 6th day of April, 1896.

C. M. BROWN, Justice of the Peace.

Another remarkable endorsement is the case of Mrs. C. R. Bell, wife of the popular tinsmith, in the employ of J. G. Cudworth & Co., the leading hardware merchants of Jones County. Mrs. Bell is about thirty-five years old, and for the last twenty years or more has been terribly afflicted with an almost unbearable headache. It was not a continuous ache, but came on periodically, and when she had one of these spells her sufferings were intense.

She tried everything she saw advertised after exhausting the doctor's treatment, and finally thought she would try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, having seen them highly advertised. She procured a box, and when she felt the symptoms of returning headache she began the use of the pills and the result has been absolutely wonderful. Her headache is cured and she and her husband are loud in the praise of Pink Pills and keep them constantly on hand.

Mr. Bell says there is no question whatever but that these pills are the best thing for headache he has ever tried. Mrs. Bell says she could not think of being without them in the house under any circumstances. Mrs. Bell's case of headache was well known by all her neighbors owing to its severity, and her cure is equally well known. Mrs. Bell says she will be glad to send particulars regarding her case to anyone desiring them.

On the 18th day of April, appeared before me, Walter F. Lake, to me personally known and swears that the above statement was read to Mr. Bell, and he said the facts contained therein were correct.

(Signed.) WALTER F. LAKE.

CLOVER ON CORN GROUND.

A subscriber from Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, writes Wallaces' Farmer as follows:

"Please give us your opinion as to the best methods of seeding down corn stalk grounnd to timothy and clover. Will it do to sow without a nurse crop? How late, what amount per acre, and should the ground be plowed or cultivated?"

Clover and timothy can be sown on stalk gorund or any kind of ground without a nurse crop. It will be necessary, however, to run the mower over the ground once or twice, setting the cutter bar high, to clip down the weeds. The earlier is sown the better but it can be sown up to the middle of May provided there is no crop to be sown with it. Whether it should or not depends on whether a man wishes to use the land for another crop or not. The land can be either plowed or cultivated but this season we believe we would cultivate rather than plow. The cultivation, however, should be through and the land harrowed well. A peck of timothy and eight pounds of clover would be heavy seeding. We would sow this amount on the loose soils of the West that have not grown clover before, but where the ground is accustomed to grow clover and timothy two-thirds of this will be ample. If it is sown without a nurse crop a very good crop of pasture can be obtained in the fall and it may even be mowed for that matter if desirable. It will be seen, therefore, that whether to sow with a nurse crop or without, depends on the circumstances of the farmer. A crop never adds anything to the value of the clover and timothy. All the good it does is to keep down the weeds. The harm it does is to render the clover particularly delicate and spindling and liable to be killed by the dry weather and hot sun when the nurse crop is removed.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Some Iowa counties have made an astonishing gain during the past year in the amount of butter produced. For example Palo Alto conty produced twice as much butter during 1896 as it did during 1895. Bremer county leads the list with a production of twelve hundred dollars worth of butter per square mile. This figure represents only the value of the butter shipped out, and dose not include that consumed at home. It is a very satisfactory showing.—Wallaces' Farmer.

"Truly," replied the Doctor with a shrug, "you have your finger on the hitch. He will be strikingly antipathetic to my beautiful Anastasie. She will never understand him; he will never understand her."

Anastasie controlled herself. "You know how willing I am to humor you," she said, "in all reasonable matters. But on this point—"

"My dear love," interrupted the Doctor, eager to prevent a refusal, "who wished to leave Paris? who made me give up cards, and the opera, and the boulevard, and my social relations, and all that was my life before I knew you?

Anastasie was aware of defeat! she struck her colors instantly. "You will break my heart," she sighed.

"Not in the least," said he. "You will feel a trifling inconvenience for a month just as I did when I was first brought to this vile hamlet; then your admirable sense and temper will prevail, and I see you already as content as ever, and making your husband the happiest of men."

"You know I can refuse you nothing," she said, with a last flicker of resistance.

"I think not," replied the Doctor. "But do not suppose me so unwary as to adopt him out of hand. I am, I flatter myself, a finished man of the world; I have had all possibilities in view: my plan is contrived to meet them all. I take the lad as stable boy. If he pilfer, grumble, if he desire to change, I shall see I was mistaken; I shall recognize him for no son of mine, and send him tramping."

"You will never do so when the time comes," said his wife; "I know your good heart."

CHAPTER IV.

ABOUT four of the afternoon, the mountebank rendered up his ghost; he had never been conscious since his seizure. Doctor Desprez was present at his last passage, and declared the farce over. Then he took Jean-Marie by the shoulder and led him out into the inn garden where there was a convenient bench beside the river. Here he sat him down and made the boy place himself on his left.

"Jean-Marie," he said, very gravely, "this world is exceedingly vast; and even France, which is only a small corner of it, is a great place for a little lad like you. Unfortunately it is full of eager, shouldering people moving on; and there are very few bakers' shops for so many eaters. Your master is dead; you are not fit to gain a living by yourself; you do not wish to steal? No. Your situation then is undesirable; it is, for the moment, critical. On the other hand, you behold in me a man not old, though elderly, still enjoying the youth of the heart and the intelligence; a man of instruction; easily situated in this world's affairs; keeping a good table—a man, neither as friend nor host, to be despised. I offer you your food and clothes, and to teach you lessons in the evening, which will be infinitely more to the purpose for a lad of your stamp than those of all the priests in Europe. I propose no wages, but if ever you take a thought to leave me, the door shall be open, and I will give you a hundred francs to start the world upon."

"I shall be very glad. I do not see what else I can do. I thank you, sir, most kindly, and I will try to be useful," said the boy.

"Thank you," said the Doctor warmly, rising at the same time and wiping his brow, for he had suffered agonies while the thing hung in the wind. A refusal, after the scene at noon, would have placed him in a ridiculous light before Anastasie. "How hot and heavy is the evening, to be sure! I have always had a fancy to be a fish in summer, Jean-Marie, here in the Loing beside Gretz. I should lie under a water-lily and listen to the bells, which must sound most delicately down below. That would be a life—do you not think so, too?"

"Yes," said Jean-Marie.

"Thank God, you have imagination!" cried the Doctor, embracing the boy with his usual effusive warmth, though it was a proceeding that seemed to disconcert the sufferer almost as much as if he had been an English schoolboy of the same age. "And now," he added, "I will take you to my wife."

The Doctor went through a solemn form of introduction, adding, for the benefit of both parties. "You must try to like each other for my sake."

"He is very pretty," said Anastasie. "Will you kiss me, my pretty little fellow?"

The Doctor was furious, and dragged her into the passage. "Are you a fool, Anastasie?" he said. "What is all this I hear about the tact of women? Heaven knows, I have not met with it in my experience. You address my little philosopher as if he were an infant. He must be spoken to with more respect, I tell you; he must not be kissed and Georgy-porgy'd like an ordinary child."

"I only did it to please you, I am sure," replied Anastasie; "but I will try to do better."

The Doctor apologized for his warmth. "But I do wish him," he continued, "to feel at home among us. And really your conduct was so idiotic, my cherished one, and so utterly and distantly out of place, that a saint might have been pardoned a little vehemence in disapproval. Do, do try—if it is possible for a woman to understand young people—but of course it is not, and I waste my breath. Hold your tongue as much as possible at least, and observe my conduct narrowly; it will serve you for a model."

Anastasie did as she was bidden, and considered the Doctor's behavior. She observed that he embraced the boy three times in the course of the evening, and managed generally to confound and abash the little fellow out of speech and appetite. But she had the true womanly heroism in little affairs. Not only did she refrain from the cheap revenge of exposing the Doctor's errors to himself, but she did her best to remove their ill-effect on Jean-Marie. When Desprez went out for his last breath of air before retiring for the night, she came over to the boy's side and took his hand.

He held up his face, and she took him in her arms and then began to cry. The woman had spoken in complaisance; but she had warmed to her own words, and tenderness followed. The Doctor, entering, found them enlaced; he concluded that his wife was in fault; and he was just beginning, in an awful voice, "Anastasie——," when she looked up at him, smiling, with an upraised finger; and he held his peace, wondering, while she led the boy to his attic.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TOOK HIM IN HER ARMS.

Coleridge, the poet, was an awkward horseman. Once riding along the turnpike road in the county of Durham he was accosted by a man who had been watching the rider. "I say, young man, did you meet a tailor on the road?" "Yes," replied the poet, whose middle name was Taylor; "I did; and he told me if I went a little farther I should meet a goose."

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, April 12.—The senate met at noon and immediately adjourned as a mark of respect for the late Senator Voorhees.

SENATE.

Washington, April 13.—Vest presented a resolution declaring that the order of Secretary Gage to custom officers to delay the liquidation of entries made of merchandise arriving after April 1 was "without the authority of the law and in violation of the statutes and customs regulation governing the payment of import duties." Chandler introduced in the senate a bill empowering the secretary of the navy to take possession of the armor plants of the Bethlehem and Carnegie companies and hold them till he can have manufactured armor plate necessary for the completion of the battleships Alabama, Illinois and Wisconsin. The second section provided for the return of plant after the government was through with it and the final section permits suit to be brought in the court of claims to establish a rate of compensation. Morgan spoke on his Cuban resolution and Lindsay spoke in favor of the bankruptcy bill.

SENATE.

Washington, April 14.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations: James B. Angell, of Michigan to be minister to Turkey; George D. Meiklejohn of Nebraska, to be assistant secretary of war. The president also sent to congress a message urging that prompt and suitable provision be made for the adequate representation of the United States at the Paris exposition in 1900. A motion to refer to the finance committee Vest's resolution declaring Secretary Gage's action as to the retro-active clause of the tariff bill illegal, carried, 24 to 23.

HOUSE.

Shannon, of New York, introduced a bill to amend the anti-trust law so it will not prevent railway traffic agreements, provided they shall, before going into effect, be submitted to and approved by the interstate commerce commission.

SENATE.

Washington, April 15.—Fifteen minutes after assembling the senate went into executive session on the arbitration treaty. When open session was resumed the Indian appropriation bill was taken up and the amendment opening the Uncompahgre Indian reservation to public entry was agreed to. The reservation includes extensive deposits of asphalt.

MANUFACTURING BILL PASSES.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 14.—The Berry substitute for the Temple amendment to the railroad bill came up under reconsideration and passed. Senate then took up the bill relating to intoxicating liquors. The house section legalizing the manufacture of liquors was stricken out, 37 to 10. Amendments were adopted prohibiting druggists from selling malt liquors and permitting physicians to sell liquors for the purpose of compounding medicines. Berry moved to strike out the house amendment making liquor debts collectable. Carried. The new section permitting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors was then adopted, 25 to 24. An amendment was adopted requiring the consent of 80 per cent of the voters of towns of between 2,500 and 5,000 for the establishment of saloons. The bill was then passed by a vote of 26 to 24. Those voting for the bill were: Blanchard, Bonson, Byers, Carpenter, Cheshire, Craig, Downey, Druit, Ellis, Everall, Funk, Garst, Harper, Hipwell, Hobart, Hospers, Hurst, Lehfeldt, Lothrop, Penrose, Pusey, Ranck, Riggen, Trewin, Upton and Waterman. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOUSE.

The senate bill authorizing cities of the second-class to issue bonds for extending the time of their indebtedness passed. The committee appointed to investigate the alleged unnecessary and illegal expenditures of public funds in several department; made a report. It finds that much of the clerical and janitor help at the state house is paid entirely too much and that the executive council has spent money too freely, and recommends that its right to expend the moneys of the state be curtailed to a large extent. It finds that the supply department is run in an unbusiness-like manner. It recommends that numerous positions in the house and senate be cut off. It finds that the census cost $25,000 more than it should have cost and that many clerks who were engaged on the work at big salaries paid the secretary of state a per cent in order that they might hold their places.

Starving to Death in Cuba.

HAVANA, April 16.—Two hundred thousand people are starving to death in Cuba. From sixty to seventy die of hunger every day. Of the 200,000 dying wretches perhaps 3,000 are citizens of the United States engaged in peaceful pursuits.

Free Information for Inventors.

U. S. R., of Durham, Iowa, asks the following questions, to which we cheerfully reply.

1.—What is the government fee for an application for a patent? Ans. Fifteen dollars is the filing fee and $20 the final fee prior to issuing a patent.

2.—What is your fee? Ans. The minimum attorney fee for preparing and prosecuting an application is $25. For complex inventions additional charges are necessary.

3.—Can I after making an application make any changes in the invention? Ans. Yes, an application can be filed incomplete in lieu of a caveat and improvements added any time within a year before prosecuting claims.

4.—Would I have protection after making an application? Ans. Yes. Any patentable invention recorded in the United States patent office pursuant to law is protected.

5.—Would I have the right to grant manufacturers the privilege to make and sell? Ans. Yes.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A New Botanical Discovery.

The Wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub.—Nature's Cure for Diseases of the Kidneys, Rheumatism and other maladies caused by Uric Acid in the Blood.—A Blessing to Sufferers.

SENT FREE TO PROVE ITS POWER.

A few weeks ago we told our readers of the new botonical discovery, the Kava-Kava Shrub, or as botanists call it, PIPER METHYSTICUM, found on the Ganges River, East India. This wonderful shrub has proved to be a true specific cure for all diseases caused by Uric Acid in the Blood, such as Kidney and Bladder disorders, Rheumatism, etc. It was no doubt used for centuries by the natives as a specific remedy for jungle fevers, miasma, and other maladies, when it was required to clean out the poisons from the Blood through the action of the Kidneys. European physicians pronounce it the greatest medical boon since the discovery of quinine, which, like the Kava-Kava Shrub, was first found in use among the natives by Christian missionaries. It is a most wonderful discovery, with a record of nearly 2,000 hospital cures in less than two months.

THE KAVA-KAVA SHRUB (Piper Methysticum.)

The strongest testimony is given by ministers of the gospel, doctors, business men and others who have been restored to health by the use of Alkavis, the new remedy prepared from the Kava-Kava Shrub. The New York Christian Witness of Feb. 10th, tells the story of Rev. John H. Watson, of Sunset, Texas, stricken down by Kidney disease after thirty years' service as minister of the gospel, given up to die by two excellent doctors, and finally restored to health and to his religious duties by Alkavis. Rev. A. C. Darling, of North Constantia, N. Y., whose case is described in the Christian Advocate of Jan. 30, had lost confidence, as he says, in man and medicine, and was preparing for death, when he learned of this wonderful remedy, took it, and was healed. In his sufferings he was often compelled to rise ten times during the night from weakness of the Bladder, but Alkavis quickly cured him. Many cases of Brights' Disease have been promptly cured by this wonderful shrub, as testified to in the New York World, of March 9, by Hon. F. D. Jackson, Governor of Iowa, and others. Many ladies also, including Mrs. Alice Evans, of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Mary A. Layman, of Neel, West Va., twenty years a sufferer; and Mrs. L. E. Copeland, Elk River, Minn., join in testifying to its wonderful curative power in various forms of Kidney and allied diseases, and of other troublesome afflictions peculiar to womanhood. It is truly a wonderful discovery and fraught with blessings to afflicted humanity.

Up to the present the Church Kidney Cure Company, 422 Fourth Avenue, New York, are the only importers of Alkavis, and they are so anxious to prove its value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of this paper who is a sufferer from any form of Kidney or Bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affliction due to improper action of the Kidneys or Urinary Organs.

We advise all Sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

Shrewd Way to Pay Clerical Debts.

The Rev. George W. Brown of White county, Illinois, made a curious revelation to his congregation on a recent Sunday. Complaints have been made that he was paying more attention to horse trading than to preaching. He felt called upon to give an explanation in his sermon to the effect that, although he confined himself to preaching, he had sunk $1,500 in debt. He said that he had a dream to the effect that if he would go into horse trading he would remove his debt. He borrowed $200 from a friend, and inside of six months was out of debt. He suggested that it was a mighty good business. It had helped him, and it would help them out.

Merit Wins.

The invention of Alabastine marked a new era in wall coatings, and from the standpoint of the building owner was a most important discovery. It has from a small beginning branched out into every country of the civilized world. The name "kalsomine" has become so offensive to property owners that manufacturers of cheap kalsomine preparations are now calling them by some other name, and attempting to sell on the Alabastine company's reputation.

Through extensive advertising and personal use, the merits of the durable Alabastine are so thoroughly known that the people insist on getting these goods and will take no chance of spoiling their walls for the possible saving of at the most but a few cents. Thus it is again demonstrated that merit wins, and that manufacturers of first-class articles will be supported by the people.

Missent.

NOW, what shall I send her?" he murmured,
As he passed with the hurrying throng,
The Easter tide's dainty devices
Displayed in the windows along
The route of the weary home-comers,
From the hours full of toiling and care—
He lingered a moment at Huyler's—
"Shall I send her a bonbonniere?"

"No! surely that's not what I'm seeking,
It would say only common-place things;"
He passed—"there's a Cupid in Dresden,
That dear little rascal with wings!—
Not that! He could scarce bear a message
On wings that don't flutter, and back
Of all one would say to a sweetheart
Is something beyond bric-a-brac."

Still on, till a chance opened doorway
Threw a fragrance of flowers on the street,
And it came like a glad inspiration—
"They'll say what I fear to repeat.
The message I'm longing to utter,
The secret I'm sure she half knows;"
And he placed it at once in the keeping
Of some beautiful deep jacquemi-nots.

* * *

They came, yes, they came, on the morrow,
Yet the message they failed to convey;
"How weary one gets of red roses"
She said, as she tossed them away.
But a girl a few blocks to the westward
With a sigh saw the day near its close,
And she murmured, "I couldn't help hoping
That Ned would just send me a rose."

One of Mrs. Pinkham's Talks

Concerning a Mother's Duty to Her Young Daughter. Together with a Chat with Miss Marie Johnson.

The balance wheel of a woman's life is menstruation. On the proper performance of this function depends her health.

Irregularity lays the foundation of many diseases, and is in itself symptom of disease. It is of the greatest importance that regularity be accomplished as soon as possible after the flow is an established fact.

Disturbance of the menstrual function poisons the blood. In young girls suppression develops latent inherited tendencies to scrofula or consumption, and no time must be lost in restoring regularity. Many a young girl goes to her grave because this difficulty has been thought lightly of, and mother has said, "Time will bring about a cure; she is young, I don't worry about her."

Mother, when you see your daughter languid and indifferent to things that usually interest a young girl, when you note that flush on her cheek, that glassy appearance in her eyes; when your daughter tells you that even the weight of her dress waist oppresses her, and that she has terrible pains in her stomach shortly after eating, don't ignore these signs! If you do, you will be following your daughter to the grave, for she will die!

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest regulator known to medicine. Make haste to use it on the first appearance of the tell-tale symptoms; it will restore all the female organs to their normal condition. Miss Marie Johnson's letter to Mrs. Pinkham, which follows, should interest all mothers and young ladies. She says:

"My health became so poor that I had to leave school. I was tired all the time, and had dreadful pains in my side and back. I would have the headache so badly that everything would appear black before my eyes, and I could not go on with my studies. I was also troubled with irregularity of menses. I was very weak, and lost so much flesh that my friends became alarmed. My mother, who is a firm believer in your remedies from experience, thought perhaps they might benefit me, and wrote you for advice. I followed the advice you gave, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as you directed, and am now as, well as I ever was. I have gained flesh and have a good color I am completely cured of irregularity. Words cannot express my gratitude, and I cannot thank you enough for your kind advice and medicine."—MISS MARIE F. JOHNSON, Centralia, Pa.

He Lost His Job.

"Have you steam heat?" asked the prospective tenant.

And the janitor, who had been through a "revival," could only answer: "We have steam pipes."

There is a Class of People

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O made of pure grains, that takes the places of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

The Man who is Raising a Big Crop

—realizes that the harvest time is ahead. Ideal farming comprehends not only the growing of the tallest grain—the most tons-to-the-acre of hay; the best farming—the farming that pays—must contemplate something more than this: for there is a harvest time, and just in proportion as a crop is saved successfully, speedily and economically, in just that proportion may be measured the season's profit or loss.

Harvesting Machines are the profit-bringing kind; they are built for long wear, hard work, light draft, and in short, to satisfy. There are other kinds that don't cost as much, but there's nothing cheaper than the best.

Mr. Etching living west of town was in Saturdayand got some flax seed of Aug. Lau, started out of town by the depot road; when just over the track about 10 rods the wagon went down to the hubs and he was stuck. The flax being in sacks was carried out and four horses could not pull the wagon out backwards. He went home and came back Monday, got his wagon out loaded up the flax and started home with the flax in two wagons.

Fire! FIRE! FIRE! Where? In Lau Bros. store. Everybody ran, only to find that the gasoline stove, in the rooms occupied by Geo. Sellig had exploded; but the fire had been extinguished. If that store had burned it is very probable that the entire south side of the street would have gone, there being no protection whatever here for fire. The bnsiness portion of Klemme could be well protected from fire at a very small expense. by erecting a water tank, 50 ft. high over the town well and keeping it filled by wind mill power. Have hose to reach one block from the tank and you will have very fair protection. We think this question of fire protection should be looked after and not wait for a fire to wake us up to action.

If Gleason is elected mayor, Greater New York will have to stand Pat.

There is only one black man in congress, and, strange to say, his name is White.

There is at least one encouraging sign, loafers are less popular than they ever were before.

Cast your bread upon the waters and those who benefit by your generosity will grumble because you didn't cast cake.

Prof. McMasters' plan of writing American history will place the school children under the necessity of reading the truth when they are older.

The commercial invasion of the United States by Japan is imminent. Her manufacturers are indomitable,and it seems that the Japanese are not disposed to buy anything abroad which they can make at home. The balance of trade between Japan and the United States seems fixedly against us.

It is said that Queen Victoria, on her return from the south of France, will visit Mr. Astor—or Arstor, as his admiring English friends call him. This will be in recognition of Mr. Astor's generous contribution for her majesty's starving subjects in India. The queen may very well encourage Americans with so much wealth as Mr. Astor enjoys. This rich American exile has spent a great deal of money in her realm.

Any American bicycle maker who seeks information as to the best means of introducing his wares abroad and particularly in Italy cannot do better than consult a report on this subject made to the state department by United States Consul Johnson at Venice. The consul says that while the Italians make a fair bicycle, the people generally prefer foreign wheels, and if the American maker can supply three grades, about $57.90, $68.85 and $115.80 each, there can be no question that a good market can be found. He adds: "As yet, in Italy, women have not taken very enthusiastically to bicycling, but the interest taken by them in this district is daily increasing, especially those who aspire to a position in the fashionable world, as it seems to be quite the proper thing and in excellent 'form' for a woman of a smart set to be an expert bicyclist."

A noble record is that of Trinity Church of Boston. It is the church over which that large-hearted, consecrated man, Phillips Brooks, was rector for so many years. Its present rector stated a few Sabbaths since that its work of charity during the last twenty years had reached in contributions an average of one thousand dollars a Sunday for every Sunday the church had been opened. These were voluntary offerings for all who have needed succor and the ministries of pecuniary help, quite apart from the costly maintenance of the services of the church itself. It shows the great influence for God and humanity an earnest, great-hearted preacher may have over the people who listen to his religious teachings, and are ennobled by the example of his unselfish life. It speaks, too, more emphatically than words can declare it, of the sympathy felt by men of wealth, and by men active and prosperous in business, for those for whom fortune has not shown favor, and whose lives are under the shadows of privation.

The people of Tennessee have prepared to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the state into the Union, by holding a great centennial and international exposition at Nashville. Centennial Park, where the exposition will be held, is a two hundred acre tract of highly improved land, situated in the western suburbs of the city. It is easily reached by three electric street car lines and one steam railway line. Railroad passenger rates from every section of the country to Nashville, during the progress of the exposition, will be reduced to the minimum. The climate of Middle Tennessee is delightful, and the country surrounding Nashville is ideally beautiful. The main buildings of the exposition are; "The Parthenon," "The Erechtheon," "The Auditorium, Administration, Children's, Commerce, Transportation, Agriculture, Minerals and Forestry, Machinery, Negro, and Government. The dimensions of the buildings which are to contain commercial exhibits, exclusive of annexes, are as follows: Commerce, 500x315 feet; Transportation, 400x120 feet; Machinery, 375x138 feet; Minerals and Forestry, 400x125 feet; Agriculture, 525x175 feet.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

IMPORTANT MULCT DECISION.

A Petition of Consent Once Revoked is Worthless.

DES MOINES, April 23.—Attorney General Remley has submitted an important opinion on a question relative to the mulct law which has been raised for the first time. It seems that the people of Gowrie subscribed to a petition of remonstrance to saloons after a petition of consent had been completed and that the petition of consent was thereby revoked, but that now after the lapse of a year the people of Gowrie have changed their minds and want to grant a petition of consent. The attorney general in his opinion holds that the citizens will have to begin anew and obtain a new petition.

TORNADO IN JONES COUNTY.

Much Property Damage, But No Loss of Life is Reported.

ANAMOSA, April 25.—A tornado passed just a little west of this city. The cloud was funnel-shaped and black. It passed from the southwest to the northeast and the roar was heard for miles. People took to their cellars. A strip some ten feet wide was mowed throw the heavy timber and great trees were twisted off. Houses, barns and windmills were split into kindling wood. Wagons and agricultural implements were blown long distances. The electric lights were shut off in the city, leaving it in total darkness.

SUIT WITHDRAWN.

Probable End of the Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home Trouble.

DES MOINES, April 23.—J. H. Henderson, of Indianola, has dismissed his suit in the Polk county district court against the Odd Fellows' grand lodge, seeking to prevent the building of the grand lodge's projected Home for Odd Fellows' Orphans at Jefferson. The dismissal of the case will be greeted with pleasure by nine-tenths of the members of the order throughout the state. It is thought to be the end of the Odd Fellow trouble.

CRAMER TRIED TO SUICIDE.

He Was Postmaster at Hopkinton and Was Short in His Accounts.

CEDAR RAPIDS, April 25.—Postoffice Inspector Mahr checked the accounts of Postmaster Cramer, of Hopkinton, yesterday morning and found him $1,000 short in his accounts. Cramer admitted he had used the money and offered no excuse for doing so. During the afternoon he went to a barn and took a large dose of strychnine. There is a hope of his recovery. Cramer has always borne an excellent reputation.

FRIENDS OF THE FARMER.

Des Moines Daily Paper Offered at Half Price.

DES MOINES, April 26.—Owing to the low price of farm products, the Des Moines Daily News is now offered to farmers at $1 a year, just half price, the same as to clergymen. The News is a first-class newspaper, giving the latest telegrams and markets.

Suit for a Child's Death.

KEOKUK, April 24.—Suit has been begun in the district court against the Pullman Palace Car company by Dr. V. B. Ochiltree for $4,000 damages. It is alleged that while the compiainant and his infant son, Victor, were passengers on a car of the defendant on the Burlington route between Burlington and Denver, the defendants servants allowed the fires t o go out while a blizzard was raging, causing injuries to the child which resulted in its death. Suit is brought on two counts, one as the child's parent and the other as administrator of estate.

Cloudburst at Des Moines.

DES MOINEZ, April 24.—Des Moines and vicinity was visited by a cloudburst which did inestimable damage. Cellars were filled, sewers were choked up, pavements were washed out and twenty families who lived near the water works were driven from their homes at midnight. Two bridges on the Rock Island west of Des Moines were washed out.

$30,000 Fire at Mt. Ayr.

MT. AYR, April 25.—A disastrous conflagration entailing a loss of about $30,000 occurred here. The fire started in the drug store of B. C. Warren on the east side of the square, which was supposed to have been struck by lightning during the severe electrical storm which was then passing over. The Timby block and entire contents were destroyed.

Eckerlebe Again Convicted.

CLINTON, April 24.—The jury in the Eckerlebe murder case, after having been out twenty-eight hours, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and recommended imprisonment for life. Eckerlebe will be immediately taken to Anamosa.

Mrs. Blanchard Dead.

OSKALOOSA, April 23.—Mrs. Blanchard, wife of Senator L. C. Blanchard, died at her home here. Mrs. Blanchard was a daughter of Judge M. T. Williams, the first clerk of the courts in Mahaska county.

AN EDITOR MURDERED.

John Jamison Crushes the Skull of M. N. Hinton at Albia.

OTTUMWA, April 23.—M. N. Hinton, editor of the Progress-Defender, the populist organ of Albia, is probably fatally hurt. Some time ago Hinton published an article which displeased a coal miner named John Jamison, and he called at the office. While there they got into an altercation and Hinton drove the miner out of the office with a poker. Jamison met Hinton on the street and struck him over the head with a scantling. Hinton's skull is fractured. He has since been unconscious and cannot live.

THE LONGS ACQUITTED.

Jury Brought in a Verdict After 24 Hours Deliberation.

HAMPTON, April 26.—J. C. Long and his wife, Anna L. Long, have been on trial charged with the murder of Mr. Long's 16-year-old daughter, Lelia, by a former marriage, and the jury after having been out nearly twenty-four hours, returned a verdict of not guilty.

A Serious Fire at Burlington.

BURLINGTON, April 26.—Fire destroyed the Kleppish Queensware Company's store on Jefferson street The loss is total, and will amount to $35,000 on stock and probably $5,000 on the building.

Dougherty Jury Disagreed.

ALBIA, April 24.—The jury in the Dougherty murder case at Centerville was discharged. They stood six for conviction and six for acquittal. The case was set for trial again in May.

Rains Cause Great Damage.

CRESTON, April 26.—As a result of the excessive rains the dam of the Creston Waterworks company gave way, causing a loss of $100,000.

IOWA CONDENSED.

Burglars at Dedham a few nights ago secured goods to the value of $1,000.

The two-months-old child of C. F. Broderson, a farmer living near Galesburg, choked to death by swallowing the nipple from its nursing bottle. This was their only child.

The somewhat noted case of the state vs. C. R. and J. J. McCuddin was on trial at Indianola for fourteen days, and the jury, after being out nearly forty-eight hours, disagreed, and were discharged.

In the district court at Cedar Rapids recently the case of Mrs. Frances Fry against Mrs. Jane Stinson was brought to a close, the jury awarding plaintiff damages in the sum of $1,500. This was a case in which Mrs. Fry sued for $10,000 damages for the alienation of her husband's affections, and it was very sensational.

John F. Cain and family, of Dubuque, had a narrow escape from death by fire recently. A furious wind was blowing and when the fire was discovered Mr. Cain had barely time to lower his wife and children from the upper story window by means of bed sheets. Everything was burned and the family had nothing but their nightclothes left.

Des Moines dispatch: J. L. Winston, of the Austin Powder Company, writes from Washington, Ind., that he accepts the challenge of C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, to shoot for the DuPont trophy, and names Watson's grounds, Chicago, and date, May 1, as the place and time for the said match. The match to begin at 1:30 p. m. and to be at 100 first-class pigeons.

A very sad accident occurred at the Rock Island crossing on East Fifth street, Des Moines, recently by which Willie Matthews, aged 16 years, will lose his right leg and perhaps his life. It appears that the boy was on his way home to dinner, and as it was raining and blowing hard, he was holding his umbrella over him and did not see the approaching switch engine.

Louis H. Reich, formerly city treasurer of Davenport for several years, has been found to be an embezzler to the extent of about $5,000 of the city funds, the money having been taken from various funds in his hands at different times during his service. His bondsmen are wealthy business men of Davenport, and no loss will occur to the city through his depredations.

At Mt. Pleasant recently Judge Smyth sentenced H. Arthur Courtney to six years at Ft. Madison. The sentence adds four and a half years to Judge Roberts's former sentence. Courtney is the cattle thief who operated near Mt. Pleasant. Two new suits were served on the prisoner before the sheriff took him to Ft. Madison. It is intimated that this is not the end of the case.

Dubuque dispatch: Anna Maria Smith, who disappeared thirty years ago, has appeared to claim her share of the estate of her brother, Nicholas Hansen. He died several years ago, and the court held her share until the 14th, when he ordered the administrator to distribute it among the other heirs. Later a bank at Blythedale, Mo., telegraphed that the woman was living there under the name of her second husband.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

WAR IN EUROPE.

LONDON, April 20.—Red war rages along the Turkish frontier from Prevesa to the slopes of Mount Olympus. Greeks and Turks met in bloody battles yesterday. Ignoring or ignorant of the diplomatic quibbles of the sultan concerning defensive and offensive war, the Turks fought like demons at the entrance to the Milouna pass. Twenty thousand troops were engaged in fierce combat on both sides. After terrible fighting at close range the Moslems drove the Greeks back step by step. The Greek blockhouse at the entrance to Milouna pass was captured by the Turks, but not until many Turks had been killed, among them being Hafiz Pashi, who led the attack. The Greek minister at Constantinople has been recalled. The Turkish minister to Greece did not wait for his passports, it is said. The Turkish batteries at Prevesa, which commands the Gulf of Arta, at the extreme northeast corner of Greece, fired on and sank a Greek steamer, the Macedonia. Immediately the Greek fleet, stationed in the Gulf of Ambracia, began a bombardment of Prevesa. The Turkish fort at Prevesa was destroyed by the fire of the Greek warships. Four thousand Greeks landed to occupy the place.

ATHENS, April 20.—Official dispatches announce that Turkish stations from Nezeros to Koutra are occupied by the Greeks, while repeated attacks by the Turks on Analipsis have been repulsed with heavy loss.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Diplomats believe that the key to peace or war is held by the czar and it is even asserted that Russia has in view the final dismemberment and annexation of Turkey.

ATHENS, April 21.—The Greeks are jubilant over the capture of Damasi and the fact that the fall of Prevesa seems imminent. It is felt that this more than offsets the loss of Milouna Pass. The Turks have captured Tyrnova, ten miles from Larissa, and it is probable that a decisive battle will soon take place. Abdul Azel Pasha, a Turkish general. was killed at Tyrnova. King George has gone to the front. Every available man is called into service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 22.—Edham Pasha has asked for 40,000 reinforcements and reserves have been ordered to the front. The mobilization of forty additional battalions has been decided upon. The sturdy resistance of the Turks was not anticipated.

ATHENS, April 22.—It is reported that the eastern squadron of the Greek fleet is bombarding Platomona, on the west side of the gulf of Salonica

ATHENS, April 22.—Crown Prince Constantine telegraphs from Larissa, the headquarters of the Greek forces in Thessaly: "We have kept all our positions and the situation is excellent. Every road by which the Turks can descend into the Thessalian plain has been secured by the concentration of our troops."

ATHENS, April 23.—The pass of Reveni, a few miles northwest of Tyrnavo, where there are as many as 40,000 Turks, under the personal direction of Edham Pasha, has been the scene of the fiercest fighting of the war. This horde of Moslems, singing and chanting war songs from Raveni to Boughеza, for the past three days have unremittingly endeavored to obtain a free road to the Thessalian plains. Twenty thousand Greeks under the direction of Prince Constantine, have as steadily fought and struggled to keep back the Mohammedan stream, and have thus far succeeded.

CONTANTINOPLE, April 24.—Fifty thousand additional army reserves are called out for service against Greece. It is definitely announced that Osman Pasha has been made commander-in-chief of the Turkish army, having headquarters at Elassona. Edhem Pasha has been recalled.

ATHENS, April 24.—In Epirus the Greek army is advancing. It has captured Fort Imaret, Fillipaiada and several villages. The Greeks have also occupied Salagora, capturing three cannon, a number of guns and a quantity of ammunition and provisions The army is now advancing northward. The Greek squadron landed troops at Katuri and captured stores and provisions intended for the Turkish army. The western squadron bombarded Santi Quaranta, doing immense damage.

LONDON, April 26.—After fighting bravely at the foot of Mita pass and once defeating the Turks, the Grecians were obliged to retreat before the force of superior numbers, the Turks having been reinforced. The defeat was a severe one, for the Greeks gave up both Tyrnavo and Larissa and fell back some twenty miles to the southward of the latter place. This defeat would be an overwhelming one to the Greeks were it not for counterbalancing events. Greeks continue to win victories in Epirus, and a report by way of Constantinople states that they have succeeded in reaching a point back of Elassona, where they are in the rear of the Turkish forces which captured Larissa.

DAMAGE TO PROPERTY.

Agricultural Interests Suffer Greatly by the Floods.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The bureau of statistics of the treasury department has made a report on the damage caused to agricultural interests by the Mississippi river flood. In part it says: "Since the publication on April 12 of a statement relative to agricultural interests of the submerged districts of the Mississippi valley south of Cairo, Ill., the area under water has been considerably extended. This extension is below Vicksburg, Miss., but on the right or west side of the river, and is mainly due to a break 2,000 feet in width in the levee at Biggs. The outflow of water at this point has totally submerged four parishes (counties) of Louisiana and partially overflowed five others, while a break at La Forche crossing, in the southern part of the same state, has resulted in the submergence of an additional area of nearly 300 square miles in La Fourche and Terre Bonne parishes. In this newly submerged region there was in 1880 a total population of 82,356, in the proportion of four colored persons to one white. The total value of the farms submerged by the breaks in the levees that have occurred since the 10th inst., with their farm implements, live stock and crops on hand is, therefore, close upon $14,000,000. This region produced last year a production aggregating a value, even at the low prices that have prevailed, of more than four and one-quarter million dollars. The total area submerged at this date is over 20,000 square miles. A total of $90,176,177 will represent the approximate value of the agricultural property of the submerged region."

CONGRESSMAN HOLMAN.

The Old "Watchdog of the Treasury" Passes Away.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Representative Holman, of Indiana, died yesterday at 2 p. m. Judge Holman's death was due primarily to a fall he sustained Easter morning as a result of an attack of vertigo, and his condition grew steadily worse. Meningitis developed, and since then he had been rapidly sinking. He passed away without regaining consciousness. Mr. Holman would have passed the three-quarter century mark had he lived until next September, and his career is remarkable for the large proportion of his public life that was given up to the service of the public. No living men, and few dead men, have a record as he had of sixteen terms in the house of representatives, and in all fifty-four years of his life were spent in some public capacity.

HARD BLOW FOR TURKEY.

Bulgaria Virtually Declares Independence From the Porte.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—At the outbreak of hostilities between Turkey and Greece, the former called on Bulgaria, as the vassal of Turkey, to expel all Greeks from Bulgaria. Bulgaria took the matter under advisement and, it is now announced, has declined to comply, declaring it will observe neutrality between the beligerents. This is considered as tantamount to a declaration of independence by Bulgaria.

TO KILL A KING.

Crazy Ironworker Tries to Kill King Humbert.

ROME, April 23.—While King Humbert was on his way to the races a man named Acciarito, a political fanatic ironworker, out of employment, attempted to stab the king. He was prevented and arrested. The king proceeded to the races, apparently unmoved. The assassin claims he had no accomplices

Gen. Miles Wants to Go to Greece.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Gen. Miles has applied for permission to go to Greece to observe the war between Greece and Turkey from a military point of view. Secretary Alger has brought the matter to the attention of the president, and the latter has taken the application under consideration. Should the order be made by the president, it will be the first time in our history that the general commanding the army has gone abroad during actual war as a military attache.

To Fill Committees.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—In the caucus, the republican senators decided to accept the proposition of the opposition for filling the senate committees, leaving the details to McMillan's committee on committees; they also authorized the managing committee to negotiate with the opposition to secure a division of the elective offices of the senate.

Senate Will Not Hurry.

CHICAGO, April 23.—In a dispatch to the Times-Herald Walter Wellman says the senate will probably not pass the tariff bill before July or August.

BREVITIES.

Dr. Hunter, republican nominee, has withdrawn from the race for United States senator from Kentucky.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"FRIENDSHIP UNFAILING," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Following Text: "And She Went and Came and Gleaned in the Fields After the Reapers; and Her Hap Was to Light."—Ruth 2:3.

HE time that Ruth and Naomi arrived at Bethlehem is harvest time. It was the custom when a sheaf fell from a load in the harvest field for the reapers to refuse to gather it up; that was to be left for the poor who might happen to come along that way. If there were handfuls of grain scattered across the field after the main harvest had been reaped, instead of raking it, as farmers do now, it was, by the custom of the land, left in its place, so that the poor coming along that way might glean it, and get their bread. But, you say, "What is the use of all these harvest fields to Ruth and Naomi? Naomi is too old and feeble to go out and toil in the sun; and can you expect that Ruth, the young and the beautiful, should tan her cheeks and blister her hands in the harvest field?

Boaz owns a large farm, and he goes out to see the reapers gather in the grain. Coming there, right behind the swarthy, sun-browned reapers, he beholds a beautiful woman gleaning—a woman more fit to bend to a harp or sit upon a throne than to stoop among the sheaves. Ah, that was an eventful day!

It was love at first sight. Boaz forms an attachment for the womanly gleaner—an attachment full of undying interest to the church of God in all ages; while Ruth, with an ephah, or nearly a bushel of barley, goes home to Naomi to tell her of the successes and adventures of the day. That Ruth, who left her native land of Moab in darkness, and traveled through an undying affection for her mother-in-law, is in the harvest field of Boaz, is affianced to one of the best families in Judah, and becomes in after time the ancestress of Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory! Out of so dark a night did there ever dawn so bright a morning?

I learn, in the first place, from this subject, how trouble develops character. It was bereavement, poverty and exile that developed, illustrated, and announced to all ages the sublimity of Ruth's character. That is a very unfortunate man who has no trouble. It was sorrow that made John Bunyan the better dreamer, and Doctor Young the better poet, and O'Connell the better orator, and Bishop Hall the better preacher, and Havelock the better soldier, and Kitto the better encyclopaedist, and Ruth the better daughter-in-law.

I once asked an aged man in regard to his pastor, who was a very brilliant man, "Why is it that your pastor, so very brilliant, seems to have so little heart and tenderness in his sermons?" "Well," he replied, "the reason is, our pastor has never had any trouble. When misfortune comes upon him his style will be different." After a while the Lord took a child out of the pastor's house; and though the preacher was just as brilliant as he was before, oh, the warmth, the tenderness of his discourses! The fact is, that trouble is a great educator. You see sometimes a musician sit down at an instrument and his execution is cold and formal and unfeeling. The reason is that all his life he has been prospered. But let misfortune or bereavement come to that man, and he sits down to the instrument, and you discover the pathos in the first sweep of the keys.

Misfortunes and trials are great educators. A young doctor comes into a sick room where there is a dying child. Perhaps he is very rough in his prescription, and very rough in his manner, and rough in the feeling of the pulse, and rough in his answer to the mother's anxious question; but years roll on, and there has been one dead in his own house; and now he comes into the sick room, and with tearful eye he looks at the dying child, and he says, "Oh, how this reminds me of my Charlie!" Trouble, the great educator. Sorrow—I see its touch in the grandest painting; I hear its tremor in the sweetest song; I feel its power in the mightiest argument.

Grecian mythology said that the foundation of Hippocrene was struck out by the foot of the winged horse Pegasus. I have often noticed in life that the brightest and most beautiful fountains of Christian comfort and spiritual life have been struck out by the iron shod hoof of disaster and calamity. I see Daniel's courage best by the flash of Nebuchadnezzar's furnace. I see Paul's prowess best when I find him on the foundering ship under the glare of the lightning in the breakers of Melita. God crowns his children amid the howling of wild beasts and the chopping of blood-splashed guillotine and the crackling fires of martyrdom. It took the persecutions of Marcus Aurelius to develop Polycarp and Justin Martyr. It took all the hostilities against Scotch Covenanters and the fury of Lord Claverhouse to develop James Renwick and Andrew Melville, and James McKail, the glorious martyrs of Scotch history. It took the stormy sea, and the December blast, and the desolate New England coast, and the warwhoop of savages to show forth the prowess of the Pilgrim Fathers.

When amid the storms they sang,
And the stars heard, and the sea;
And the sounding aisles of the dim wood
Rang to the anthems of the free.

Life often seems to be a mere game, where the successful player pulls down all the other men into his own lap. Let suspicion arise about a man's character, and he becomes like a bank in a panic, and all the imputations rush on him and break down in a day that character which in due time would have had strength to defend itself. There are reputations that have been half a century in building, which go down under one push, as a vast temple is consumed by the touch of a sulphurous match. A hog can uproot a century plant.

In this world, so full of heartlessness and hypocrisy, how thrilling it is to find some friend as faithful in days of adversity as in days of prosperity? David had such a friend in Hushai; the Jews had such a friend in Mordecai, who never forgot their cause; Paul had such a friend in Onesiphorus, who visited him in jail; Christ had such in the Marys, who adhered to Him on the Cross; Naomi had such a one in Ruth, who cried out, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee, for whither thou goest, I will go; and whither thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me."

Again, I learn from this subject that paths which open in hardship and darkness often come out in places of joy. When Ruth started from Moab toward Jerusalem, to go along with her mother-in-law, I suppose the people said: "Oh, what a foolish creature to go away from her father's house, to go off with a poor old woman toward the land of Judah! They won't live to get across the desert. They will be drowned in the sea, or the jackals of the wilderness will destroy them." It was a very dark morning when Ruth started off with Naomi: but behold her in my text in the harvest field of Boaz, to be affianced to one of the lords of the land, and become one of the grandmothers of Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory. And so it often is that a path which often starts very darkly ends very brightly.

When you started out for heaven, oh, how dark was the hour of conviction—how Sinai thundered, and devils tormented, and the darkness thickened! All the sins of your life pounced upon you, and it was the darkest hour you ever saw when you first found out your sins. After awhile you went into the harvest field of God's mercy: you began to glean in the fields of divine promise, and you had more sheaves than you could carry, as the voice of God addressed you, saying: "Blessed is the man whose transgressions are forgiven and whose sins are covered." A very dark starting in conviction, a very bright ending in the pardon and the hope and the triumph of the Gospel!

So, very often in our worldly business or in our spiritual career, we start off on a very dark path. We must go. The flesh may shrink back, but there is a voice within, or a voice from above, saying, "You must go;" and we have to drink the gall, and we have to carry the cross, and we have to traverse the desert and we are pounded and flailed of misrepresentation and abuse, and we have to urge our way through ten thousand obstacles that have been slain by our own right arm. We have to ford the river, we have to climb the mountain, we have to storm the castle; but, blessed be God, the day of rest and reward will come. On the tip-top of the captured battlements we will shout the victory; if not in this world, then in that world where there is no gall to drink, no burdens to carry, no battles to fight. How do I know it? Know it! I know it because God says so: "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat, for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe all tears from their eyes."

It was very hard for Noah to endure the scoffing of the people in his day, while he was trying to build the ark, and was every morning quizzed about his old boat that would never be of any practical use; but when the deluge came, and the tops of the mountains disappeared like the backs of sea monsters, and the elements, lashed up in fury, clapped their hands over a drowned world, then Noah in the ark rejoiced in his own safety and in the safety of his family, and looked out on the wreck of a ruined earth.

Christ, hounded of persecutors, denied a pillow, worse maltreated than the thieves on either side of the cross, human hate smacking its lips in satisfaction after it had been draining his last drop of blood, the sheeted dead bursting from the sepulchres at his crucifixion. Tell me, O Gethsemane and Golgotha, were there ever darker times than those? Like the booming of the midnight sea against the rock, the surges of Christ's anguish beat against the gates of eternity, to be echoed back by all the thrones of heaven and all the dungeons of hell. But the day of reward comes for Christ; all the pomp and dominion of this world are to be hung on his throne, crowned heads are to bow before him on whose head are many crowns, and all the celestial worship is to come up at his feet, like the humming of the forest, like the rushing of the waters, like the thundering of the seas, while all heaven, rising on their thrones, beat time with their sceptres: "Hallelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

That song of love, now low and far,
Ere long shall swell from star to star;
That light, the breaking day which tips
The golden-spired Apocalypse.

Madame de Stael did a world of work in her time, and one day, while she was seated amid instruments of music, all of which she had mastered, and amid manuscript books which she had written, some one said to her: "How do you find time to attend to all these things?" "Oh," she replied, "these are not the things I am proud of. My chief boast is in the fact that I have seventeen trades, by any one of which I could make a livelihood if necessary." And if in secular spheres there is so much to be done, in spiritual work how vast the field! How many dying all around about us without one word of comfort! We want more Abigails, more Hannahs, more Rebeccas, more Marys, more Deborahs consecrated—body, mind and soul, to the Lord who bought them.

Once more I learn from my subject the value of gleaning.

Ruth going into that harvest field might have said: "There is a straw, and there is a straw, but what is a straw? I can't get any barley for myself or my mother-in-law out of these separate straws." Not so said beautiful Ruth. She gathered two straws, and she put them together, and more straws, until she got enough to make a sheaf. Putting that down, she went and gathered more straws, until she had another sheaf, and another, and another, and another, and then she brought them altogether, and she threshed them out, and she had an ephah of barley, nigh a bushel. Oh, that we might all be gleaners!

Elihu Burritt learned many things while toiling in a blacksmith's shop. Abercrombie, the world-renowned philosopher, was a philosopher in Scotland, and he got his philosophy, or the chief part of it, while, as a physician, he was waiting for the door of the sick room to open. Yet how many there are in this day who say they are so busy they have no time for mental or spiritual improvement; the great duties of life cross the field like strong reapers, and carry off all the hours, and there is only here and there a fragment left, that is not worth gleaning. Ah, my friends, you could go into the busiest day and busiest week of your life and find golden opportunities, which, gathered, might at last make a whole sheaf for the Lord's garner. It is the stray opportunities and the stray privileges which, taken up and bound together and beaten out, will at last fill you with much joy.

There are a few moments left worth the gleaning. Now, Ruth to the field! May each one have a measure full and running over! Oh, you gleaners, to the field! And if there be in your household an aged one or a sick relative that is not strong enough to come forth and toil in this field, then let Ruth take home to feeble Naomi this sheaf of gleaning: "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." May the Lord God of Ruth and Naomi be our portion forever!

Quite a Difference.

All disciples of Izaak Walton will appreciate the story which is going the rounds, concerning Mr. Andrew Lang, the English critic and essayist. An exchange publishes the anecdote which one of Mr. Lang's literary friends tells: It happened to me to spend a few days last summer in an English village. Having noticed a pleasant river which seemed to promise excellent fishing, I spoke of it to my landlady. "Oh yes, sir," she said, "there is very good fishing here—many people come here for fishing." "What kind of people come here?" I asked. "Literary gentlemen come here very often, sir. We had Mr. Andrew Lang staying here." "Oh really! does he fish? Is he a good fisherman?" "Yes, sir, he fishes beautifully." "Really! does he catch much?" "Oh no, sir, he never catches anything, but he fishes beautifully."

COURSING LIZARDS.

In the April St. Nicholas, Wolcott Le Clear Beard writes of "Moses: a Tame Eagle," which was one of his pets while he was engaged in engineering in southern Arizona. Mr. Beard says: He was very fond of the lizards with which these plains abounded, and one large variety, called "swifts" from their remarkable speed in running, seemed to be specially coveted. Whenever one of these was caught, which was not often, Moses would be brought out, and after the swift had taken ten feet start, would be set free. The lizard would promptly resolve itself into a white streak across the desert, and screaming with excitement, half running, half flying, Moses would pursue, followed by the laughing crowd, of which only those on horseback had much chance of keeping up. It was in no sense a cruel sport; it amused Moses and us, and didn't hurt the swift, for he got away every time, and if the feelings of our pet were a trifle injured, as he returned, perched on some one's wrist or saddle-horn, from his fruitless hunt, these were speedily soothed by the prompt gift of a nice bit of fresh beef, so no one was the worse. The lizards, however, he seemed to view as a sort of dessert, and, as he could absorb an unlimited quantity, they were always in demand. A certain stick kept on the veranda of our office was generally under his eye; and when any one picked this up and started for a walk across the desert, Moses would hop gravely along behind, sure that some of his favorite dainties would soon be forthcoming. Of course, Moses was perfectly well able to catch the smaller kinds of lizards for himself, but there was less exertion in allowing some one else to do it for him; and exertion, at this period of his life, was a thing to which Moses was violently opposed. These occasions were almost the only ones when he would be silent for any length of time; for he seemed to understand perfectly that at the first note of his voice every lizard within hearing would run for its life to the nearest refuge; and only when a blow of the stick failed for the second or third time to reach its mark would he give utterance to his deep disgust at such clumsiness.

MORAVIAN VIEW OF DEATH.

A Beautiful and Impressive Custom of the Moravians.

Clifford Howard contributes to the Ladies' Home Journal an interesting article upon the Moravians of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and their religious customs: "Upon the death of one of the congregation," he writes, "the event is announced, not by the monotonous, mournful tolling of the bell, but by the deep-breathing, melodious music of the trombones, played in the open-belfry steeple of the church by the trombone choir; and as the deep, sweet notes of the familiar hymn are borne to the people below they reverently drop their work to listen. 'Hark!' they whisper, 'the horns are blowing; some one has gone home!' 'Gone home!'—perhaps nothing more beautifully exemplifies the perfect, unquestioning faith of these devout people than that expressive utterance, the sincerity of which is ever demonstrated by the lack of the mourning at the passing away of a member of the household, however dearly beloved; so true and heartfelt is the Moravian's belief that death is but the entrance to a brighter, happier home. The trombones are also used at the touching funeral services held at the grave; and amid their sad, yet inspiring, strains the departed one is laid to his eternal rest. On all occasions, whether of death or joy, the trombones lend their sweet solemnity in fitting breath. From the steeple they herald the festival day of each of the choirs, and in all open-air services their mellifluous tones are ever present."

A Wonderful Sign!

A writer says, in regard to the Prussia of fifty years ago, that it had a state lottery, and in every town, large or small, was a collector, appointed to sell the tickets. One day a servant-girl came to the collector in Hagen, and asked if she could buy No. 23. He did not have it in his possession, but as the girl seemed very much in earnest and refused to be put off with any other number, he tried to obtain it from some of the other collectors in town, and finally succeeded. The drawing took place, and Hagen rose to a state of feverish excitement when it was known that this girl had become a winner of a large sum of money. She found herself, for a time, the chief object of interest in the town. She was, of course, asked how she came to fix upon No. 23. Thereupon she gave this simple and lucid explanation: "I dreamed one night No. 7, and a second night I dreamed No. 7, and a third night again. So I thought, 'Three times seven makes twenty-three,' and I bought that number!"

NOTES ON SPRING FASHIONS.

An afternoon gown is of pale gray cloth, with a little pointed bolero coat made of rose velvet braided in stripes of gray, but uncovered where it is turned back to show a soft front of white chiffon and butter-colored lace.

A frock of lavender China crape has one of the much worn accordion-plaited skirts, with waved ruchings of chiffon and a pouched bodice draped over a tiny white vest with a waterfall of chiffon and lace at one side of the front. The wide belt is of deeper-hued miroir velvet.

Very picturesque is a gown of black glace silk with fringed flounces over which comes a pointed bodice with the finest of plaitings, finished with an Elizabethan ruffle at the throat. A pale blue sash caught up on one side of the bodice has a pink rose tucked into a chou of soft silk.

It is said that the prettiest woman gains something when she is clad in pink velvet, and this becoming material is much in evidence for party gowns at present. One pale rose velvet dinner dress is trimmed with real lace, lightly embroidered in silver. The folded bodice finishes at the waist and the sleeves are a soft drapery of lace.

"So-smart" is the newest adjective, and is applied to some of the bewilderingly pretty spring gowns. A confused check in a flannel-like material has a skirt made in the very new plaits and a band of darker check near the hem, which is raised toward the back to form an apron-like effect; the little blouse-like bodice is finished off with an exquisite blue silk, showing through a coarse guipure, and arranged in picturesque bows at one side, where it is fastened with shamrock-shaped buttons of dark green jade and brilliants.

The Ideal Line.

The members of the Baptist Young People's Union who contemplate attending a national meeting of that body in July, should bear in mind that there is no better equipped line from the East, North or Northwest than the Popular Big Four Route, via Cincinatti or Louisville. All through passenger trains on this line are vestibuled, equipped with Buffet Sleepers, with Hotel Dining Cars on day trains. At Cincinatti direct connection is made in the same depot with the Queen & Crescent Route, the short line to Chattanooga, via the famous High Bridge. At Louisville with the Southern Railway and the Louisville & Nashville, via Mammoth Cave and Nashville, allowing stop-over at both these points.

CORN IN COPENHAGAN.

It is stated on authority of Secretary Wilson, than whom there is no better, that American corn is now being taken from Baltimore to Copenhagen, Denmark, at the rate of eight cents per bu. The thrifty Dane feeds this corn in combination with other foods to first- class dairy cows and thus turns it into butter at a very low cost which he sells in the English market in competition with American butter. Why should not the American feed this corn to his own cows and ship the butter instead of the corn? By our constant selling of grains at a low price to the foreigner instead of turning them into finished products, we are placing a club in their hands with which to drive our products out of the world's markets.

A few acres of sweet corn handy to the barn lot will pay well if we have the usual drouth this summer, or rather the short pastures.

CHAPTER V.

THE installation of the adopted stable-boy was thus happily effected, and the wheels of life continued to run smoothly in the Doctor's house. Jean-Marie did his horse and carriage duty in the morning; sometimes helped in the housework; sometimes walked abroad with the Doctor, to drink wisdom from the fountain-head; and was introduced at night to the sciences and the dead tongues. He retained his singular placidity of mind and manner; he was rarely in fault; but he made only a very partial progress in his studies, and remained much of a stranger in the family.

The Doctor was a pattern of regularity. All forenoon he worked on his great book, the "Comparative Pharmacopoeia, or Historical Dictionary of all Medicines," which as yet consisted principally of slips of paper and pins. When finished, it was to fill many personable volumes and to combine antiquarian interest with professional utility. But the Doctor was studious of literary graces and the picturesque; an anecdote, a touch of manners, a moral qualification, or a sounding epithet was sure to be preferred before a piece of science; a little more, and he would have written the "Comparative Pharmacopoeia" in verse! The article "Mummia," for instance, was already complete, though the remainder of the work had not progressed beyond the letter A. It was exceedingly copious and entertaining, written with quaintness and color, exact, erudite, a literary article; but it would hardly have afforded guidance to a practicing physician of to-day. The feminine good sense of his wife had led her to point this out with uncompromising sincerity; for the Dictionary was duly read aloud to her, betwixt sleep and waking, as it proceeded toward an infinitely distant completion; and the Doctor was a little sore on the subject of mummies, and sometimes resented an allusion with asperity.

After the midday meal and a proper period of digestion, he walked, sometimes alone, sometimes accompanied by Jean-Marie; for madam would have preferred any hardship rather than walk.

She was, as I have said, a very busy person, continually occupied about material comforts, and ready to drop asleep over a novel the instant she was disengaged. This was the less objectionable, as she never snored or grew distempered in complexion when she slept. On the contrary, she looked the very picture of luxurious and appetizing ease, and woke without a start to the perfect possession of her faculties. I am afraid she was greatly an animal, but she was a very nice animal to have about. In this way she had little to do with Jean-Marie; but the sympathy which had been established between them on the first night remained unbroken; they held occasional conversations, mostly on household matters; to the extreme disappointment of the Doctor, they occasionally sallied off together to that temple of debasing superstition, the village church; madam and he, both in their Sunday's best, drove twice a month to Fontainebleau and returned laden with purchases; and in short, although the Doctor still continued to regard them as irreconcilably antipathetic, their relation was as intimate, friendly, and confidential as their natures suffered.

I fear, however, that in her heart of hearts, madam kindly despised and pitied the boy. She had no admiration for his class of virtues; she liked a smart, polite, forward, roguish sort of boy, cap in hand, light of foot, meeting the eye; she liked volubility, charm, a little vice—the promise of a second Doctor Desprez. And it was her indefeasible belief that Jean-Marie was dull. "Poor dear boy," she had said once, "how sad it is that he should be so stupid!" She had never repeated that remark, for the Doctor had raged like a wild bull, denouncing the brutal bluntness of her mind, bemoaning his own fate to be so unequally mated with an ass, and, what touched Anastasie more nearly, menacing the table china by the fury of his gesticulations. But she adhered silently to her opinion; and when Jean-Marie was sitting, stolid, blank, but not unhappy, over his unfinished tasks, she would snatch her opportunity in the Doctor's absence, go over to him, put her arms about his neck, lay her cheek to his, and communicate her sympathy with his distress. "Do not mind," she would say; "I, too, am not at all clever, and I can assure you that it makes no difference in life."

The Doctor's view was naturally different. That gentleman never wearied of the sound of his own voice, which was, to say the truth, agreeable enough to hear. He now had a listener, who was not so cynically indifferent as Anastasie, and who sometimes put him on his nettle by the most relevant objections. Besides, was he not educating the boy? And education, philosophers are agreed, is the most philosophical of duties. What can be more heavenly to poor mankind than to have one's hobby grow into a duty to the State? Then, indeed, do the ways of life become ways of pleasantness. Never had the Doctor seen reason to be more content with his endowments. Philosophy flowed smoothly from his lips. He was so agile a dialectician that he could trace his nonsense, when challenged, back to some root in sense, and prove it to be a sort of flower upon his system. He slipped out of antimonies like a fish, and left his disciple marveling at the rabbi's depth.

Moreover, deep down in his heart the Doctor was disappointed with the ill-success of his more formal education. A boy, chosen by so acute an observer for his aptitude, and guided along the path of learning by so philosophic an instructor, was bound, by the nature of the universe, to make a more obvious and lasting advance. Now Jean-Marie was slow in all things, impenetrable in others; and his power of forgetting was fully on a level with his power to learn. Therefore the Doctor cherished his peripatetic lectures, to which the boy attended, which he generally appeared to enjoy, and by which he often profited.

"I lead you," he would say, "by the green pastures. My system, my beliefs, my medicines, are resumed in one phrase—to avoid excess. Blessed nature, healthy, temperate nature, abhors and exterminates excess. Human law, in this matter, imitates at a great distance her provisions; and we must strive to supplement the efforts of the law. Yes, boy, we must be a law to ourselves and for our neighbors—lex armata—armed, emphatic, tyrannous law. If you see a crapulous human ruin snuffing, dash him from his box! The judge, though in a way an admission of disease, is less offensive to me than either the doctor or the priest. Above all the doctor—the doctor and the purulent trash and garbage of his pharmacopoeia! Pure air—from the neighborhood of a pinetum for the sake of the turpentine—unadulterated wine, and the reflections of an unsophisticated spirit in the presence of the works of nature—these, my boy, are the best medical appliances and the best religious comforts. Devote yourself to these. Hark! there are bells of Bourron (the wind is in the north, it will be fair). How clear and airy is the sound! The nerves are harmonized and quieted; the mind attuned to silence; and observe how easily and regularly beats the heart! Your unenlightened doctor would see nothing in these sensations; and yet you yourself perceive they are a part of health.—Did you remember your cinchona this morning? Good. Cinchona also is a work of nature; it is, after all, only the bark of a tree which we might gather for ourselves if we live in the locality.—What a world is this! Though a professed atheist, I delight to bear my testimony to the world. Look at the gratuitous remedies and pleasures that surround our path! The river runs by the garden end, our bath, our fishpond, our natural system of drainage. There is a well in the court which sends up sparkling water from the earth's very heart, clean, cool, and, with a little wine, most wholesome. The district is notorious for salubrity; rheumatism is the only prevalent complaint, and I myself have never had a touch of it. I tell you—and my opinion is based upon the coldest, clearest processes of reason—if I, if you, desired to leave this home of pleasures, it would be the duty, it would be the privilege, of our best friend to prevent us with a pistol bullet."

CHAPTER VI.

ONE beautiful June day they sat upon the hill outside the village. The river, blue as heaven, shone here and there among the foliage. The indefatigable birds turned and flickered about Gretz Church tower. A healthy wind blew from over the forest, and the sound of innumerable thousands of tree-tops and innumerable millions on millions of green leaves was abroad in the air, and filled the ear with something between whispered speech and singing. It seemed as if every blade of grass must hide a cigale; and the fields rang merrily with their music, jingling far and near as with the sleigh-bells of the fairy queen. From their station on the slope the eye embraced a large space of poplared plain upon the one hand, the waving hilltops of the forest on the other, and Gretz itself in the middle, a handful of roofs. Under the bestriding arch of the blue heavens, the place seemed dwindled to a toy. It seemed incredible that people dwelt, and could find room to turn or air to breathe, in such a corner of the world. The thought came home to the boy, perhaps for the first time, and he gave it words.

"How small it looks!" he sighed.

"Ay," replied the Doctor, "small enough now. Yet it was once a walled city; thriving, full of furred burgesses and men in armor, humming with affairs—with tall spires, for aught that I know, and portly towers along the battlements. A thousand chimneys ceased smoking at the curfew-bell. There were gibbets at the gate as thick as scarecrows. In time of war, the assault swarmed against it with ladders, the arrows fell like leaves, the defenders sallied hotly over the drawbridge, each side uttered its cry as they plied their weapons. Do you know that the walls extended as far as the Commanderie? Tradition so reports. Alas, what a long way off is all this confusion—nothing left of it but my quiet words spoken in your ear—and the town itself shrunk to the hamlet underneath us? By-and-by came the English wars—you shall hear more of the English, a stupid people, who sometimes blundered into good—and Gretz was taken, sacked, and burned. It is the history of many towns; but Gretz never rose again; it was never rebuilt; its ruins were a quarry to serve the growth of rivals; and the stones of Gretz are now erect along the streets of Nemours. It gratifies me that our old house was the first to rise after the calamity; when the town had come to an end, it inaugurated the hamlet."

"I, too, am glad of that," said Jean-Marie.

"It should be the temple of humbler virtues," responded the Doctor with a savory gusto. "Perhaps one of the reasons why I love my little hamlet as I do, is that we have a similar history, she and I. Have I told you that I was once rich?"

"I do not think so," answered Jean-Marie. "I do not think I should have forgotten. I am sorry you should have lost your fortune."

"Sorry?" cried the Doctor. "Why, I find I have scarce begun your education after all. Listen to me! Would you rather live in the old Gretz or in the new, free from the alarms of war, with the green country at the door, without noise, passports, the exactions of the soldiery, or the jangle of the curfew-bell to send us off to bed by sundown?"

"I suppose I should prefer the new," replied the boy.

"Precisely," returned the Doctor; "so do I. And, in the same way, I prefer my present moderate fortune to my former wealth. Golden mediocrity! cried the adorable ancients; and I subscribe to their enthusiasm. Have I not good wine, good food, good air, the fields and the forest for my walk, a house, an admirable wife, a boy whom I protest I cherish like a son? Now, if I were still rich, I should indubitably make my residence in Paris—you know Paris—Paris and Paradise are not convertible terms. This pleasant noise of the wind streaming among leaves changed into the grinding Babel of the street, the stupid glare of plaster substituted for this quiet pattern of greens and grays, the nerves shattered, the digestion falsified—picture the fall! Already you perceive the consequences; the mind is stimulated, the heart steps to a different measure, and the man is himself no longer. I have passionately studied myself—the true business of philosophy. I know my character as the musician knows the ventages of his flute. Should I return to Paris, I should ruin myself gambling; nay, I go further—I should break the heart of my Anastasie with infidelities."

This was too much for Jean-Marie. That a place should so transform the most excellent of men transcended his belief. Paris, he protested, was even an agreeable place of residence. "Nor when I lived in that city did I feel much difference," he pleaded.

"What!" cried the Doctor. "Did you not steal when you were there?"

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, April 19.—The senate took up the Indian appropriations bills and agreed to the amendments for two additional judges in the Indian territory. After further consideration the senate passed the Indian appropriation bill, then went into executive session on the arbitration treaty. The proposition to vote on the treaty May 5 at 4 p. m. was agreed to

SENATE.

Washington, April 20.—Morgan discussed briefly his Cuban resolution, and it went over for a week. Mason offered a resolution to limit debate. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed without amendment. Consideration of the bankruptcy bill occupied the remainder of the day.

SENATE.

Washington, April 21.—Mason's resolution directing the committee on rules to report a rule for debate, after speeches by Mason and Hoar, was referred to the committee on rules. After a short executive session the bankruptcy bill was taken up, and an amendment was agreed to omitting public corporations from the operations of the bill.

HOUSE.

The death of Congressman Milliken, of Maine, was announced, and out of respect the house adjourned until to-morrow.

SENATE.

Washington, April 22.—The senate received the nomination of Harold M. Sewall, of Maine, to be minister to Hawaii. Allen introduced a resolution directing the president to express sympathy with Greece in the struggle with Turkey. Morgan made a sensational speech against the disorganized condition of the senate and house committees. Allen proposed a resolution that all legislative business stop until the congressional committees were fully organized. The Nelson bankruptcy bill then came to a vote and passed, 49 to 8. The "free homestead" bill was taken up and debated until the death of Congressman Holman was announced, when, after adopting resolutions of regret at his demise, the senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE.

Indian appropriation bill was taken up and the senate amendments of minor importance were agreed to excepting the removal of the supply department from Chicago to Omaha. The death of Congressman Holman was announced. A resolution expressing the profound regret with which the house heard the announcement of the judge's death was adopted, after which, as a further mark of respect, the house adjourned.

HOUSE.

Washington, April 23.—The house after agreeing to eight of the eighteen amendments to the Indian appropriation bill, passed the bill and sent it to conference. The minor matter of difference was in reference to the opening of the Uncompahgre reservation.

More Trouble for Spalding.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Further degradation was piled upon the head of ex-Banker Charles W. Spalding when the American Trotting Association, of which he has been treasurer for two years, filed suit in the circuit court against him and his bondsmen for $31,000. The action is a suit in debt, the primary amount asked being $25,000, representing the treasurer's bond, and damages of $6,000 being claimed in addition. Spalding is now in jail.

Three-cent Fares Enjoined.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 24.—Judge Showalter, of the United States court, has granted the injunction asked by the Citizens' Street Railway company against the enforcement of the three-cent fare law. The court holds the law unconstitutional, it being a special legislation, applicable only to Indianapolis, and in effect destructive of vested rights.

To Reduce the Tax Eaters.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Mr. Lanham, of Texas, introduced a bill entitled, "To reduce the expenditures of the government, to decrease federal salaries, and to discourage the office seeking crusaders," which provides for a reduction in the number of persons on the roll of the United States 33 1-3 per cent.

Kentucky Senatorship.

FRANKFORT, Ky., August 14.—The republican legislative caucus nominated State Senator W. J. Deboe for United States senator.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, April 23.—Seven patents were issued to Iowa inventors this week; five to Nebraska, and seventy-three to New York. Patents were allowed to Iowa inventors but not yet issued as follows: To J. L. Callahan, of Des Moines, for a copy holder to be attached to the frame of a typewriter to hold copy in any desired position relative to the operator and the light required on the copy. To A. J. Haggin of Eagle Grove, for a light boat composed of separate sections that can be readily put together and a canvass cover stretched thereon, as required for use and also readily taken apart and placed together compactly for storing or carrying about on land. To J. H. Peterson, of Des Moines, for an elastic wheel especially adapted to bicycles and designed to supercede the use of pneumatic tires. In the downward stroke of pedals power is stored in cushioning springs in the wheel to be utilized in advancing the bicycle and diminishing the power required to propel. Our practice is not confined to Iowa. Inventors in other states can can have our services on the same terms as Hawkeyes.

Blood Poison

Confined our son to his bed for five months. The disease left him an object of pity and a great sufferer. He was covered with blotches, and the burning and itching were terrible to bear. A lady told us to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. He began taking it and soon improved. After taking a few bottles he was entirely cured. That was three years ago, and there has been no return of the disease."—S. C. BOYLAN, East Leroy, Mich. Get only

NEW SHRUB THAT IS A REMEDY.

A Sure Cure for Kidney Diseases and Rheumatism.

It is no doubt true that next to consumption, more people die yearly from diseases of the kidneys than from any other cause. In some respects Kidney disease is the most dangerous of all maladies, because it usually has made much progress before the victim is aware of its existence. It is, therefore, with great pleasure we commend to our readers the recent discovery in East India of the Kava-Kava shrub, which has proved a most powerful remedy for diseases of the kidneys, rheumatism, or other ailments caused by uric acid in the blood. The cures wrought by this new remedy are indeed most remarkable. Many who have suffered from the most severe forms of the disease, have been completely cured in from twenty to forty days by the Kava-Kava shrub. In the New York Weekly World of Sept. 10th, the testimony of Rev. W. B. Moore, D. D., of Washington, D. C., was given, describing his years of suffering from Kidney disease and Rheumatism, and his rapid cure by Alkavis. Rev. John H. Watson of Sunset, Texas, a minister of the gospel of thirty years' service, was struck down at his post of duty by Kidney disease. After hovering between life and death for two months, and all his doctors having failed, he took Alkavis, and was completely restored to health and strength and is fulfilling his duties as minister of the gospel. Mr. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorney of Lowell, Indiana, was cured of Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder disease of ten years' standing by Alkavis. Mr. Wood describes himself as being in constant misery, often compelled to rise ten times during the night on account of weakness of the bladder. He was treated by all his home physicians without the least benefit and finally completely cured in a few weeks by Alkavis. The testimony is undoubted and really wonderful. Any of our readers who are so unfortunate as to suffer from Kidney disorders or Rheumatism should write to the Church Kidney Cure Co., of 422 Fourth avenue, New York, who will gladly send them free by mail prepaid a Large Case of the Kava-Kava Compound, so that they can test its value for themselves. This generous free offer is made to prove the wonderful curative powers of this new botanic discovery.

THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 19.—The senate receded from its amendment which made the office of the supreme court reporter appointive and the law in regard to that office now stands just as it has been for years. The senate spent most of its time on the bill in relation to towns and cities, but no action was taken and the bill went over until to-morrow.

HOUSE.

The house held a very brief and uninteresting session. The bill in relation to special charter cities was read, but it went over until to-morrow.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 20.—The conference report on the elections bill was adopted. As the bill now stands the senate section prohibiting fusion remains in its original form, the house having receded from its position. The senate also wins out in the contest over the marking of the ballot. Senate spent most of the day in consideration of the bill relating to cities and towns, but no important action was taken.

HOUSE.

Senate amendment to library bill which took from the governor the power to appoint the librarian was rejected, the house insisting on the old law. Senate substitute for the house bill to abolish the office of state oil inspector was indefinitely postponed. Building and loan bill came up under a motion to reconsider and was amended to permit the auditor to sit with the executive council when considering right of association to do business. The right of appeal to district court was also stricken out.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 21.—Railway companies will be exempt from city taxes on lines running through agricultural and horticultural lands inside cities and incorporated towns, except in tracts of less than ten acres. That was the decision of the senate by a vote of 18 to 23. Senator Garst filed a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to strike out the agricultural exemption to be applied to railroad rights of way had failed to pass.

HOUSE.

Powers introduced a resolution directing the attorney general to make an examination of the report of the Funk investigating committee and if he finds that any funds have been improperly used or the law violated to proceed to collect said money or proceed against the violators criminally. The resolution is aimed at the irregularities said to have existed in connection with the census. It went over. In the afternoon the manufacturing bill came up. An amendment by Martin legalizing the credits of wholesale dealers only was adopted, the senate amendments were agreed to, and the bill then passed, 55 to 41.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 22.—Senate voted to reconsider the vote by which the senate yesterday decided to exempt from municipal taxation lines of railroad running through acreage tracts within the extended limits of cities and towns and by a vote of 26 to 16 declined to grant the exceptions. An amendment by Hotchkiss making saloon keepers ineligible to office was defeated. The liquor bill with the manufacturing amendment was reported and the senate at once agreed to the house amendment making debts of wholesale dealers only collectable. The bill now goes to the governor.

HOUSE.

The bill for the editing, annotating, publication and printing and binding of the proposed new code was taken up by the house and passed after several hours of entertaining discussion.

SENATE.

Des Moines, March 23.—The corporations that begin business in Iowa in the future will have to submit their articles for approval to the attorney general if the senate bill passes. The attorney general is simply to pass only upon the legality of the business. The senate refused to except creameries and farmers' mutual insurance associations from paying $25 incorporation fee. The general bill relating to cities and towns was finished and passed by the senate. The special charter cities bill has not been finally disposed of.

HOUSE.

The bill pertaining to notes and bills was taken up and passed. The banking bill was called up and the house refused to concur in the senate amendment relating to eligibility of shareholders to directorship, and in many other particulars. A resolution was adopted urging Iowa's congressional delegation to support a resolution now pending in congress making cigarettes shipped into any state subject to the laws of that state.

SENATE.

Des Moines, April 24.—Conference report on the fish and game bill was adopted. The bill provides that the Iowa fisherman is to be allowed the use of trap lines in streams, providing that he does not use more than one line between May 15th and December 1st, and that not more than half way across the stream. Work on the corporations bill was taken up. An amendment was adopted providing that in suits brought by creditors against stockholders to recover unpaid installments, the stockholder shall be liable for the difference between the amount he has paid and the face value of the stock. The bill passed. The house having refused to pass the senate bill abolishing the office of state oil inspector, the senate committee prepared a new bill and introduced it this morning. It passed without opposition. The bill does away with the state oil inspector and places the department under the supervision of the executive council.

HOUSE.

The house met and received bills messaged from the senate, which were referred to the proper committees, after which adjournment was taken till 2 o'clock Monday.

Inheritance Tax Bill Passed.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 23.—The senate to-day passed the bill taxing inheritances. The assembly had already passed the bill.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The famous Bohemian quartet will not visit America this season, as at first intended.

Mrs. Corrine Moore Lawson has just returned to New York from a successful western trip, including recitals at Baltimore, St. Louis and Cleveland.

Miss Geraldine Morgan, the violinist will leave for Europe in May, and will play in some of the principal cities abroad, including London and Berlin.

Miss Sibyl Sanderson and Van Dyck the tenor, have been received coldly at St. Petersburg, their voices not being strong enough to fill the Imperial Marie Theater.

Mme. Carrena is a singer as well as a pianist, and has sung in Italian opera with Tietjens in London, and in New York made a successful debut as Zerlina in "Don Giovanni." She is said to be a gracious woman and charming conversationalist.

A fragment of an opera begun by Wagner in 1833 and never finished called "Die Hochzeit," has been bought by an English woman for $500. Wagner wrote the libretto and composed an introduction, a chorus, and a septet but stopped, as his sister did not like the plot.

Mr. Anton Seidl was presented with a massive silver loving cup by his fellow members of the Lotus Club of New York at their last "Saturday Night." Mr. Seidl will direct one or more performances of "Parsifal," at Bayreuth this summer if the date of the rehearsals do not conflict with his duties at Covent Garden, London.

Rosenthal has concluded not to play in America again this season. He will sail for Europe in the middle of April, and retire to his country house in Abbazzio. He will go to London during the season in June for a limited number of concerts, remain in Switzerland during the summer and return to the United States in September.

Henry Marteau is now playing through Switzerland and the southern part of France with great success. The press ranks him among the foremost violinists of the time, and crowded audiences greet him everywhere with enthusiasm. He is particularly praised for his finished technic, charming tone and mature style. He is working up on a new repertory for his American tour next year.

Z—Why, of course. I want to protect the flies.

A LETTER TO WOMEN

From Mrs. James Corrigan.

For seventeen years I have suffered. Periods were so very painful that I would have to go to the doctor every month.

He said that I had an enlargement of the womb, and told my husband that I must undergo an operation, as I had tumors in the womb, and it was a case of life or death.

I was operated upon twice, but it did not seem to do me any good, it made me very weak. I was troubled with the leucorrhœa a great deal.

I also suffered with the sick headache, vomiting spells, backache all the time, terrible pain in my left side, chills, loss of appetite, and could not sleep nights. After taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, some Liver Pills, and using your Sanative Wash, I recovered.

I can eat well, and every one that sees me tells me I am a different person. I can do all my own work, sleep well and feel well. I am growing stronger every day, and am able to go out and enjoy a walk and not feel all tired out when I return, as I used to. I doctored for sixteen years, and in all those years I did not feel as well as I do at the present time. I wish that every woman that is troubled as I was, would try that medicine. Oh! it is so good to feel well, and it is all owing to Mrs. Pinkham's kind advice and medicine. —MRS. JAMES CORRIGAN, 284 Center St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.
